PROVIDENTIAL ESCAPE OF EAST BOUND PASSENGERS

Mishap to Engine of Early Morning Train Shortly After Leaving Peterboro

Passengers on the 1.28 a.m. C.P.R. train were given a bad scare Monday morning, when the emergency brakes were suddenly thrown on and the train stopped about three miles from the city.

A large pin holding one of the driving bars had broken, with the result that the bar on either side of the locomotive flew from its place, smashing parts of the engine to pieces.

The engineer held his nerve and applied the emergency brakes. This was the cause of passengers being hurled against seats, but no injuries were reported.

The auxiliary from Havelock was summoned, and after several hours' delay, the damaged engine and the passenger coaches were hauled to Havelock, when another engine was secured and the run continued.

One of the passengers, who has since returned from the east, states that it was nothing short of a miracle that the engine remained on the tracks and the incident passed without injuries or death.

BOMBS FROM AEROPLANE.

DIDIER MASSON

Didier Masson, a French aviator, with the Mexican rebels, demonstrated the utility of the aeroplane in battle. He forced the federal fleet in the Bay of Guayamas out to sea by dropping bombs on the decks. He then flew to the battlefield at Ortiz and dropped bombs on the federal troops in the trenches. In one trench his bombs killed fifty-two soldiers. Masson also gave valuable advice in regard to the position of the federal troops to the rebel commander. Masson is now the hero of the Mexican army and the rebels are claiming the victory at Ortiz decisive.

57th REGIMENT HAD ONE OF THE BEST TRIPS IN THE HISTORY OF THEIR ANNUAL CAMPS

With the 41st of Brockville, the Local Regiment Battled Against Opposing Forces at Kingston Mills—No. 2 Co., Won Tug-of-war in Sporting Events

The 57th Regiment returned home this morning after a three days' trip to Kingston where they held one of the most instructive outings in the history of their many trips.

The regiment left Peterborough on Saturday afternoon arriving in Harrowsmith on the same evening about 8.30. After a good hearty supper, the regiment bivouaced for the night.

On Sunday morning church parade was held on the grounds at 10 o'clock, the chaplain of the 41st Regiment officiating at the service.

The regiment then marched to Glenvale where they bivouaced for the night.

On Monday the regiments marched to Collins Bay. Tuesday being the last day, the regiments started for their objective point, Kingston Mills, where the sham battle took place between the white forces which consisted of the 67th of Peterborough and 41st of Brockville, and the green forces made up of the 14th of Kingston and the 15th of Belleville. The battle ended in a draw, both armies showing clever work.

After the battle Lt.-Col. Cunningham, of the 14th of Kingston, gave a brief description of the green's manoeuvres, while Lt.-Col. Buell, of the 41st Regiment, gave a short talk on the work of the whites. Both talks were very interesting and instructive to the men. Major Horden, of the Divisional Forces, commended the work of the regiments. The bicycle corps were very prominent in the work and desire great praise.

SPORTS FOR THE MEN.

No. 2 Co., of the 57th, won the tug of war contest between teams of the four regiments. An excellent program of sports was also carried out.

The men had a slight taste of the frontier life when on Monday night a thunderstorm forced them to pitch their tents in a hurry. Although the weather was very warm the men suffered no serious results.

AN ACCIDENT.

While getting ready to march to Kingston to take the train home a private in No. 3 Co. of the local regiment, sprained his ankle and had to be brought to Kingston in the ambulance.

NO CHANGE IN THE HOURS IN WHICH WATER MAY BE USED FOR LAWNS

At a meeting of the Water Commissioners Monday afternoon, it was decided that the present hours for the use of water would remain in force, and that a young man be employed to carry out new regulations. He will patrol the city, and on finding that water is being used for lawns in hours other than those prescribed, he will serve a card of warning.

A second offence will mean a summons to the Police Court. The superintendent was instructed to conduct a water service on James street, East City.

SETTLEMENT OF $250,000 IN BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT

Marquis of Notthampton Promised to Wed Dazy Markham an Actress but His Father Said no

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, July 2.—When the breach of promise suit of the well known actress, Dazy Markham, against the Marquis of Notthampton, until recently Earl Compton, was called in the High Court of Justice this morning, it was announced that the case had been settled by the defendant paying the plaintiff a quarter of a million dollars, and all of the enormous costs on both sides.

It was admitted that the defendant admitted the engagement, which was broken off at the command of his father.

REV. R. G. PEEVER'S FAREWELL TO OTTAWA CONGREGATION

NEW PASTOR AT GEORGE ST. CHURCH

OTTAWA, July 1.—After a busy pastorate of four years in McLeod Methodist church, Rev. R. G. Peever preached his farewell sermons Sunday and despite the heat large numbers turned out to both services.

At the morning service he referred to his work during the past four years and thanked the different workers for their assistance. The choir was especially thanked, and future success wished its members. The choir rendered special music at both services.

Both of his farewell services could hardly be called farewell ones, for they contained a thought for the future work. He prayed that they would exert themselves for the cause of Jesus Christ.

Before beginning his evening sermon the text of which was from St. Mathew's gospel 5;13, he said that when he started his pastorate four years ago he had promised his congregation a warm time, they had got it, he thought, and he hoped his successor would start out a little cooler.

The text was taken from the verse, "Ye are the salt of the earth," and Mr. Peever touched on the uses of the salt in Christian people and the church. "Ye are the salt of the earth," should be a text to build up the aggregate life of the community and congregation. It should also have a communicative effect for righteousness. He likened the losing of the savor, of salt to the losing of character in men. His desire was that Christian men and women toil for righteousness their marvellous faith. His prayer he said, was that the ideals of the McLeod street church never be lowered, and that its doors stand for the evangelization of all who enter them.

A large number waited at the conclusion of the evening service to bid farewell to Mr. Peever, who goes to Peterborough this week. His successor Rev. I. Couch, of Peterborough, is expected to arrive this week and will preach his first sermon next Sunday.

NEW BELL FOR ST. LUKES CHURCH HAS ARRIVED

"This Bell Replaces the Bell Given by the Sunday School in 1877-1913"

The new church bell for St. Luke's Church, which will be in place for next Sunday, has arrived and may be seen on the church grounds. The bell will probably be put up on Friday. The bell was cast by the firm of McNeeley & Co., West Troy, N. Y., and has the following inscription: "This bell replaces the bell given by the Sunday School Scholars in 1877. July, 1913." The painting and decorating of the interior of the church are progressing in a very satisfactory manner, and all the members of the congregation are looking forward to the re-opening of the church next Sunday, when the 87th anniversary will be celebrated.

PREACHERS IN CANADA DO NOT GET PRINCELY SALARIES

Archdeacon Cody of Toronto Gets the Highest Salary In Canada.

"The man who is set on making his fortune need not think of entering the ministry," said a Toronto clergyman to The Star Weekly. And a little enquiry into the facts shows that he was quite right. In the Dominion—unlike the Old Country, where (in the Anglican Church) the income of one prelate is $75,000, and that of two others $50,000, while a large number of other bishops and pastors receive an annual $25,000 and over—there are no big pecuniary plums for the preacher. There are not a dozen clergymen in the whole of Canada whose official stipends are of the amount of $5,000 annually. The number of those whose incomes are between $4,000 and $5,000 a year does not exceed a score or so, while less than forty-five get anything between three and four thousand dollars a year. That is to say that, of all the clergy of all denominations, in the whole of Canada there are considerably less than eighty who are in receipt of a stipend of three thousand dollars a year or over. There is certainly no other profession or business in the country which does not offer both immensely more numerous and also immensely richer prizes as the result of labor. And, in a day when ministers are not seldom rather unfairly criticized on the ground that their minds are too centred on mundane affairs, it is well to bear in mind the fact that, at least, their calling does not afford them the opportunity of heaping up riches.

The clergyman who draws the largest salary of any in Canada is Archdeacon Cody, of St. Paul's, Toronto. His stipend has lately been raised to $8,000 a year by a congregation which has, for long, found his ministrations markedly acceptable. If, with his great gifts—and, in particular, his faculty of clear thought and clear speech—he had embraced the profession of the law, he would probably be making an income of double or treble that figure. The next highest ministerial stipend in the Dominion is drawn by Rev. R. Bruce Taylor, of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Montreal, who receives $7,300 a year. Outside the Anglican, Presbyterian, and Congregational churches, it may be noted, there are no salaries of $5,000 and over paid. Besides Mr. Bruce Taylor, four other Presbyterian clergymen are in receipt of annual stipends of $5,000 and over. Two of these minister in Toronto, namely, the Rev. John McNeill, the newly appointed pastor of Cooke's Church, who receives $5,500 — his predecessor got a little more than half that sum —and Dr. Neil, of Westminster Church, whose annual stipend is $5,000. The remaining Presbyterian ministers with "plums" are Dr. Du Val, of Knox Church, Winnipeg, who receives $5,500 a year, and the Rev. Dr. Herridge, of St. Andrew's, Ottawa, who gets a like sum. On enquiry at the Synod House, The Star Weekly was informed that there is no compilation giving the figures of the incomes of the clergy of the Anglican Church in Canada, as a whole. But, in the diocese of Toronto, there are two other Anglican clergymen, in addition to Archdeacon Cody, whose official incomes are of the amount of $5,000 a year and over. These are the Bishop of Toronto, whose annual stipend is $5,000, with an allowance of $500 a year for traveling expenses, and Canon Plumptre, of St. James' Cathedral, who is also in receipt of an annual $5,000, and enjoys the use of a very nice rectory. There are probably not more than three other Anglican clergymen in Canada whose official incomes amount to $5,000.

Of the twenty or so ministers who receive an income of over $4,000 and under $5,000 a year, some six or seven are, it is estimated, Anglicans, and eight are Presbyterian ministers.

Too Many Orphans Now.

Recently, The Renfrew Journal pointed out that any increase of the number of children brought out from the orphanages of Great Britain was undesirable. Dr. Bruce Smith, inspector of Hospitals and Charities for Ontario, gives strong endorsation to this view. "We are yearly in Canada providing comfortable homes for hundreds of children brought out from the orphanages of Great Britain, while keeping many of our native-born young Canadians housed up in our institutions." The Renfrew Journal says it would like to see every child in the whole wide world well cared for and in a good home, but believes that emphasis should be laid on the duty that Canadians owe to their own country and their own country's children. "Until Canada can attend properly to its own neglected children it would be folly for this land to take up any further of the burden of other lands' neglected children."

It's a pretty good fault for a woman's elbow to be sharper than her tongue.

THE WAY WE CELEBRATE

The way in which a nation celebrates its national holidays may be taken to indicate to a very large degree its temperament and character.

The Englishman is stolid and takes his pleasures a little sadly, so it has been said. But he leaves his patriotism, for the most part, to be taken for granted, except on very special occasions of national crisis or danger when he comes forth in all his war-paint.

They do things somewhat differently in the States. Independence Day has generally been used by Americans not only to celebrate the great anniversary of the gaining of the national freedom, but chiefly to demonstrate the fact that they live in a land of liberty, where every man can do as he likes. But even the volatile American is being tamed by time and the fatalities of Independence Day are less than they used to be.

How does the Canadian celebrate Dominion Day? There is more of the British stoicism in him than of American enthusiasm, and he, while he does not parade his patriotism nevertheless while he takes his trip out to the lakes or seeks the cool shades of the woodland, he feels in his heart that he can enjoy all these good things because he is a Canadian. He is proud to be a son of so glorious a land, and he makes the best of it and says nothing or very little about it. It is his to take or leave. He would only recognize its priceless value were he deprived of it.

OUR INDIAN NAMES

"The Canadian" tells the story of an English boy who was disappointed on coming out to this country at not finding more Indians.

There still remains in the minds of the young people of the homeland the delusion that great stretches of this continent are inhabited by Indians in the wild state.

The country will disappoint the romantic tastes of the little Englishman; but few Canadians regret the disappearance of the wild-west and are content to relegate the wild red-man to the regions of history and romance.

The Red-man like their Japanese relatives are fast becoming indistinguishable from the rest of the civilized world, and are taking their place in national life and becoming good and useful citizens.

No doubt some of the names of Canadian cities and villages have a great deal to do with this delusion. "Medicine Hat" is certainly very suggestive to the average boy whose mental food consists of "Wild-West" and "blood and thunder" literature, and it must be a great disappointment for the boy adventurer to discover upon arriving in these Canadian cities with Indian names that there are modern newspapers, real estate offices, barbers, and shoe-shine establishments. If a joke be permitted at our own expense, it might be said that the barbarians have had to yield up the land to the barbers.

A JAP PERIL

The driving out of a party of Coreans from a Californian town by the residents is a serious international matter. These Coreans are subjects of Japan now, and have their rights. Japan undoubtedly will insist that they be allowed their rights, and the United States must protect them. But if the people of California arise as a body and deny their Asiatic residents such rights, what is the outcome? The Federal authority is likely to be helpless? It can make excuses, but is powerless without making a civil war, to enforce the demands of international right. The California incident has made the Jap trouble immensely more acute, and it would not be impossible that it may lead to a very serious estrangement between Japan and the United States. In such a case, Britain's position would undoubtedly be that of mediator. Britain would again have to step in between clashing nations, and by its power and good will toward both sides smooth the controversy over. While an ally of Japan, Britain is very friendly with the United States. It would require the services of Sir Edward Grey, Europe's foremost statesman, and a really great figure, to straighten out a difficult situation. It was Sir Edward Grey's influence in the Balkan affair that saved a general war, and it may be his influence again which preserves the World peace. Japan would have every reason for refusing to let its temper get heated.

Incredible Wealth.

The Rothschild fortune amounts to $2,000,000,000, according to the estimate of an industrious Frenchman. Placed at four per cent. this would produce an annual revenue of $80,000,000. But this sum is far from being a realty, as the great part of the Rothschild riches is in property. In Lancashire they own immense thread mills, while in Germany they possess numerous coal mines with a capacity of millions of tons per annum. In Brazil the Rothschilds own immense rubber forests, and in Persia factories where the most beautiful carpets in the world are made.

In Spain there are numerous zinc and lead mines operated by the Rothschilds. In South Africa also the Rothschilds own mines. The Rothschilds, in addition, own large forests in Siberia, while in Australia entire cities are their property. They also own large quantities of real estate in the different European capitals.

HOME COURSE IN FRUITS AND BERRIES

THE FIRST SEASON WITH THE PEACH ORCHARD.

By MAURICE A. BLAKE of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station.

THE selection of the site for the orchard is one of the first considerations in the planting of a peach orchard, and a very important one, for it may mean success or failure according to the character of the soil, exposure and elevation which is chosen.

Most fruit growers realize the importance of selecting a site which is somewhat elevated above the surrounding land level. A site which is severely exposed to strong prevailing winds, however, should be avoided, as the young trees are likely to be blown over or loosened from the soil during the first season of growth. If one plans to develop extensive orchards he should choose a site that will permit of uniform and economical development and avoid areas with distinct irregularities.

Selection of a Site.

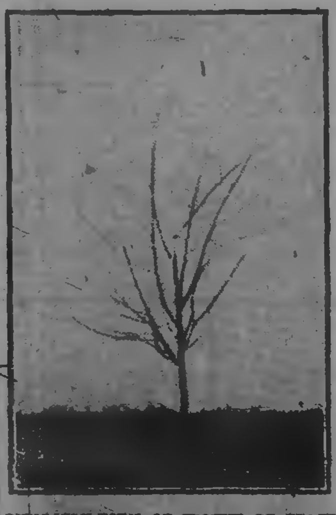
The selection of a site also involves the selection of the soil, and this is of the greatest importance. The peach will succeed on a great variety of soils, but a well drained sandy loam is considered best. The adaptability of the surface soil for peach growing is much modified by the character of the subsoil and underlying strata. Some of the heavier loams and even soils containing some clay may be made to produce fine peaches if the subsoil is porous and affords good drainage. The better so called "chestnut soils" are well adapted to peaches, and the trees live longer than upon the sandy soils.



DESIRABLE FORM OF GROWTH BY PEACH TREES HEADED ABOUT TWO FEET HIGH WHEN SET.

The purchase of trees for peach growing is a troublesome and puzzling one to many fruit growers.

In a general way it makes very little difference where the trees are grown if they are well grown and are free from injurious insects and diseases. Some believe that peach trees grown in the south and set in a locality a considerable distance to the north are likely to start into growth too early in the spring, but this will not be the case, even the first year, if the trees are properly handled. Temperature largely determines the time when the trees will start into growth. The top of a peach tree may be placed in a greenhouse in winter and brought into bloom with the roots frozen solidly outside, or the roots may be kept warm in the greenhouse and the top exposed outside, with the result that the portion of the trunk inside will send out new growths, while the part exposed to low temperature will remain dormant.

One should aim to avoid buying trees which are grown in a locality where any serious disease, such as peach yellows or root gall, is known to be established. It is very desirable also to secure trees free from scale, but this is not as important as the diseases mentioned, as the scale can be controlled by proper spraying, and this operation will be necessary each year, even if stock free from scale is set.

Do not order trees from an agent who represents a firm of whose reliability you are not certain, and it is better in any case to order directly from the nurseryman.

When to Order Trees.

Trees are graded by nurserymen in two ways—by height and by caliper. The height is measured from the point where the tree was budded, and the caliper is the diameter of the trunk three inches "above the bud." The latter is the more accurate and better system of grading.

Ordering the trees is a matter which is often neglected until a short time before the trees are actually needed for planting. This is a serious mistake. One should decide upon the varieties and the number of trees to be planted, and the trees should be ordered not later than February.

If there is no local nursery where good trees can be obtained write to some reliable grower and ask him if he can supply you. You will then receive a reply as to whether the trees desired can be supplied, and if so you can place your order. If you are planning to purchase a considerable number of trees a good method is to order by samples by requesting the nurseryman to ship you samples of the kinds of trees you desire. Always order a few more trees than you actually need. This will permit of discarding any poor or injured ones.

Have your trees shipped to arrive a considerable time in advance of the day or week in which they are to be set and "heel them in." You will then have your trees at hand ready to set when the conditions for planting are best. If one understands "heeling them in" properly, so they will not be damaged during the winter, it is a good practice to purchase the trees in the fall.

As soon as the trees arrive from the nurseryman they should be unpacked to note their condition. If the trees are dry the roots should be placed in water for a time until the bark on the trunk and branches of the trees regains its full, bright appearance. If the soil is in workable condition when the trees arrive they should be taken to the proposed site of the orchard and pruned and heeled in. They will then be near at hand when needed for planting.

Proper Height to "Cut Back."

Two to two and one-half feet above the bud is about the proper height to "cut back" peach trees for planting. Good trees can be formed when cut back to eighteen inches, but anything more severe than this is not to be recommended.

Sometimes the roots of peach trees which have been grown upon sandy soil show an infestation of black peach aphides or plant lice. These are likely to check seriously the growth of the trees where they are planted upon the sandy soils, and it is recommended that the roots of infested trees be dipped in a solution of whale oil soap at the rate of one pound to three to four gallons of water. One of the soluble oils for killing scale would also probably be a safe dipping solution made up at the rate of one part of oil to sixteen or eighteen parts of water. The writer has used lime-sulphur successfully for this work, but other authorities have reported injury from this material, so, if tried, it should be used with caution.

As early as the soil is in proper condition to work in the spring the site of the orchard should be well plowed and thoroughly harrowed. Make the land as level as conditions permit and avoid leaving any "dead furrows." In other words, prepare the land as thoroughly for peach trees as for a crop of potatoes or one of the truck crops.

The importance of early preparation of the land after it is in workable condition cannot be overemphasized. It remains much more moist, and the trees have much more favorable conditions in which to begin growth. If the land is plowed late it is often dried out, and the trees do not find the most favorable moisture conditions.

This is an important feature and one which will show the results of good or poor judgment during the whole lifetime of the orchard. There are various systems of tree planting, but the most common and the one to be generally recommended for peaches is the setting of the trees in squares.

Directions For Planting.

Three is a good number to make up a planting gang—two men to set and a boy or man to drop the trees. If the planting is done upon a bright day the roots of the trees should be kept covered with a piece of moist burlap or similar material as they are carried out to be set, and only a few trees should be dropped ahead of the men who are setting. If the weather is dull and rainy at planting time a considerable number of trees may be dropped ahead of the men who are planting, and the man who does the distributing can also assist in setting.

If the land is well furrowed out where the trees are to be planted it will only be necessary to move from two to four shovelfuls of soil in order to make a hole of sufficient width and depth to receive each tree. One man should then hold the tree in place while the other shovels in some of the loose, moist surface soil about the roots.

Most any vegetable crop may be grown between the trees the first summer without damage to the orchard, and it usually proves to be an indirect benefit. The truck crop is likely to receive attention in the form of good cultivation, and this is of much value to the trees. Where the orchard is not planted with some marketable crop the cultivation is seldom as well done.

Such crops as tomatoes, sweet potatoes, melons, sweet corn and bush lima beans may be grown successfully in the young peach orchard and under average conditions will at least pay the cost of the cultivation of the orchard for that season.

Caution In Summer Pruning.

Unless the young peach trees are upon fertile soil and are making a rapid growth it is best not to practice any summer pruning the first season.

In the past there have been too many orchard failures that could have been prevented, and too many such failures are occurring today. Lack of thorough cultivation is responsible for more partial and complete failures than any other one thing, not even excepting peach yellows, little peach or scale.

The peach orchard should be kept thoroughly cultivated from early spring until midsummer, when a cover crop should be grown. It cannot be left without cultivation for a single season without incurring temporary and permanent injury.

One must spray the trees thoroughly each year before the buds open with a good lime-sulphur mixture to control the scale and leaf curl.

CY WHITTAKER'S PLACE

By JOSEPH C. LINCOLN

Copyright, 1908, by D. Appleton & Co.

"I come for my rights!" shouted Mr. Thomas.

"Yes? Well, this ain't state prison or I'd give 'em to you with pleasure. Heman, you'd better do the talkin'. We'll probably get ahead faster."

The honorable cleared his throat and waved his hand.

"Cyrus," he began, "you are my boyhood friend and my fellow townsman and neighbor. Under such circumstances it gives me pain—"

"Then don't let us discuss painful subjects. Let's get down to business. You've come to rescue Bos'n—Emily, that is—from the 'robbers'—I'm quotin' Deacon Thomas here—that's got her, so's to turn her over to her sorrowin' father. Is that it? Yes? Well, you can't have her—not yet."

"Cyrus," said Mr. Atkins, "I'm sorry to see that you take it this way. You haven't the shadow of a right. We have the law with us, and your conduct will lead us to invoke it. The constable is outside. Shall I call him in?"

"Uncle Bedny" was the town constable and had been once before the war. The purely honorary office was given him each year as a joke. Captain Cy grinned broadly, and even Tad was obliged to smile.

"Don't be inhuman, Heman," urged the captain. "You wouldn't turn me over to be manhandled by Uncle Bedny, would you?"

"This is not a humorous affair"— began the congressman with dignity. But the "bereaved father" had been prospecting on his own hook, and now he peeped into the sitting room.

"Here she is!" he shouted. "I see her! Come on, Emilie! Your dad's come for you. Let go of her, you woman! What do you mean by holdin' on to her?"

The situation, which was "not humorous," immediately became much less so. The next minute was a lively one. It ended as Mr. Thomas was picked up by Tad from the floor, where he had fallen, having been pushed violently over a chair by Captain Cy. Bos'n, frightened and sobbing, was clinging wildly to Miss Dawes, who had clung just as firmly to her. The captain's voice rang through the room.

"That's enough," he said. "That's enough and some over. Atkins, take that feller out this house and off my premises. As for the girl, that's for us to fight out in the courts. I'm her guardian, lawfully appointed, and you nor nobody else can touch her while that appointment's good. Here it is, right here. Now look at it and clear out!"

He held for the congressman's inspection the document which, inclosed in the long envelope, had been received that morning. His visit to Ostable, made some weeks before, had been for the purpose of applying to the probate court for the appointment as Emily's guardian. He had applied before the news of her father's coming to life reached him. The appointment itself had arrived just in time.

Mr. Atkins studied the document.

"Humph!" he grunted. "Humph! I see. Well, sir, I have some influence in this section, and I shall see how long your—your trick will prevent the child's going where she belongs. I wish you to understand that I shall continue this fight to the very last."

"Yup. So I've heard. Well, Heman, I ain't as well up in tricks as you claim to be, nor my stockin' isn't as well padded as yours maybe. But while there's a ten cent piece left in the toe of it I'll fight you and the skunk whose 'rights' you seem to have taken such a shine to—and, after that, while there's a lawyer that'll trust me. And meantime that little girl stays right here, and you touch her if you dare, any of you! Anything more to say?"

But the honorable's dignity had returned. Possibly he thought he had said too much already. A moment later the door banged behind the discomforted boarding party.

Captain Cy pulled his beard and laughed.

"Well, we repelled 'em, didn't we?" he observed. "But, as friend Heman says, the beginnin's only begun. I wish he hadn't seen you here, teacher."

Miss Dawes looked up from the task of stroking poor Bos'n's hair.

"I don't," she said. "I'm glad of it." Then she added, laughing nervously: "Cap'n Whittaker, how could you be so cool? It was like a play. I declare you were just splendid!"

CHAPTER XIV.

BAYPORT was boiling over with rumor and surmise. Heman had appealed to the courts, asking that Captain Cy's appointment as Bos'n's guardian be rescinded. Cy had hired Lawyer Peabody of Ostable to look out for his interests.

Angeline Phinney was having the time of her life. The perfect boarding house hummed like a fly trap. Keturah and Mrs. Tripp had deserted to the enemy, and the minority—meaning Asaph and Bailey—had little opportunity to defend their friend's cause, even if they had dared. Heman Atkins, his Christian charity and high mindedness, his devotion to duty regardless of political consequences and the magnificent speech at town meeting were lauded and exalted. The Bayport Breeze contained a full account of the meeting, and it was read aloud by Keturah amid hymns of praise from the elect.

Up at the Cy Whittaker place the days were full ones. There also legal questions were discussed with Georgianna, the board of strategy, Josiah Dimick occasionally and more infrequently still Miss Dawes as participants with Captain Cy in the discussions. Rumors were true in so far as they related to Mr. Atkins' appeal to the courts and the captain's retaining Lawyer Peabody of Ostable. Mr. Peabody's opinion of the case was not encouraging.

"You see, captain," he said when his client visited him at his office, "the odds are very much against us. The court appointed you as guardian with the understanding that this man Thomas was dead. Now he is alive and claims his child. More than that, he has the most influential politician in this county back of him. We wouldn't stand a fighting chance except for one thing—Thomas himself. He left his wife and the baby; deserted them, so she said; went to get work, he says. We can prove he was a drunken blackguard before he went and that he has been drunk since he came back. But they'll say—Atkins and his lawyer—that the man was desperate and despairing because of your refusal to give him his child. They'll hold him up as a repentant sinner anxious to reform and needing the little girl's influence to help keep him straight. That's their game, and they'll play it—be sure of that. It sounds reasonable enough, too, for sinners have repented before now. And the long lost father coming back to his child is the one sure thing to win applause from the gallery—you know that."

"DON'T GIVE UP THE SHIP."

Captain Cy nodded.

He stopped, rose and, striding over to the window, stood looking out.

"How does she feel about it herself?" asked Peabody.

"Her? Bos'n? Why, that's the hardest of all. Some of the children at school pester her about her father. I don't know's you can blame 'em—young ones are made that way, I guess—but she comes home to me cryin', and it's 'Oh, Uncle Cy, he ain't my truly father, is he?' and 'You won't let him take me away from you, will you?' till it seems as if I should fly out of the window. The poor little thing! And that puffed up bumbug Atkins blowin' about his Christianity and all! I've seen heathen Injuns, who never heard of Christ, with more of His spirit inside 'em. There! I've shocked you, I guess. Sometimes I think this place is too narrer and cramped for me. I've been around, you know, and my New England bringin' up has wore thin in spots. Seem's if I must get somewheres and spread out or I'll bust."

He threw himself into a chair. The lawyer clapped him on the shoulder.

"There, there, captain," he said. "Don't 'bust' yet awhile. Don't give up the ship. If we lose in one court we can appeal to another, and so on up the line. And meantime we'll do a little investigating of friend Thomas' career since he left Concord. I've written to a legal acquaintance of mine in Butte, giving him the facts as we know them and a description of Thomas. He will try to find out what the fellow did in his years out west. It's our best chance, as I told you. Keep your pluck up and wait and see."

The captain repeated this conversation to the board of strategy when he returned to Bayport. Miss Dawes had walked home from school with Bos'n and had stopped at the house to hear the report. She listened, but it was evident that something else was on her mind.

"Captain Whittaker," she asked, "has it ever struck you as queer that Mr. Atkins should take such an interest in this matter? He is giving time and counsel and money to help this man Thomas, who is a perfect stranger to him. Why does he do it?"

Captain Cy smiled.

"Why?" he repeated. "Why, to down me, of course. I was gettin' too everlastin' prominent in politics to suit him. I'd got you in as teacher, and I had Lonzo Snow as good as licked for school committee. Goodness knows what I might have run for next, 'cordin' to Heman's reasonin', and I simply had to be smashed. It worked all right. I'm so unhealthy now in the sight of most folks in this town that I cal'late they go home and sulphur smoke their clothes after they meet me, so's not to catch my wickedness."

But the teacher shook her head.

"That doesn't seem reason enough to me," she declared. "Just see what Mr. Atkins has done. He never openly advocated anything in town meeting before. You said so yourself. Even when he must have realized that you had the votes for committeeman he kept still. He might have taken many of them from you by simply coming out and declaring for Mr. Snow, but he didn't. And then all at once he takes this astonishing stand. Captain Whittaker, Mr. Tidditt says that the night of Emily's birthday party you and he told who she was by accident and that Mr. Atkins seemed very much surprised and upset. Is that so?"

Captain Cy laughed.

"His lemonade was upset. That's all I noticed special. Oh, yes! And he lost his hat off goin' home. But what of it? What are you drivin' at now?"

"I was wondering if—if it could be that for some reason Mr. Atkins had a spite against Emily or her people or if he had any reason to fear her."

"Fear! Fear Bos'n? Oh, my, that's funny! You've been readin' novels, I'm afraid, teacher, though I didn't suspect it of you."

He laughed heartily. Miss Dawes smiled, too, but she still persisted.

"Well," she said, "I don't know. Perhaps it is because I'm a woman and politics doesn't mean as much to me as to you men, but to me political reasons don't seem strong enough to account for such actions as those of Mr. Atkins. Emily's mother was a Thayer, wasn't she? And the Thayers once lived in Orham. I wish we could find out more about them while they lived there."

Asaph Tidditt pulled his beard thoughtfully.

"Well," he observed, "I was kind of cal'latin' to go to Orham next week on a little visit. Seth Wingate over there—Barzilla Wingate's cousin, Whit—is a sort of relation of mine. Seth's been Orham town clerk about as long as I've been the Bayport one, and he's lived there all his life. What he don't know about Orham folks ain't wuth knowin'. If you say so I'll pump him about the Thayers and the Richards."

So it was settled that Mr. Wingate should be subjected to the "pumping" process when Asaph visited him. He departed for this visit the following week and remained away for ten days. Meanwhile several things happened in Bayport.

One of these things was the farewell of the Hon. Heman Atkins. Congress was to open at Washington, and the honorable heeded the call of duty. Alicia and the housekeeper went with him, and the big house was closed for the winter.

And on the day following Mr. Thomas, the prodigal father, also left town. A position in Boston had been offered him, he said, and he felt that he must accept it.

"Position offered him! Um—ya-as!" quoth Dimick, the cynical, in conversation with Captain Cy. "Inspector of sidewalks, I shouldn't wonder. Well, please don't ask me if I think Heman sent him to Boston so's to have him out of the way and 'cause he'd feel consider'ble safer than if he was loose down here. Don't ask me that, for, with my strict scruples against the truth I might say no. As it is, I say nothin' and wink my port eye."

The ten day visit ended, Mr. Tidditt returned to Bayport. On the afternoon of his return he and Bailey called at the Whittaker place, and there they were joined by Miss Dawes, who had been summoned to the conclave by a note intrusted to Bos'n.

"Now, Ase," ordered Captain Cy as the quartet gathered in the sitting room, "here we are, hangin' on your words, as the feller said. Don't keep us strung up too long. What did you find out?"

"Well," said Mr. Tidditt, with a glare at Bangs, "I asked Seth about the Thayers and the Richards folks the very fust night I struck Orham. He remembered 'em.

"Folks used to call John Thayer a smart young feller, so Seth said. They used to cal'late that he'd rise high in the seafarin' and shipownin' line. Maybe he would, only he died somewheres in Californy 'long in '54 or thereabouts. 'Twas the time of the gold craziness out there, and he left his ship and went gold huntin'. And the next thing they knew he was dead and buried."

"When was that?" inquired the schoolmistress.

"In '54, I tell you. So Seth says."

"What ship was he on?" asked Bailey.

"Wan't on any ship. Why don't you listen instead of settin' there moonin'? He was gold diggin', I tell you."

"He'd been on a ship, hadn't he? What was the name of her?"

"I didn't ask. What diff'rence does that make?"

"Wasn't Mr. Atkins at sea in those days?" put in the teacher. The captain answered her.

"Yes, he was," he said—"that is, I think he was. He was away from here when I skipped out, and he didn't get back till '61 or therabouts."

"So that was all you could find out, hey, Ase?" asked the captain. "Well, it's at least as much as I expected. You see, teacher, these story book notions don't work out when it comes to real life."

Miss Dawes was plainly disappointed.

"I wish we knew more," she said. "Who was on this ship with Mr. Thayer, and who sent the news of his death home?"

"Oh, I can tell you that," said Asaph. "'Twas some one boss doctor out there, gold minin' himself, he was. John died of a quick fever; got cold and went off in no time. Seth remembered that much, though he couldn't remember the doctor's name. He said if I wanted to learn more about the Thayers I might go see— Humph, well, never mind that. 'Twas just foolishness, anyhow."

But Phoebe persisted.

"To see whom," she asked—"some one you knew, a friend of yours?"

Asaph turned red.

"Friend of mine!" he snarled. "No, sir, she ain't no friend of mine, I'm thankful to say—more a friend of Bailey's here, if she's anybody's; one of his pets, she was, for a spell; a patient of his, you might say—anyhow, he prescribed for her. 'Twas that deef idiot, Debby Beasley, Cy; that's who 'twas. Her name was Briggs afore she married Beasley, and she was hired help for Emily Thayer when Mary was born and until John died."

Captain Cy burst into a roar of laughter. Bailey sprang out of his chair.

"De-Debby Beasley!" he stammered. "Debby Beasley!"

"She was that deef housekeeper Bailey hired for me, teacher," explained the captain. "I've told you about her. Ho, ho! So that's the end of the mystery huntin'. We go gunnin' for Heman Atkins, and we bring down Debby! Well, Ase, goin' to see the old lady?"

Mr. Tidditt's retort was emphatic.

"Goin' to see her?" he repeated. "I guess not! Godfrey scissors! I told Seth, says I, 'I've had all the Debby Beasley I want, and I cal'late Cy Whittaker feels the same way.' Go to see her! I wouldn't go to see her is she was up in paradise a-hollerin' for me."

CHAPTER XV.

"MRS. BANGS," said the schoolmistress as if it was the most casual thing in the world, "I want to borrow your husband tomorrow. I want him all day, too, because I'm thinking of driving over to Trumet, and I need a coachman. You'll go, won't you, Mr. Bangs?"

Bailey, who had been considering the advisability of asking for a second cup of tea, brightened up and looked pleased.

"Why, yes," he answered, "I'll go."

Mrs. Tripp ventured a hinted question concerning the teacher's errand at Trumet. The reply being noncommittal, the widow cheerfully prophesied that she guessed 'twas going to rain or snow next day. "It's about time for the line storm," she added.

But it did not storm, although a brisk cold gale was blowing when after breakfast next morning the "horse and team," with Bailey in his Sunday suit and overcoat and Miss Dawes on the buggy seat beside him, turned out of the boarding house yard and started on the twelve mile journey to Trumet.

In Trumet Center, which is not much of a center, Miss Dawes alighted from the buggy and entered a building bearing a sign with the words "Metropolitan Variety Store; Joshua Atwood, Prop'r, Groceries, Coal, Dry Goods, Insurance, Boots and Shoes, Garden Seeds, Etc." A smaller sign beneath this was lettered "Justice of the Peace" and one below that read "Post-office."

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Stories Here Told.

Beatrice, Neb.—"Just after my marriage my left side began to pain me and the pain got so severe at times that I suffered terribly with it. I visited three doctors and each one wanted to operate on me but I would not consent to an operation. I heard of the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing for others and I used several bottles of it with the result that I haven't been bothered with my side since then. I am in good health and I have two little girls."—Mrs. R. B. CHILD, Beatrice, Neb.

The Other Case.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation, but my husband thought I had better write to you and I did so, stating my symptoms. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Cary, Maine.

"For many years, I suffered torture from Indigestion and Dyspepsia. Two years ago, I was so bad that I vomited food constantly and lost 25 pounds in weight. I was afraid the disease was Cancer.
I read about "Fruit-a-tives" and the wonderful cures this fruit medicine was making, and I decided to try it. ### "Debutante Slouch" the Latest Fashionable Fad.

TAILORED SUIT FOR SPRING.

The model wearing the new spring tailor made is posing in what is known derisively as the "debutante slouch." As you see, the figure line is nothing more than a frank striving toward the Greek antique—the Venus de Milo figure of perfect health, large, strong, with feminine curves, yet not plump. This is the fashionable pose of the season, but the Milo would hardly appreciate the synonym attributed to her classic attitude, but such is fate.

This new suit shows the latest jacket front, bodice and short sash.

FOR WOMEN INVESTORS.

Here Are Ten Don'ts That Will Be Useful to Plungers.

Don't speculate. It is better to keep what you have than to risk losing it all in order to make a little more.

Don't expect your money to earn 10 per cent. It is too much to ask of it.

Don't hide your money in your house. There are many more burglars than there are dishonest bankers. Trust the banks, but don't trust the burglars.

Don't buy from brokers you do not know. There are a great many good ones of whom you may readily inquire.

Don't put faith in a "tip." Croesus never had a tenth as much money as is lost every year by persons who invest in tips on the stock market.

Don't, as a rule, buy mining stock for an investment. Some are excellent, but most are not when considered in the light of investments.

Don't expect the security you purchase to advance quickly. This will save you from almost certain disappointment.

Don't buy any stock or bond as an investment that has not been in existence for a considerable time. A dividend paying record is an excellent guide to follow.

Don't let your money lie idle. Make it work, as you have probably worked to get it.

Don't go "long" and "short" of a stock at the same time. Your broker is the only person who can possibly make a profit out of such a transaction, as he gets the commissions.

Helping Women Who Entertain.

A woman recently thrown on her own resources has made a good sum by cooking special and novel concoctions for women who entertain. Some of her rarest and most delectable dishes are as follows:

She drops eggs in boiling hot maple sirup and serves them on rounds of toasted bread with butter and cream cheese.

She makes a delectable dessert. Brandied peaches are filled with toasted mushrooms and chopped almonds covered with vanilla ice cream and a sirup of rich fruits.

One of her novel salads is made with a canned pear cut in two lengthwise and a half served on a crisp heart of lettuce. The cavity is filled with grapefruit pulp and malaga grapes, and over all is poured a dressing made in the proportion of one tablespoonful of olive oil, a teaspoonful of pure white honey, salt, paprika and the white of an egg and two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice, the whole being whipped creamy.

A New Kind of Shower.

An aunt of a bride to be wished to entertain the twelve girl friends of her niece, but was very much opposed to the modern idea of showers, so she purchased a beautiful set of table linen, stamped tablecloth and napkins with the monogram of the engaged girl and sent one napkin and the thread for working to each of the girls, asking her to embroider it.

A few days later these girls were invited to bring "their sewing" and spend the afternoon with the bride. After a very pleasant hour spent in hemming this linen the aunt presented her niece with the embroidered cloth, and the girls showered her with the finished napkins.

This was a delightful shower without the usual expense to the guests.

Nursing Heroine Dead.

Mother Stanilaus Jones, whose death occurred at the age of 90 in London recently, was the last survivor of the band of Sisters of Mercy who accompanied Miss Florence Nightingale to the Crimea in 1854 to minister to the sick and wounded. She passed away at the Hospital of St. John and Elizabeth, St. John's Wood, London, which she and other Sisters of Mercy, with the assistance of Cardinal Wiseman, had founded. Queen Victoria in 1887 bestowed on her the Order of the Royal Red Cross.

Too Kind of the Cow.

The failure of a cow belonging to an hotelkeeper at Norristown, South Africa, to yield her usual supply of milk was discovered to be due to the animal's adoption of two baby pigs as nurslings.

AN INTERESTING[illegible]ARRATIVE

Interview of a Reporter With[illegible]ebrated Specialist

Well, Professor, is there anything new in your line? Yes, sir. I just received a letter from Wonsan, Corea, Japan; it took sixty days from the time it left Wonsan to reach me, and this is the age of fast boats and fast trains. This will give you an idea what a long journey it came before reaching me. The money enclosed was for Worm Cure. Have you any other foreign letters? Yes; here is one from Meerut, India; this one took 30 days to reach me. Here is another from Central America, from a place called Lonmecas, Costa Rica; one from St. John's, Newfoundland, three from England; a bunch from British Columbia; two from Ireland. Here is a tape worm sent to me from Miss Lizzie Hill, of Gillenkirk, Ireland; another from Field, British Columbia, from a man of that city who sent for my remedy, and this is the result. Here is a tape worm from New York; here is one from Boston; here is one from Peabody, Mass.; in fact I have many tape worms here that have been sent thousands of miles. This one is from a medical doctor (you can read the label). This doctor had a patient whom he had treated for over two years, and sent for my remedy, which he says proved eminently successful. Here is another tape worm from another doctor who also had a patient that had been treated by other physicians, and this doctor said he had no time to devote to the use of remedies generally prescribed by the profession. The remedy proved successful in two hours. At the end of the little thread is the head, and this is what breeds the worm. This worm you see here is from a lady who was in a hospital for six months, treated without success. My remedy cured her. Here are three others from ladies that were treated in hospitals, and here is one from a gentleman who was treated in a hospital twice. All these people have had the worms expelled, head and all, in from one to three hours. Well, you can see hundreds of them here. These two large bottles contain over six hundred tape worms. Do you ever get any more than one from a person? ## How People Feel When They Have Tape Worm

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is of pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each point is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patience is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince us of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat, and from three-quarters of an inch to an inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take too long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger. Is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always effects a cure. Further information free. Send stamped envelope or call at 394 Water Street. Prof. R. T. Mulveney, Peterborough.

Do Not Be Discouraged Is My Advice But Try Prof. Mulveney's Cure

I have been troubled with tape worm for yea[illegible]. I am not going to try to tell you of the misery I have come through but for the sake of those who ma[illegible] be so afflicted I am going to tell y[illegible] how I got rid of it, for this is the most important part of it. At nine o'clock at night I took a tablespoon [illegible]d a half of Epsom Salt. I worke[illegible] till eight in the morning, as I work at night. At eight in the [illegible]rning I took Prof. Mulveney's C[illegible]; two hours later I took a 10c [illegible]ttle of castor oil; I then drank tw[illegible] teacups of real hot water, with a pinch of salt to the cup. This was at ten o'clock. The oil commenced to operate at a quarter to eleven, [illegible]en again at a quarter to twelve. At twenty-five minutes past twelve I got the body of the worm. As the clock struck one, the fourth motion [illegible]f the bowels, the head came away. [illegible]ou have no idea the joy it brought [illegible]o my mind to be relieved of this [illegible]nster, for I had tried ten or a dozen times previous to trying Prof. Mul[illegible]ney's remedy. I am [illegible] thankful to be relieved and am quite willing to let others know what Prof. Mulveney's remedy has done for me.

13 3-16 CTS; HIGH PRICE FOR CHEESE

The high price at the Cheese Board this morning was 13 3-16 cents. The board totalled 2,411, and the opening bid was 12 9-16. The price was increased several times and finally Mr. Gillespie got first selection at 13 3-16. He took East Emily, Central Smith, Warsaw, Warminster and Keene.

An offer from Mr. Gillespie of 13 1-8 for further selection was refused, but Mr. Cook jumped to the high price, and secured Westwood, Villiers and Ormonde.

Mr. Morten offered 13 1-8, and after some minutes Mr. Kerr went to 13 3-16. He offered to take Killarney and Norwood, on their agreement to settle accounts for short weight, but the salesman for the two factories would not take the matter in his two hands. Selwyn refused, but Trewern accepted.

After an offer of 13 1-16 for the balance, Mr. Kerr went 13 1-8, and took Fleetwood, Bensfort, Indian River Lang, Daisy D., Shearer, Myrtle, Young's Point, Oakdale and Selwyn refused.

At 13 1-8 Mr. Morton secured the balance of the board in Selwyn, Oakdale, Young's Point, Killarney and Norwood.

Ezekiel's "Daughter"

Scientific Versus Common Sense Farming

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Perched on the rail fence and looking like an amiable scarecrow, Ezekiel Flinder nibbled a blade of grass and freely commented on the methods of his young neighbor.

"You ain't never going to make a farmer of yourself, Mr. Hartwell. Your head is too full of newfangled notions. P'taters is p'taters even if you call 'em 'tubers' or any other fancy name, and beans is beans and not legoombs even if the hysterical culture club does claim they belong to that family."

Ernest Hartwell grinned patiently as he listened to Ezekiel's evening lecture. Born and bred in the city, an inward craving for a country life had at last drawn him to the pretty village of Little River.

"You can't deny that Mrs. Flinder's baked beans are more delicious since she learned how to cook them at the domestic science club. You said yourself that"—

"Maybe so, maybe so," waived Ezekiel airily. "Still, when it's all said and done with, whether she learns these notions at the minister's hysterical culture club or Miss Patty Dunn's dom-estic science thingumbob, the beans she cooks is just plain beans after all. I don't take no stock in theories or science or nothing but plain common sense."

"It must be a great satisfaction to feel that one can clip coupons from his stock of common sense," remarked Hartwell meekly as he hoed between his rows of corn.

Ezekiel scowled at him beneath his bushy brows. "You're laughing at me, Mr. Hartwell. I can tell it by that kink in your eye. Anybody ever tell you that you had a funny kink in your eye?"

Hartwell rested on his hoe and surveyed the farmer solemnly. "No, Mr Flinder; no one ever broke the news to me. I've been told that I had the form of a bed slat the face of a pirate and flossy hair like a doll, but I have always prided myself on my china blue eyes, and to be told that there is a kink in one of them is heartbreaking." He dug despondently at a bunch of wire grass.

Ezekiel spat reflectively and let himself down to the ground. "You're a mighty fresh young man, Mr. Hartwell," he chuckled, "but it's a good thing for you I ain't got a daughter."

"Why?" demanded Hartwell, surprised.

"Oh, because you'd be dead sot to marry her, and I wouldn't listen to it a minute. It couldn't be thought of noways." Ezekiel was chewing grass vigorously.

"Once more I repeat, why? What objection have you to me as a son-in-law?"

"First I'd say to her: 'Young lady, you shan't marry no sculptor feller. Pick out a good, plain farmer boy, and you shall have my consent and the blue glass lemonade set I drawed at the raffle for a wedding present.'"

"I'm a plain farmer boy," urged Mr. Hartwell.

"First off, you're a sculptor. That's your trade and all you got to fall back on. There can't be no money in sculping or else you wouldn't have come and tried chicken farming out of a book."

"I like farming. It is my recreation," objected the amateur agriculturist.

"It'll be your ruination," predicted Mr. Flinder, raising a horny finger. "Look at that there corn!"

"Well, look at it!" agreed the planter proudly. "What's the matter with it, eh? See any taller corn hereabouts? See any thicker stalks? See any larger ears?"

"No, I don't see none of those things All I can see is that there ain't one row planted straight. They're as zigzag as though a tipsy man had set 'em out," chuckled Ezekiel.

"That's done purposely. There's a scientific reason for planting 'em that way," hazarded Hartwell.

"Humph!" snorted Ezekiel testily, and for a little while he was silent following Hartwell slowly down the row of corn. Then he said tentatively, "I ain't never seen none of your sculping yet?"

"No?" queried Hartwell politely.

"Not so much as a wink at it. I've often told Maria when I see you going into that workshop of yours that I guess I'll run in and see what you're up to, but somehow it's sort of damp and chilly looking in there; leastways it must be if it's full of graven images."

"H'm!" observed the sculptor.

Ezekiel looked disappointed. He was piqued at Hartwell for not offering to initiate him into the mysteries of his workshop.

"I reckon you feel kinder timid about showing 'em off, but I guess we can make allowances for your being a beginner. You needn't feel bashful about it. You might some day make a figger fit for the soldiers' monument we're going to have on the green, and it would be an advantage for Little River folks to know what you can do. We always encourage home talent," remarked Ezekiel magnanimously.

"Thank you; I'll think it over," said Ernest Hartwell modestly, shouldering his hoe. "I believe somebody is looking for you, Mr. Flinder."

Ezekiel wheeled sharply about to confront a pretty girl, dark haired, gray eyed, blue gowned, with sun kissed cheeks and scarlet lips. "Well, Miss Christie, how in thunder do you do?" he bellowed, delightedly squeezing her hands.

"Very well, indeed, Mr. Flinder," she replied, with a provoking glance at Hartwell, who stood expectantly near. "I'm glad to see you looking so hale and hearty."

"What train did you come on? Consarn it all, I'd have met you if I'd known you was coming down today. Maria said yesterday that she'd got a letter from you, wanting to know could you get board down here another summer for you and your aunt. But I didn't know you was expected today."

"I couldn't wait another moment," laughed the girl. "Aunt Phoebe is coming tomorrow with all the trunks and things. I came down in the noon train, and the stage brought me to the house, but Nancy says Mrs. Flinder has gone to her ethical culture club. I came on down here looking for you."

"Well, here I be! Guess we might as well go along up to the house, Miss Christine." He led the way, intentionally ignoring the expectant embryo farmer. But Hartwell was equal to the emergency.

"Introduce me, please, Mr. Flinder," he said humbly, and Ezekiel smiled sourly and performed the ceremony that made the sculptor acquainted with Christine Davidson.

"Miss Christine is like a daughter to me, Mr. Hartwell," he said meaningly as the girl released her hand from Hartwell's clasp and turned away.

"And I am a plain farmer boy, and I'm good," murmured Hartwell obstinately.

"You're a sculptor and you'll starve to death some day," was Mr. Flinder's cheerful prognostication as he departed for his own side of the rail fence.

The next day he came once more to the rail fence and watched Hartwell raking the accumulated weeds he had uprooted the afternoon before. "Any time you say I'll bring Miss Christine over to see the sculping, provided it's all proper. I told Miss Phoebe Davidson about you—that's Christine's aunt—and she said you might be worth investigating," he observed, watching Hartwell's face.

"The deuce she did!" ejaculated Hartwell, his face growing very red. "See here, Mr. Flinder; just keep all these ladies away from my place. Understand?" He looked quite fierce.

"Well, I'll be stumped!" ejaculated Ezekiel, backing off. "You confounded young puppy, you! I don't believe you dast show me none of your sculping. I'll bet it's nothing but a mess of mud pies!"

"Would you really like to see some of my work?" asked Hartwell with outward seriousness, although there were all sorts of kinks in his blue eyes. He enjoyed his verbal skirmishes with his neighbor quite as much as Ezekiel did, and Ezekiel was secretly proud of the fact that a real sculptor lived cheek by jowl with him. His one lament was that he could not boast to his fellows that he had seen any of Hartwell's work.

"Yes, I'd admire to look at it. Mebbe I could tell you if it was good enough for the soldier's monument. I know something about art even if I don't belong to no hysterical culture clubs," grinned Ezekiel delightedly as he stumped down the path in the wake of the young man toward the bungalow.

In the long, low building which Hartwell used as his workroom they paused a moment, while the farmer gazed around at the several groups swathed under canvas coverings. "Smells damp in here," he said awkwardly as Hartwell removed the canvas from a large crouching lion modeled in clay.

"Lord love you, but he looks like he would bite!" exclaimed Ezekiel; then he scanned the young man suspiciously. "I scarcely believe you made that there critter. You don't look like you had it in you, meaning no offense."

Hartwell smiled and removed a wet cloth from a mass of modeling clay. "Seeing's believing," he said cheerfully and moved his fingers deftly, surely, and with lightning rapidity, picking up and laying aside a modeling tool, he brought before Ezekiel's amazed vision a startling picture in miniature.

Against a background of rough clay was a rail fence. Sitting on the rail fence, one cowhide boot swinging nonchalantly over his clasped hands, was Ezekiel Flinder himself, looking like an amiable scarecrow as he nibbled a blade of grass.

Ezekiel stared, open eyed, open mouthed, chagrined almost to tears. "By gummy!" he breathed heavily at last. "It's me!"

"It is, Mr. Flinder," smiled Hartwell.

"Why, if Little River sees that I'll be the laughingstock from Upper Ford down to Stepping Stone! I believe in you, Mr. Hartwell," he said earnestly. "I don't want no more proof. You're as consarned a good sculptor as I wanter see, only break the thing before anybody sees it."

"How about your daughter?" asked Hartwell, holding his hands above the wet clay model.

"If I had one I'd make her marry you just to keep on good terms with you, Mr. Hartwell. Now, Miss Christine isn't my daughter, but I'll give you all the chances I can to"—

"You're too late, Mr. Flinder," interrupted Hartwell, the kinks coming into his eyes. "You see, I've been engaged to Christine Davidson for a year and we're going to be married next month, and we expect you to donate the blue glass lemonade set."

Cruel words seldom cut lazy people to the quick.

LIFE INSURANCE

THE pessimist and the prophet of woe have no rightful place in any consideration of the expediency of insuring life. But certain hard facts should be squarely faced by every man of moderate means who has anyone dependent on him. Hundreds of men are yearly rejected for life insurance who would have been accepted had they not delayed their applications until ill health had come upon them. Why do men in good condition take such a long chance of remaining well? It is an impressive fact that out of 8549 holders of policies in a leading life insurance company who died in the past year, only 64 died of old age. The remainder were carried away by disease or accident. Hence the wisdom of insuring early in life. The best years for saving are from 20 to 40, and no man should let that period pass without taking out an insurance policy. For that part of his career an endowment policy, which is likely to mature while he is still living and can secure the proceeds of it himself, is to be preferred.

There will probably always be poor old men, their ranks will be recruited from the successful men of an earlier date, and fortunate is he who has made certain provision by means of endowment insurance in the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

The Telephone Brings Companionship

WHEN her morning's work is done and lunch disposed of, the housewife turns to the social side of housekeeping—she calls up her friends and brightens the day by a personal chat. Books, piano, needlework—these are sometimes diverting, but a woman craves real companionship. She longs to hear a living, laughing, human voice—longs for someone to talk to about the little, intimate, personal things.

She talks and listens to the voice that talks to her about the things she likes best. The telephone has banished her loneliness.

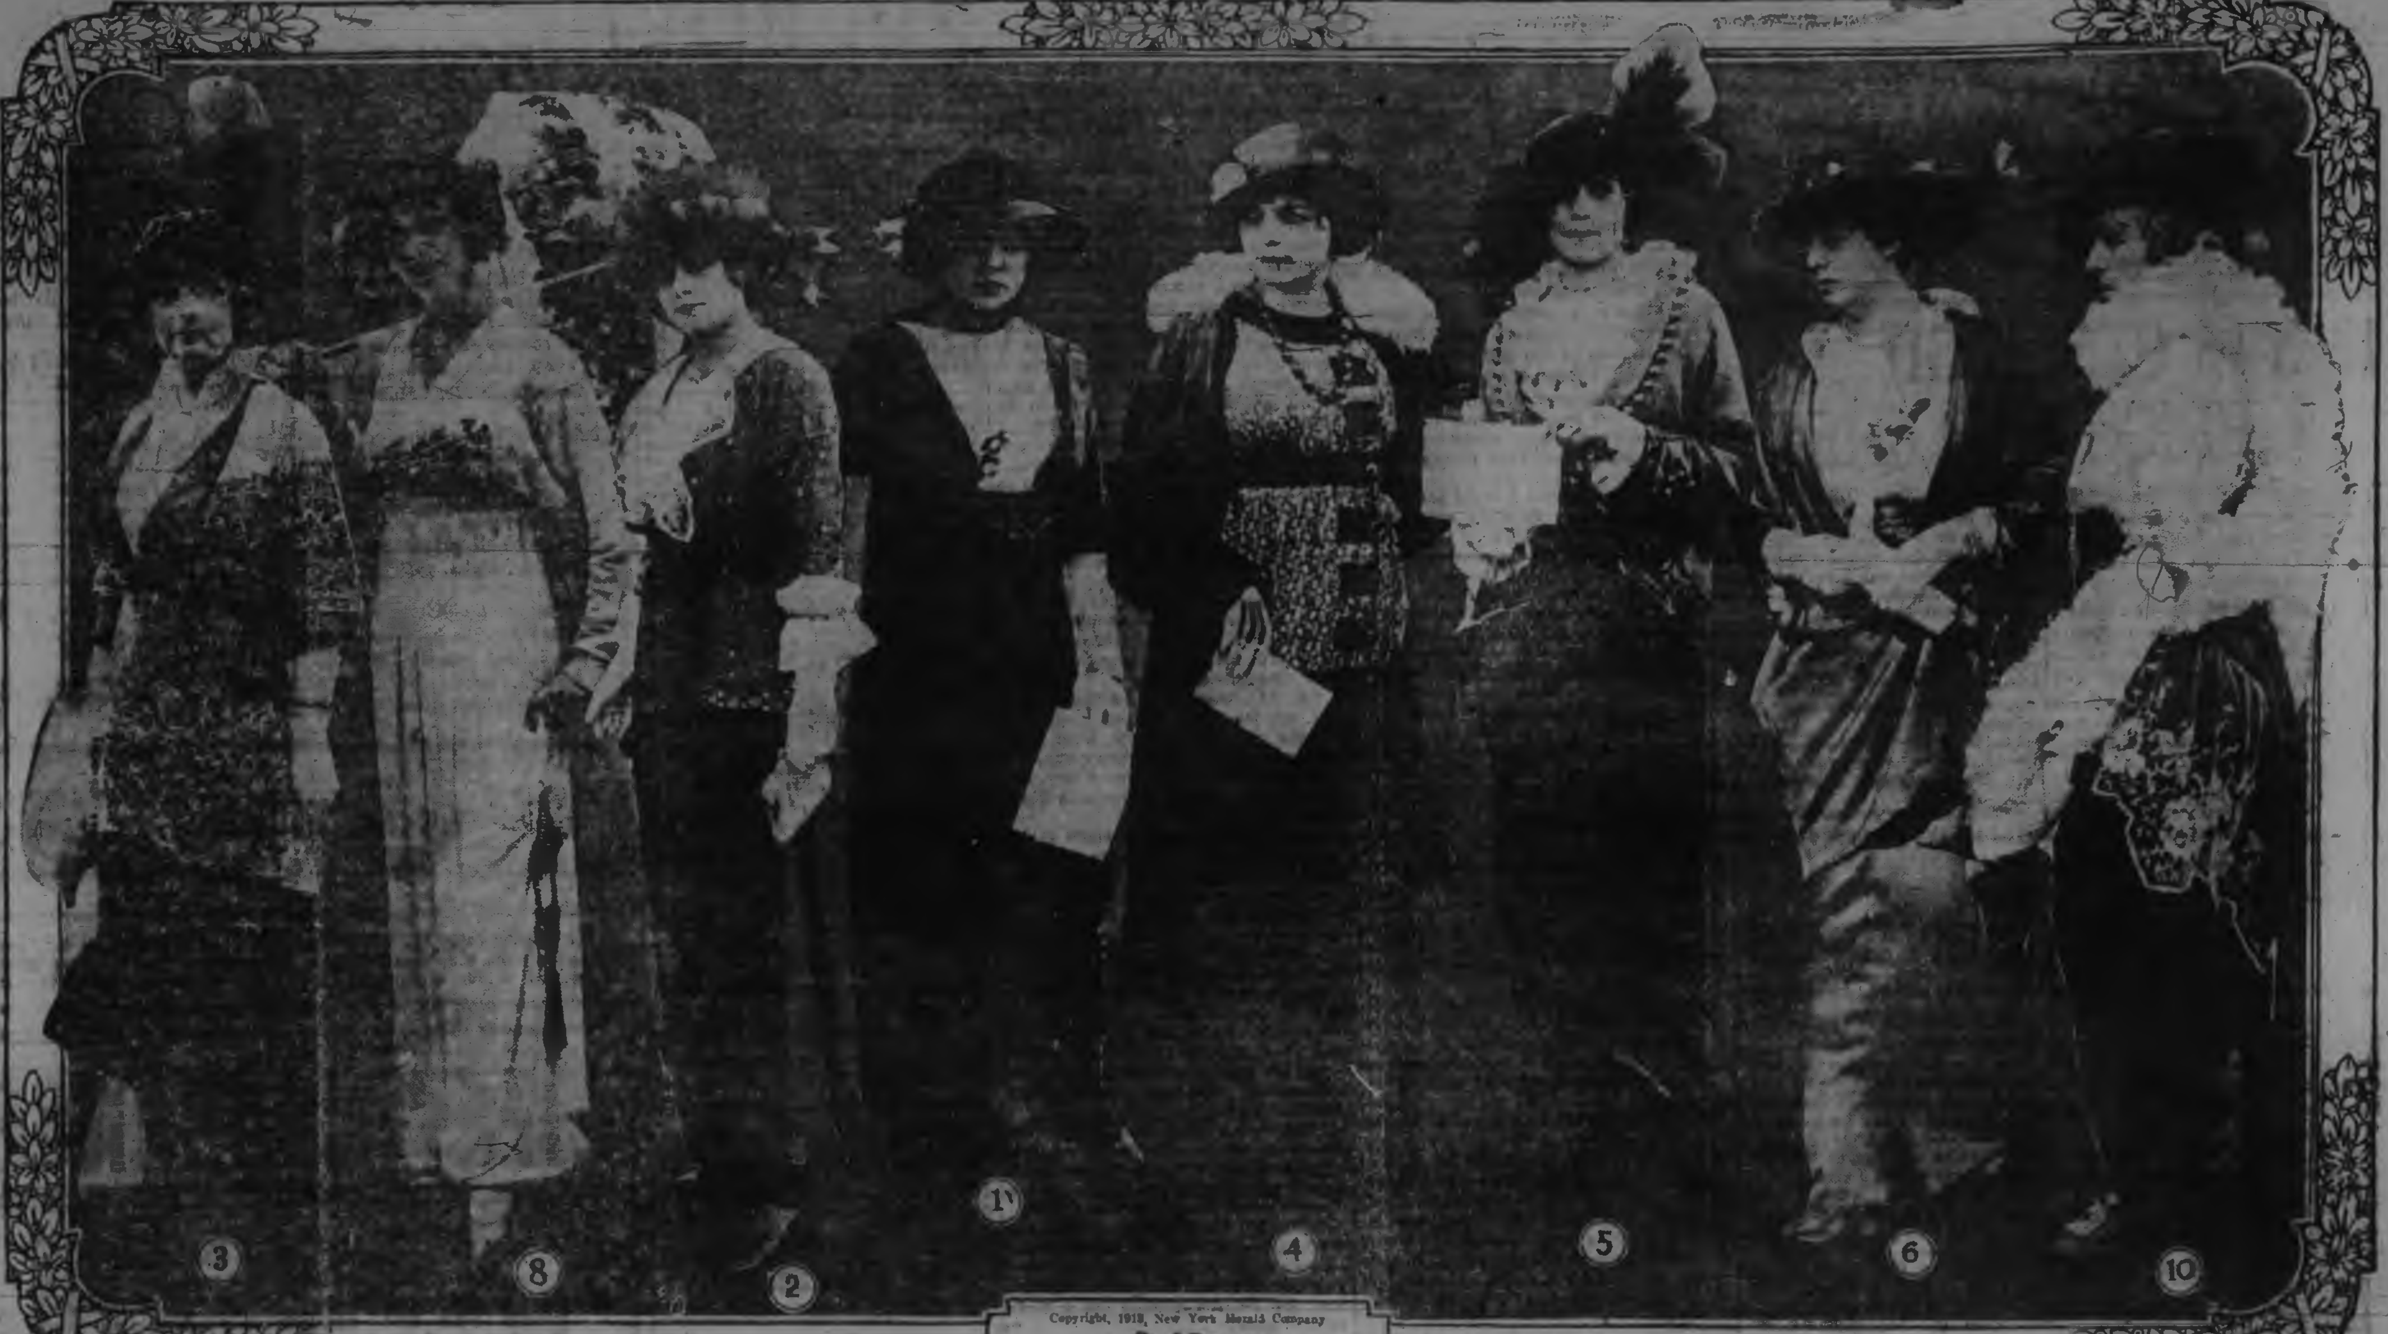
SASHES, DRAPERY and SANDAL LACINGS DOMINATE FASHIONS AT LONGCHAMP



Copyright, 1913, New York Herald Company

FROM the photographs taken at the Auteuil and Longchamps races it is very evident that draped dresses are a well established fashion. It is the exceptional dress where the skirt is not supplied with these graceful folds. While they cannot be said to have revolutionized the contours of the figures to any great extent as yet, they nevertheless make the afternoon frock and the elaborate tailored suit distinctly different from those of last year. When drapery was in its tentative stage, now it is accepted, adapted in the various pretty models such as are to be seen on this page, a number of lovely gowns photographed at the latest Paris race meets.

Not the least interesting thing about these pictures from the races are the fashionable accessories worn, which are to the well dressed woman as important as the gowns themselves. The new sashes are wound about the figure in manifold ways, brightening by their colorings or concealing some of the seams that shape the curiously draped skirts, or, again, proportioning the figure into graceful picturesqueness. Arm bags and purses, too, change as much in style as frocks. Shoes follow the trend of the skirts, and the late fashion of disclosing the ankles has brought fanciful and skilfully shaped shoes into vogue.

So in the photographs here accessories play an important part, and a description will include many of the most interesting.

In Figure No. 1 the gown is [illegible] one [illegible] satin with a draped [illegible] small round buttons. The corsage is [illegible] with over bretelles of the same material, and the front edges, widely separated, reveal a lacy white vest fastened jauntily with a small cluster of satin flowers. Wide short chiffon sash ends fall from the back of the girdle and in front a semi-circular ornament, beautifully embroidered, breaks the monotony of the straight belt.

The small straw hat with slightly flared and rolled brim has a broad [illegible] ribbon end that, falling in a loose end, is effectively thrown over the opposite shoulder. No. 2 is much more elaborate in detail and is a striking combination of black and jonquil yellow. The black is the draped skirt, which is of satin. In front it drapes originally up over the black chiffon tunic to the belt. The yellow is [illegible] the fine braiding that covers in intricate design both the waist and skirt of the chiffon tunic, lightened only by the Alençon lace ruffles in front and on the cuffs.

Also in black satin is No. 3, combined with an overskirt tunic of white craquelé lace that is braided with a striking flower design and posed over black net. This black net shows also in the revers, cuffs and sash ends. The corsage is separated enough in front to show a lovely vest and wired standing collar of Alençon lace.

No. 4, also of black satin, reserves its drapery to the matching mantelet, which is made on the soft shapeless lines that become individual by the way the wearer drapes them into clever folds. Such tiny wraps are often lined with chiffon only. The lace top of the dress, fashioned like a simple tunic, is a dull ochre shade like that of very old real lace.

The short coat and mantle is so much a feature of this season that one sees variation after variation of it. Quite the reverse of the mantle that drapes about the figure is the odd short coat like No. 5, on decided bolero lines, though longer and unfitted. It is cut with the new décolleté revers that finishes between the shoulder and the neck, and is of bright coral red eponge embroidered with black. The space between the lapels is filled in with softly folded white tulle and a standing lace frill that follows the inside lapel edges, the outside edges being decorated with round ball buttons. The satin skirt has the drapery edge partly concealed by narrow sash ends, knotted and fringed, and the rounded lower edge reveals the latest novelty sandal slippers, differing from those of olden times in that they are modernized by heels. The flat cravat bows with which they are adorned and the satin ribbon lacings are specially lovely with the draped skirt with rounded corners, which recall pretty shoes and silk clad ankles.

No. 6, another one of those fascinating mantle and skirt combinations, is of a delightful yellow-green tilleul shade of charmeuse, worn with a tulle and lace corsage. In pretty color harmony with it is No. 7, a pervenche taffeta dress striped with white with a white girdle belt and having lingerie frills at the throat.

No. 8, a Bechoff-David model, is of the new ivory white crepon and is very interesting in the way the skirt pleats are caught up into drapery with a hanging ornament of mask and shield.

No. 9, also a Bechoff-David model, is of white crepon, part of which, tucked in a new way, makes the little coat top and back panel. This dress also has a matching parasol of the plain and the tucked net. A vivid belt of red fastens in front under a silken flower. Another large flower catches a couple of drapery folds and limits the slash in the side of the skirt. Another lace overdress is combined with a black satin skirt in No. 10. A round feather boa is an accessory that has not been worn for a number of seasons.

In No. 11 the sash is introduced on an Empire green moire suit, replacing the belt that has usually strapped the back of the season's tailored coats.

IG SCORE AND TIE IN GAMES AT PICNIC GROUNDS

The two baseball games at the T. S. picnic yesterday proved to be no small amount of interest pro-bly because it was a bloodless ttle between the Sacred Heart & St. Peter's Parish. In the morn-g the two schools fought it out t there was nothing to it, for the thenders were far too fast and e result was a score of 25- n favor of the Sacred Heart School. AFTERNOON GAME.

The afternoon game between the o parish teams was extra close nd fast and when the seven inn-s were over the score stood a tie -8. On account of the other sports y was not continued. The St. Pe-r's team had the Machine Shop attery, Callahan and O'Hearn, hile Ray Rose twirled for the Sac-ed Heart Parish and "Wattie" nnealley did the receiving. The eams were about evenly matched nd the class of ball that was ex-ibited was worth watching.

Huyckes Good Twirling Stopped the Visitors

When the Columbias and Thistles clashed yesterday at Riverside one of the fastest games of amateur baseball was witnessed. Huyckes was on the mound for the Thistles and his 13 strike-outs greatly assisted the locals to defeat the Toronto lads 6—3.

One feature of the game was the "come-back" of Mike O'Brien, who had a triple to his credit.

Mr. Stacey umpired to satisfaction.

BRODIE JOINS THE SAINTS

PILGRIM JOE SAD.

He Resents the Word "Faker" as Applied to Him.

HIS MOTIVES THE PUREST.

The Continued Misunderstanding of the Public Grieves Him Greatly. His Experience While Exhibiting at Jump Off the Reverse of Felicitous.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

I AM making 50 per cent profit on my various remedies for the cure of what ails mankind, but there are times when I grow weary.

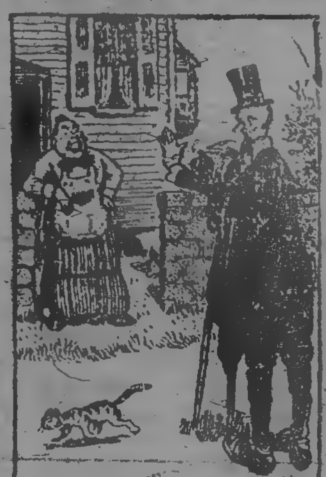
I can draw a man back from the yawning grave, but when my remedies won't grow a new leg to replace the wooden one I am called a fraud.

I can save the child dying of fever, but because I can't substitute something for his red hair mothers drive me from the door as a faker.

I take a tintype of man or woman at half price and in nine cases out of ten am blamed that it looks homely and natural. I save man or woman from a suicide's grave when laboring under despondency, and hope returns to them only to blame me for butting in.

I smile as I count my profits, but I shed tears when I think of the injustice of this world.

Besides lifting up the lowly, encouraging the sorrowing, selling my remedies, taking tintypes and showing my moving pictures as I travel about the country, I also collect statistics for the agricultural bureau at Washington and keep tab on human nature as I find it in various localities.



TINTYPES AT HALF PRICE.

It grieves me to say that in carrying out this latter duty I have been forced to the conclusion that human nature is gradually but surely losing its reverence for sacred things. Not a week goes past but what I find a dozen instances of it, and it hurts me more than I can tell.

The Town of Jump Off.

Two years ago I exhibited my moving pictures at the town of Jump Off, which was founded as a future rival of Chicago and had seven murders and nine elopements the first year. When I showed the picture of General Washington at Valley Forge—emaciated, starved, discouraged and almost ready to trade American independence for a pumpkin pie—there was a breathless silence in the audience for a minute, and then sobs and tears broke forth from every point of the hall. Men who had not shed a tear when their mothers-in-law died now broke down and had to be led from the hall and in some cases, as I afterward learned, did not take a hand at poker for the next two weeks. I was told of women that went home and wept for three days and could not be comforted, and of little children that wanted to send their food to the starving patriots.

Last week I got around to show my pictures in the same town again. There was a still larger audience, and I thought I observed an increased look of reverence on their faces. After collecting my statistics as to the number of cucumbers per acre raised in that part of Kansas this year I mounted the platform and started the show with the same old pictures. It was Washington sitting in his log house at Valley Forge. He was the most sorrowful looking skeleton ever exhibited to the public outside of an anatomical museum. I expected great results, and I got 'em. Instead of tears and silence and sobs, the picture no sooner appeared on the canvas than irreverent voices called out:

"Fat him up!"

"Feed him pudding and milk!"

"Give him chop suey!"

"Hey, George, old boy, where's your fried oysters?"

My grief and astonishment can hardly be imagined. As I looked at the audience in a reproachful way the audience continued to hoot and guy, and I had to take the picture off. The audience even hooted me. I then exhibited a picture of Satan walking arm in arm with a Boston alderman that had sold his vote for $2,000, and there was applause lasting seven minutes.

I Had Great Hopes.

The next picture was Faith clinging to the cross. I had great hopes that this would bring the audience back into the straight and narrow path, but was doomed to disappointment. She was advised to go home and go to darning stockings, and when I would have expressed my surprise at such sacrilege some one threw a turnip and hit me on the jaw.

From thence on I exhibited only pictures showing that the wages of sinners are from four to ten dollars a day, with board and washing and theater tickets thrown in, and the audience went wild with enthusiasm. I could not close my eyes to the fact that the drift of the times was toward wickedness and that the traveling agents of family Bibles must be living on onions and sleeping in fence corners.

Next day, while I was driving over the highway from Jump Off to Stop Here, I met a cavalcade. My innocent face, venerable whiskers and bearing insure me respect. In most cases the cavalcade removes its hats and bows low before me. In this case as a sign of the degeneracy of the times the cavalcade halted, and the leader asked me what I would take for my whiskers. I had not yet recovered from my astonishment when another man dismounted and climbed up on the wheel of my wagon and actually gave a few [illegible] at my whiskers to see if they were false. Then they called me old man and old boy and old hoss, and one of them tried to spit tobacco juice in my [illegible] dog's eyes. As I drove on it [illegible] did seem to me that the end of the world was at hand. In imagination I could see the destruction of Sodom and hear the yells of its perishing inhabitants.

A Spirit of Levity.

Having reached the town itself, I observed that a spirit of levity and gayety pervaded the place; but, though it might be owing to the fact that there was a man in town from Denver trying to sell folding bathtubs and hair brushes, I opened my show by introducing Pilgrim Joe's Alternative, which is a well known remedy for drawing folks back from the grave. I had scarcely announced that the price still remained 25 cents notwithstanding the [illegible] when a crowd began to hoot. In selling this alternative I usually tell a little story. It is about a fond mother whose sunny haired little boy gets in the way of a brick house and is crushed to a pulp. The mother sits grieving over the remains and yelling out that there is no more happiness for her on this earth when an angel comes flying down with a bottle of my justly celebrated remedy in her hand. She pats the grieving mother on her head and then sprinkles some of the alternative over the remains of the child. In five minutes he is chasing grasshoppers and the mother is laughing in glee and wondering when the next circus will come along.

Seeing that the crowd at Stop Here was a little out of humor, I started in to tell this story, but it brought hisses instead of tears and smiles. A majority of those present [illegible] with [illegible] my sacred body, and for the first time in thirteen years I was somewhat embarrassed. I passed the picture along and substituted "The Discovery of America." No good. They threw cucumbers at Christopher as he stood and gazed upon America. I substituted "Two Orphans," but the ragged and starving little girls, wandering around in a snow-storm at night in search of shelter and sympathy, were advised to cut it out. In desperation I changed to the most sacred picture in the collection, which represents a field of battle at night, after the fighting. There are dead and wounded scattered about, and instead of being on their roosts and asleep thousands of buzzards are hovering o'er the scene. There are angels there weeping o'er the dead or praying with the wounded and other angels with clubs whacking away at the buzzards.

Produced Tears and Sobs.

When I exhibited this picture in the towns of Step High, Go On, Merry-Lee and Who Cares there were such tears and sobs as produced a wave of influenza all through the state, and hundreds of men rode from ten to fifty miles to tell me that they would enlist in the army if Japan licked us ten times over.

On this occasion, however, the picture was received in frozen silence. This lasted about a minute, and then the audience began to guy. The sacred angels were advised to try this or that breakfast food and to put on tailor made gowns and wear "Merry Widow" hats, and when I stepped to the front and protested against such sacrilege there were shouts for me to pull in my vest and get off the earth.

I have no desire to pose as a discoverer or explorer or to make my fellow man out worse than he is, but my conclusions are:

First.—Sacred things are gradually losing their sacredness.

Second.—A spirit of levity is abroad in the land.

Third.—This world will eventually be a tough place to live in.

Fourth.—If you have a pain anywhere in the family or among your distant relatives take Pilgrim Joe's Alternative.

Fifth.—If you haven't got a pain, but are slowly dying from grief, old age or disappointment, take Pilgrim Joe's Alternative. It will bring back to youth and [illegible], give you a chance to get even with the world. There is no other. If your family druggist tries to get you to take a bottle of hair [illegible] in its place call him a [illegible].

Doctored.

"Mrs. Weedson has had three husbands. The first was an LL. B., the second a B. A. and the third a Ph. D."

"Just plunges from one matrimonial venture into another, eh?"

"On the contrary, her record proves that she prefers to be won by degrees."—Judge.

Appropriate.

"What sort of a bridge expert is Wombat?"

"He's what we call an Ibsen expert."

"An Ibsen expert?"

"Yes; he makes some mighty queer plays."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Woman's Question.

"My husband told me a month ago that I could pay any price I wanted to for my spring hat."

"What hat have you on to-day?"—Chicago News.

Two Ways.

A pompous physician who was inclined to criticise others was watching a stonemason build a fence for his neighbor, and thought the mason was using too much mortar. He said, "Your mortar covers up a good many mistakes, does it not?"

"Yes, doctor," replied the mason, "and so does the spade."—Ladies' Home Journal.

The annual strawberry festival of the Methodist church at Bailieboro was held last night at the church grounds.

After a most delightful repast of strawberries and cake, the gathering adjourned to the church where a musical programme was rendered by Misses Ida, Hazel Ivy and Edith Dawson, assisted by Mr. Bickell, soloist.

WEDDING BELLS

ELLIOTT—BAILEY.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon, June 25th, at 3 p.m., when Mary Greta, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Bailey, was united in marriage to Mr. William Melville Elliott, Omemee. The ceremony, which took place on the lawn, was performed by the Rev. H. F. Chapman, Omemee, Mrs. Walter Magee playing the wedding march. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin with overdress of embroidered net. She wore a long bridal veil and Juliet cap caught with orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of roses. She was attended by little Marguerite Deyell as flower girl, wearing a lingerie frock, lace inserted. Mrs. Bailey, mother of the bride, received, wearing a becoming gown of black silk.

A sumptuous wedding supper was served in the dining room, which was prettily decorated with white peonies and myrtle, a large white bell being suspended over the bride's table, and the beautiful wedding cake resting on lace centre, made it very attractive. Young girl friends of the bride were deft assistants, and supplied the wants of over sixty relatives and friends. The large array of presents, including several gold pieces, testify to the popularity of the young couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliott left on the six o'clock train, the bride wearing a navy blue serge suit and silk blouse, with mohair hat, trimmed with rosebuds and willow plume.

After a honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Elliott will reside in Emily. Guests were present from Peterborough, Bowmanville, Garden Hill, Janetville and Ida.

EASON—LANCASHIRE.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Eason, Otonabee, when their youngest daughter, Agnes Gertrude, was united in marriage to Mr. Joseph Lancashire, of Greystock. The Rev. Mr. Wm. Johnston, of Keene, officiated. The happy couple will reside in Toronto.

AN UNEXPECTED "MORAL."

The Scion of Nobility Saw Real Life in Australia.

It is impossible (writes the Bishop of North Queensland in The Cornhill) to resist the temptation of telling a story against my brother bishops in England and myself. Some years ago I found in Sydney a youthful scion of the aristocracy traveling to gain "experience of Australian life" before he entered "the House." I pointed out to him the futility of thinking that he would gain much knowledge going from Government House to Government House, with occasional visits to show stations where the girls would wear Paris frocks and the men would organize polo matches in his honor.

At the same time I invited him to accompany me on a trip I proposed taking to some mining camps in North Queensland. My invitation was accepted with almost indecent haste, and in due course my guest became as dust-grimed and cheerful withal as his companion. I was not surprised when my guest shook my hand warmly at a "way back" railway station, saying that he had learned a good deal.

When he was silent for a while, I thought that he felt some glimmering consciousness of what the duty of the House of Lords was towards the brave men and women on England's outposts. But I was not prepared for the remark, made with great earnestness: "Don't you think it would be a good thing for English bishops if they worked in North Queensland for a bit."

If any member of a congregation in a mining camp has anything to say during service, he generally says it. "That's a lie," remarked one man cheerfully during a service at which I was speaking. He was not questioning my general veracity, but the accuracy of my information.

A brother bishop, who was preaching somewhat at length, made a magnificent pause, the effect of which was somewhat marred by a tired voice, remarking, "Ain't you spinnin' rather a long yarn to-night, Mister?" But then a wearied member of the congregation in the bush has one consolation denied to his more conventional brother in England.

The hospitality, says the bishop, is usually most profuse, especially in the way of cakes, sandwiches, and tea. Sometimes there is fruit, and incidentally some danger of embarrassment is thus caused. The first Bishop of North Queensland used to relate how in one mining camp he received in his hands a huge slice of luscious watermelon—a great delicacy in the bush.

Before ever the segment of the globular fruit had touched his lips the bishop was confronted by the same problem in an aggravated form, which the cherry tart presented to Mr. Tittlebat Titmouse. What was he to do with the many large black seeds? The official hostess saw his dilemma, and, with a true instinct of politeness, whispered in his ear, "Spit them on the floor, my Lord."

Returns to Canada.

Another Canadian who has heard the call of his native land, and determined to return from Uncle Sam's domain is the Rev. O. C. S. Wallace, M.A., LL.D., formerly chancellor of McMaster University, who has accepted a call extended him by the Westmount Baptist Church, Montreal. Dr. Wallace has been for the past four and a half years ministering to one of the largest and most influential Baptist churches in the Southern States, the historic First Baptist Church of Baltimore, Md. Previous to that he had been pastor of the First Baptist Church at Lowell, Mass., where he went after resigning the chancellorship of McMaster University, Toronto, in 1905.

Fish Prices Have Risen.

How the price of fish has gone up may be gathered from these figures. In the year ending June 30, 1909, the fish catch of Newfoundland was 1,732,387 quintals, the value of which was $7,398,536. In the year that ended June 30, 1912, the catch was 344,208 quintals less than in 1909, the value being $603,167 more.

That Bulgarian Note.

One sees it in dress trimmings—rich and beautiful.

Wide and narrow bands of sheer black net have the Bulgarian reds, blues, greens and yellows cleverly combined in effective embroidered designs.

And there are all over embroideries which are used to trim blouses and gowns.

In the neckwear shops are chemisettes, guimpes, socks and jabots of sheer white or cream colored net, with designs embroidered in the prescribed hues and designs.

ADVANCE IN HOTEL RATES

Will Not go Into Effect Till July

At a meeting of the Lindsay Hotelkeepers' Association, held a couple of days ago it was decided to advance the rates in Lindsay which are at the present time considerably below the rates in vogue in other larger and smaller towns.

On and after Monday, July 14th, the rates at the Hotel Benson will be $2.50 and up; at Hotel Simpson $2 and up; and at the Hotels Pym, Butler, Maunder, King Edward, Royal and Grand Union the rates will be $1.50 and up while the price of meals will advance from 25 cents to 35 cents. The meals in the Benson and Simpson will remain at 50 cents.

In the past the rates have been as follows:—Simpson $1.50; Pym, Butler, Maunder, King Edward, Royal and Grand Union, $1.00

The rates are reasonable when considering the high cost of living, and the advance made in the cost of produce.

MUST WAIT FIVE YEARS

Panama Canal Not Nearly Ready Say German Experts.

LONDON, July 3.—Experts sent to Panama by a leading German steamship line which contemplated big developments when the canal is available, have reported, The World correspondent learns, that in their opinion large ocean-going liners will not be able to pass through that waterway for another five years at least.

They base this opinion on the frequency of landslides in the Culebra Cut, which have been on such a scale recently, that the steam shovels are making no progress in that part of the work. It is probable, the experts admit, that next January, if not sooner, several torpedo boats will be sent through by the U. S. Government. Indeed, it is said that the cutting is deep enough now to allow small vessels to go through, but there apparently is no assurance of permanency.

Moreover, the engineers are said to recognize that when the water is let in there will be some erosion, and that unless proper preparations are made it will cause the slides to block the canal.

Another danger is said to arise in connection with earthquakes, which may endanger the stability of the lock gates.

Generally speaking, the shipping people, as well as the underwriters on this side of the Atlantic, are not now quite so certain about the Panama route as they were some time ago. Some members of Lloyds have said that they will not cover the risk unless at premiums which probably will be considered prohibitive.

Another Rebuff For Friedmann.

BERLIN, July 3.—The Berlin Medical Society, at its regular meeting yesterday, rejected by an overwhelming majority the request of Prof. Ludwig Schleich, the associate of Dr. Friedrich F. Friedmann, that the society appoint a committee of four to test the Friedmann vaccine for tuberculosis in any way which might appear to it most advisable.

The decision of the society was greeted with cries of "bravo."

The president of the society, speaking informally after the denial of the request, declared that if Dr. Friedmann really desired a test he could have it by placing his remedy at the disposal of the different hospitals. This statement was applauded.

SERBO-GREEK FORCES DEFEAT THE BULGARIANS

One Hundred Officers and One Thousand Men Are Captured.

BELGRADE, July 3.—Army headquarters report that the Servians, after captured Istip, pursued the enemy, capturing over one hundred officers and one thousand men.

Press despatches report that sanguinary fighting has occurred at Ovtchepolye, where the Bulgarian losses were enormous and 4,000 Bulgarians surrendered. In this engagement 2,000 Servians were killed and wounded.

Accordign to the best information to be obtained at the Servian capital, the battle line extended from Kotchana, Istip and Strumitza towards Guevgheli, and thence to the Gulf of Orfani.

The Bulgarians delivered their heaviest blows at Guevgheli, where they severed the Greco-Servian line, and at Istip. They still hold Guevgheli, but were driven from Istip eventually with heavy losses towards Ovtchepolye, where the Servian army was massed. The Servian supporting forces, coming up in time, met the Bulgarians at Dermak and Petrishino, behind Kotchana, where a fierce fight ensued. The Bulgarians suffered heavily, the Servians capturing an important height near Osigovtt, called Retkibukwe.

On the other side of Guevgheli the Greek armies are concentrated and the Bulgarians risk getting caught between two fires.

Unconfirmed despatches last night report further heavy fighting in the Istip district, in which the Servians were compelled to abandon their fortified positions at the town of Istip and leave behind their wounded.

Fifty-four officers, including four colonels, were among the killed, while the losses on both sides numbered several thousands.

Although the war has now raged for sixty hours, the Bulgarian Minister and his staff are still here. Telephonic communication between Belgrade and Sofia has ceased.

According to the latest advices from the front, the Bulgarians have been entirely driven off the territory which they occupied when they took the Servians unawares. The Bulgarian right wing has been completely routed. It is asserted that the fighting was the bloodiest in the history of the Balkan wars.

No Chance For Peace.

LONDON, July 3.—Any remaining hope of averting a Balkan war is rapidly disappearing. Bulgaria has sent warning notes to Servia and Greece demanding a cessation of all aggressive movements within twenty-four hours. These notes are regarded as tantamount to an ultimatum.

A Belgrade despatch, via Paris, yesterday, announced that the King of Servia is presiding at a council which is expected to decide to declare war on Bulgaria.

Grecian notes to Bulgaria and the powers, justifying her action, accuses Bulgaria of treacherously attacking the Greeks and Servians, in order to seize important territories and so place herself in an advantageous position in the coming negotiations for a settlement of the Balkan differences.

In the meantime, fighting continues according to Servian advices, on a heavy scale, and the King of Greece with his staff has left Caloniki for the front, to direct the operations personally.

Simmonds, who is a captain in the 66th Regiment, is a hardware dealer of Dartmouth, and was formerly a close personal friend of Hill.

DENIED GUILT AS HE DIED

Italian Convict Says Tramp Was Real Murderer.

KINGSTON, July 3.—Anthony Hewlo, an Italian, aged 24 years, a convict in the penitentiary, is dead from tuberculosis. He was sentenced at Toronto to three years for shooting at a trainman. To the prison authorities he declared he was innocent, claiming that a tramp he was traveling with on the freight train had fired the shot.

Hewlo was released from prison two weeks ago and removed to the city hospital. Of the ten-year sentence he has about completed three years. When dying he said that he did not shoot at the brakeman, but that he had been riding the bumpers, and while there fell in with a tramp who was beating his way. When the brakeman ordered the two off his train the tramp shot in the air.

Both men were arrested, and when the trial took place the tramp swore it was the Italian who did the shooting, and for that reason he was sentenced to prison.

Hewlo claimed that while in penitentiary he had been kept in such confinement that the disease developed which caused his death. The remains were interred in St. Mary's Cemetery.

FIVE DEATHS FROM HEAT.

NEW YORK, July 2.—(Can. Press.)—Five deaths and over fifty heat prostrations, were officially recorded in and near Greater New York today. In addition, every hospital here treated emergency patients, whose cases were not reported to the police. It is estimated that the total of those overcome numbered more than 200.

The forecast relief from yesterday's torrid wave did not materialize until late afternoon, with cloudiness and a brief shower. Instead, the maximum official temperature was 93 at 3 p.m., and 2 p.m. Yesterday it was 90 degrees at 4 p.m., but today's humidity fortunately was much lower or the death and prostration rolls would have been far larger.

Suffering was intense on the eastside and in other congested sections. The street cleaning department ordered frequent flushing of the streets, and arranged two hour working relays to keep its force efficient. Animal society agents were stationed with hose lines and water buckets, in all heavy traffic thorofares to revive the hundreds of prostrated horses.

PICKPOCKETS ARE CAUGHT

Were Arrested in Barrie While Attending Celebration.

TORONTO, July 3.

Clever work on the part of Sergeant Nat Guthrie was responsible for Detectives Cronin and Mitchell bringing three alleged pickpockets back from Barrie yesterday. A few days ago Sergeant Guthrie noticed a man operating in the crowd at the Union Station when he was boarding a train. The officer arrested him, but three other members of the gang got away.

While attending the celebration at Barrie yesterday, Sergeant Guthrie saw the three men operating and arrested them. Since the celebration the chief of police at Barrie has received dozens of complaints from people who had their pockets picked. It is thought that the police have the right men and they will stand their trial in Toronto.

They gave their names as James E. Guthrie, Hamilton (he has a nasty American slang that throws doubt on his place of residence), Kid McCoy, Ottawa (he speaks like the other), and P. M. Reid of South Carolina. The three had about $500 in their possession.

WORST OVER IN FIRE AREA

Rain and Wind Have Lessened the Danger.

NORTH BAY, Ont., July 3.—Rain and cessation of high winds brought relief to many northern sections which have been scourged by bush fires during the past week. The condition today is reported as very good and it is thought the worst is over.

No loss of life has been reported.

Among the reports of damage is one of the burning of a power transmission line on the Montreal river, as a result of which nine Cobalt mines are idle to-day.

The plant of the Augaunico Mine is said to have been burned, the miners being taken away in gasoline launches, sent from Haileybury, at which place three houses were burned by sparks from bush fires.

Anxiety is felt for miners and settlers in Munro township.

The month of May was the dryest on record in the fire-swept district, there being only 1.22 inches of rain, while in June 1.59 inches fell. The average is nearly three inches.

Effectively Checked.

COBALT, July 3.—Danger from bush fires has practically come to an end as a result of rains, which have fallen over the entire flame-swept belt. Reports from all points are that the fires have been effectively checked.

WOMAN MURDERED

Body Found in Alleyway—Throat Had Been Cut.

CHICAGO, July 3.—On a platform in the rear of a store on West Madison street, the body of a well-dressed unidentified woman, 35 years of age, was found by a teamster yesterday. The jugular vein had been severed, and nearby was a clasp knife with a blood-stained blade three inches long. Apparently the woman had been attacked by a man, who then wiped his hands on her clothes. There was evidence that the woman struggled desperately.

Andrew Dufrain, 41 years old, night watchman in the Volunteers of America Hotel, was taken into custody. The police discovered numerous scratches on his right arm. He said he was scratched by a cat.

London Fearing Ice Famine.

LONDON, Ont., July 3.—London, it appears, is in grave danger of a serious ice famine, due, the ice dealers claim, to the action of the Board of Health in restricting the areas from which ice could be harvested last winter. Already one firm has cut off two-thirds of its customers and another refuses absolutely to take on any new ones. It is said that in any but the downtown districts the service will be cut from once a day to two or three times a week.

Many of the women most prominent in Knoxville (Tenn.) society are working toward the end that the women's department of the big National Conservation Exposition to be held in Knoxville during the months of September and October may be a signal success.

Following are the officers of the woman's department:—President, Mrs. Horace Van Deventer; First Vice President, Mrs. C. D. Boyd; Second Vice President, Mrs. W. S. ## BREAK IN THE HYDRO

Insulators Are Being Removed and no More Trouble is Expected.

TORONTO, July 3.

That mysterious defect in the insulators caused another break in the hydro-electric service yesterday morning. For six hours the power was off, but the interruption occurred at a rather fortunate time of the day—3 a.m. to 9.50 a.m.

It was the same trouble which put the system out of commission on the other occasions during the past month—broken insulators. But since the first break hydro linemen have been engaged in removing these insulators. The work will be finished in about ten days' time, and then the officials hope and believe that there will be no more crippling of the public ownership service.

All the street lights in Toronto and other places on the hydro belt blinked out at 3 o'clock. Factories using hydro were not doing business up to 10 o'clock. Civic car lines were not working, elevators in downtown buildings and several places which require electric power during the day were also affected.

The defect was located between Niagara and Dundas. Had it been daylight when the interruption happened, not so much time would have been lost in finding the seat of the trouble.

Officials Are Baffled.

"We are absolutely baffled," said W. W. Pope of the hydro-electric. "This trouble is again caused by insulators, but the nature of these breakdowns is unknown to us. The insulators are made by one of the best insulator firms in Europe, and the products of the company are now in use on other lines similar to ours, all over the world. The manufacturers claim them to be good for ten or twelve years, and I know of cases where they have actually hung from the towers for six or eight years on 150,000 volt lines, yet ours are only 110,000 volt lines.

"The strangest part of the entire trouble is that the insulators on both lines go together. We have all our main lines duplicated to avoid trouble of this nature, but the last three times the power has been off the insulators have gone on both sides."

"It just shows the necessity of coupling up with the T. E. L.," was Mayor Hocken's comment. "Had this break occurred at 9 instead of 3 o'clock, we would have been in a bad position. I certainly could not stand for that."

RUSSIA TO BLAME FOR THE TANGLE

Canadian Press Despatch.

NEW YORK, July 3— A cable from Vienna says there is a general disposition there to blame Russian "assumption and bumptiousness" for the present unfortunate tangle between the allies in the Balkans. The Czar's recent letter to Servia and Bulgaria, putting himself in a position of umpire between the two states is still regarded with considerable misgiving."

The graphite deposits of Madagascar are to be exploited by a French company.

A beetle found in great quantities on the high plains of Ecuador roasted like a chestnut, is eaten by the natives of that land.

DOUBLE TRACK FOR C.P.R. THROUGH PETERBORO

TORONTO, July 3—Before winter the Canadian Pacific will be running a double track service between Toronto and Guelph Junction, and next year another lap will be covered on the way to Detroit, with Windsor or Detroit on the west. The ultimate goal is Niagara Falls on the east, as the Falls and Montreal are linked up with a duplicate system.

When all is told there will be four rails from Detroit to Montreal.

MAGISTRATE THINKS COUNCIL SHOULD PROVIDE PLAY GROUNDS

"If the City Council would only stop selling all our town lots, and get some sense and provide suitable playgrounds for these boys instead of leaving them to become loafers and vagrants by letting them roam the streets and hang around the corners; other places are spending millions of dollars in providing play grounds for the children." So said Magistrate Dumble this morning at police court in hearing a charge of the theft of bananas from W. J. Oke's warehouse on Bethune street, against two juveniles.

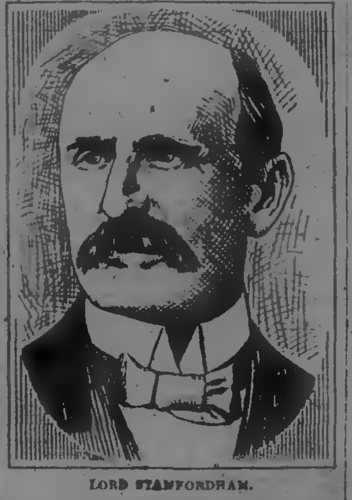
The case was adjourned for a week owing to the fact that some other boys who are mixed up in the case are out of the city.

THE KING'S NEW SECRETARY ALMOST UNKNOWN TO PUBLIC

The Man Who Takes Over Lord Knollys' Position is the Son of a Clergyman and Started as an Officer of Artillery—Favorite of Empress Eugenie and Brought Prince Imperial's Body Home.

With the retirement of Lord Knollys from the post of private secretary to His Majesty King George there comes a new name into the public eye. When a message of congratulation or condolence is sent to the King the reply will no longer be, "His Majesty begs me to state," etc., etc., (Signed) Knollys," but at the end of such missives will appear the word "Stamfordham."

The man who steps into one of the most difficult and onerous official post in the British Empire is almost unknown to the public. Outside of court and official circles the name is a new one. Yet in the staff gathered about His Majesty and among those who come into frequent touch with the sovereign he is known as one of the most brilliant and capable of the royal attaches.



LORD STAMFORDHAM.

Unlike his three immediate predecessors in office Lord Stamfordham is not a scion of what are popularly known as the court families. He is a commoner by birth and son of a country clergyman. His start in life was given him by the Empress Eugenie, through whose influence he secured a post as officer of artillery, and was sent to South Africa. It was he who was selected to bring back to England the remains of the Prince Imperial, son of the Empress.

Since then his rise in the British royal household has been steady, until now he is the logical successor to the secretaryship.

TO WATER STREETS ON SUNDAY MORNING

The City Council—or a part of it—is considering the watering of the central block streets for Sunday. If watering is done for comfort on six days, why not on the seventh. The practical view held by many is that it is done to avoid dust in stores and damage to goods, and that stores being closed on Sunday, is not required.

On the other hand everyone is out in his or her Sunday best, and desirous that the garb be clean and keep clean. Clouds of dust militate against this. Hence the watering will add to personal comfort.

On the other hand it is a bad thing to extend the area of Sunday work. It is a day of rest. True the livery stables, bake shops and other functions of our lives are at work but there is little need to extend these activities. It is doubtful if the men now in charge of watering will consent to work on Sunday.

Possibly a way out would be to have the watering done during the night previous, say from 2 p.m. to 4 a.m. One good soaking would help materially.

Should the Board of Works decide to have the work done, it will meet with general approval, and if it can be handled without friction the convenience will be appreciated.

CHOKING OFF THE CAR

The appalling loss of life incidental to the use of the automobile makes a death roll of alarming proportions. The machine is daily slaying and maiming more people than the railroads. In several American cities a movement is on foot to pass and enforce local legislation ruling off the most frequented streets, during hours from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., to automobile traffic. The danger in districts crowded with pedestrians—shoppers, people from business offices, etc.—is so imminent that something has to be done. If relief is not provided the general public will rise en masse and demand legislation of the most drastic character, get it, and enforce it relentlessly. This is self-defence.

No matter what owners and drivers of machines may think and wish, it may be taken, once for all, that the safety and care of the foot passenger is paramount. He is present in thousands to one machine. The wishes of owners of machines must not be regarded except as far as they are permitted to use the streets under conditions that make them safe for walkers.

It may be argued that the automobile has a right to the streets. It may have, so long as it is not a nuisance. When it reaches the point where it is—and it is fast getting that—then the axe will fall. It is not the duty of the pedestrian to ceaselessly watch for danger. It is for the danger maker to see that he does no harm.

People walking the streets and crossing streets are nearly always doing one of two things while they walk. Engaged in talking to some one, who is also walking, or in thought. The man in the car is not—or he should not be abstracted. His mind and attention is set on one thing—steering that car safely. Safely for himself and for for others. He is the disturber. He is the provoker of disaster and he must be made harmless.

The driver of the machine may set up defense that people crossing the street should do so at recognized crossings. That contention might apply in small places, where streets are unpaved, but one of the reasons advanced—it is put forward in Peterborough that paving the streets will do—as it always does—away with all crossings. The walker is invited to cross where he pleases. The pavement is laid to facilitate his so doing.

Presently there will be trouble. There are signs of it. Some father, whose child has been killed or maimed for life, will exact a personal retribution on the person of the driver, that bring things up with a round turn. If a school teacher but administer punishment to a pupil, he may be, and often is hauled to the Police Court, by the irate parent, but if the same teacher ran over the child with a car, maiming it for life, the parent is supposed to take it as a matter of course, and as an "accident." A few sound threshings administered to reckless drivers would do more to bring them to their senses than all the police court fines of a six months.

Queerly enough, women are the worst offenders in inciting men to run their machines above normal speed. Some youth is entrusted with a machine, packs it full of giggling girls, who provoke him "not to take anybody's dust," and he folishly exceeds the limit of safety.

Men's minds are thinking these things over, and presently we will have legislation so drastic that it will put a damper on the making, selling and owning of cars, if the death roll continues to climb.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Should civic employes be pensioned? This is the problem the City of Calgary is trying to solve. Peterborough has not yet reached that stage of refinement, and is not too anxious about it. If a man gets a decent salary he has a right to live within his means, whether he be a public servant or not, and provide for his old age.

Mr. Arthur Meighen well deserves the honor bestowed upon him in his appointment by Premier Borden to the office of Solicitor-general. Although only a young man of thirty-nine he is looked upon as one of the ablest of our rising young men. He has worked hard and has earned the reward bestowed upon him by his chief.

They seem to be having more than their due of rain in the Northwest. Nature, like human nature, is very fickle and unequal in the bestowal of her gifts. These good things of rain and sunshine might be better distributed, the farmers in the east are praying for rain and those of the west are praying for the rain to stop. But if all these things came as we wanted them, we would not pray at all.

The Suffrage movement in the United States is divided into two distinct camps, the pros. and the antis, and one side seems to be as militant as the other. This is as it should be. It would be much better if the women of England would settle this question among themselves than that they should make it a sex-problem.

The Hottest Mines.

It is said that the hottest mines in the world are those of the famous Comstock lode. On the lower levels the heat is so great that the men cannot work over ten or fifteen minutes at a time. Every known means of mitigating the heat has been tried in vain. Ice melts before it reaches the bottom of the shafts.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, July 2.—At the Canadian Pacific Stock Yards today the offerings were 700 cattle, 700 sheep and lambs, 850 hogs and 1000 calves. Owing to the continued warm weather the trade in cattle was rather slow and the undertone to the market easier, but prices show no important change, except for common stock, which is lower on account of the supply being in excess of requirements. There were no really choice steers for sale and the best sold from $6.75 to $7; fairly good, at $6.25 to $6.50; fair, at $5.75 to $6, and the lower grades at from $3.60 to $5, while butchers' cows brought from $3.25 to $6, and bulls from $4 to $6 per cwt.

The trade in small meats was active and as the supply was not large a steady feeling prevailed in the market and prices showed no further change. Sheep sold at $4.50 per cwt., and lambs, at from $4 to $6, each as to quality. The tone of the market for calves was stronger and prices ruled higher with a good demand and sales were made at from $3 to $11 each, as to size and quality. The market for hogs was steady under a good demand and sales of selected lots were made at $10.25 to $10.50 per cwt., weighed off the cars, and some rough stock sold as low as $10.

TWO CARDINALS.

Newman and Manning Figure In New Book of "Memories."

The late Lord Coleridge's house was one of the two at which Cardinal Newman used to stay on his rare visits to London after he had taken up his abode at Birmingham—the other being the Duke of Norfolk's. Mr. Coleridge, in his recently issued "Memories," writes: "He (the Cardinal) came on one of his periodical visits when my boy Johnnie was about three years old, and about the middle of breakfast, according to custom, he was brought down and sat, as usual, on my wife's knee, who was just opposite the Cardinal at table. I do not think the old man saw my little children very often in an intimate way. . . After gazing at them silently for a little while he became visibly moved, and rising from the table he murmured in a low voice, half introspectively, as it were, "I think I must bless him." He came round the table, and laid his hand on the little child's head, and said a few inaudible words of benediction. I think everyone present was touched, and glad to have been present at so beautiful a moment."

Later the Cardinal asked if he might take Mr. Coleridge's little boy to the Zoo—a request at once complied with—and it must have been a picture to see the old man allowing the boy to draw him on from cage to cage, prattling the meanwhile about their occupants. Matthew Arnold and Cardinal Newman, by the way, met for the first time at Lord Coleridge's house, and "they talked together as a pair of ripe scholars," no one supposing that they were not old and familiar friends.

With Cardinal Manning Coleridge's association was also intimate and constant: "He dined occasionally at my father's house, or, rather, responded to an invitation to do so, and duly sat at my father's table, but he never ate anything whatever; he sometimes crumbled a little bread in his fingers, but nothing passed his lips. No attention was drawn to it, and no one pressed him to eat or drink anything."

Nothing, Mr. Coleridge adds, could be more striking than the contrast between the two great English Cardinals. "Manning was everything that his great colleague was not."

Pill of Live Spider.

The Gresham lectures on "Drugs Old and New," delivered at the City of London School by Dr. F. M. Sandwith, Gresham professor of physic, were no less entertaining than instructive. After pointing out that herbs supplied the first drugs, the lecturer described how animal products were accepted as medicines, some even remaining in the first English pharmacopoea published in London in 1618. Tiger's flesh and new-born puppies were among the old remedies. One book recommended a pill of a live spider. In the 17th and 18th centuries powdered mummies were prescribed, and so great was the demand that fraud led to more mummies being supplied than ever came out of Egypt. John Gerrard, who was chief gardener of Lord Burleigh's garden in the Strand, and had a garden of his own in Holborn (then called a "suburb" of London), published a book in 1597 as his own, although it was, in fact, a translation of a Belgian herbal. Gerrard recommended "Solomon's seal" for the taking away in one night of the blackness of bruises caused by falls "or women's wilfulness in tumbling upon their hasty husbands' fists, or such like!"

Killed by Elm Tree.

Ellum she hateth mankind, and waiteth
Till all the world be still
To drop a limb on the head of him
Who doubteth her sovereign will.

Kipling's lines are recalled by an observation of the Lambeth coroner, who at an inquest recently on Henry Ward Beach, who was killed by fall of an elm branch, said to a witness: "You know the unpleasant habit of elm trees of shedding their branches without any warning in still weather?"

The weather was described by William Kentish, a Peckham coachman, who said he was driving along Half Moon lane, Herne Hill, one Sunday shortly before 11 a.m. There were trees in the gardens and their boughs overhung the pavement and the roadway.

Beach was walking on the pavement towards Kentish's coach when a large bough fell on Beach and on the horse, knocking both down. The thick part of the bough fell on the man, who never moved or spoke. The horse was slightly injured.

Well Cooked Meals vs. Drink.

The Duchess of Marlborough delivered an address before the pupils of the St. Pancras School for Mothers recently.

The duchess said she believed a well-cooked meal is a more effective means of stopping the drink habit than any amount of legislation. The incapacity of many women as cooks and their inability to bring up children properly, she said, is largely responsible for unhappy homes and she hoped for the spread of the system of mothers' schools for the purpose of supplementing the primary domestic teaching of girls in the elementary schools.

Ancient Roman Theatre.

Nearly 13,000 people could be accommodated in the ancient Roman theatre at Dorchester, England. It was carefully designed to prevent the patrons having the sun in their eyes. There were, in fact, "good views from every seat in the house." The theatre at Dorchester was used comparatively recently for a public spectacle and in 1705 over 10,000 spectators gathered there to witness the burning alive of a woman who had poisoned her husband.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

CY WHITTAKER'S PLACE

By JOSEPH C. LINCOLN

Copyright, 1908, by D. Appleton & Co.

She emerged a moment later, followed by an elderly person in a red cardigan jacket and overalls.

"Take the fust turnin' to the left, marm," he said, pointing. "It's pretty nigh to East Trumet town hall. Fust house this side of the blacksmith shop, about two mile, I'd say. Windy day for drivin', ain't it? That horse of yours belongs in Bayport, I cal'late. Looks to me like— Hello, Bailey!"

"Hello, Josh!" grunted Mr. Bangs, adding an explanatory aside to the effect that he knew Josh Atwood, the latter having once lived in Bayport.

"But, say," he asked as they moved on once more, "have we got to go to East Trumet? Jerushy! That's the place where the wind comes from. They raise it over there. Anyhow, they don't raise much else. Whose house you goin' to?"

He had asked the same question at least ten times since leaving home, and each time Miss Dawes had evaded it. She did so now, saying that she was sure she should know the house when they got to it.

The two miles to East Trumet were worse than the twelve which they had come. The wind fairly shrieked here, for the road paralleled the edge of high sand bluffs close by the shore, and the ruts and "thank-you-marms" were trying to the temper. Bailey's was completely wrecked.

"Teacher," he snapped as they reached the crest of a long hill and a quick grab at his hat alone prevented its starting on a balloon ascension, "get out a spell, will you? I've got to swear or bust, and 'long's you're aboard I can't swear. What you standin' still for, you?" he bellowed at poor Henry, the horse, which had stopped to rest. "I cal'late the critter thinks that last cyclone must have blowed me sky high, and he's waitin' to see where I light. Git dap!"

"I guess I shall get out very soon now," panted Phoebe. "There's the blacksmith shop over there near the next hill, and this house in the hollow must be the one I'm looking for."

They pulled up beside the house in the hollow. A little story and a half house it was, and, judging by the neglected appearance of the weeds and bushes in the yard, it had been unoccupied for some time. However, the blinds were now open, and a few fowls about the back door seemed to promise that some one was living there. The wooden letter box by the gate had a name stenciled upon it. Miss Dawes sprang from the buggy and looked at the box.

"Yes," she said, "this is the place. Will you come in, Mr. Bangs? You can put your horse in that barn, I'm sure, if you want to."

But Bailey declined to go in. He declared he was going on to the blacksmith's shop to have that wheel fixed. He would not feel safe to start for home with it as it was. He drove off, and Miss Dawes, knowing from lifelong experience that front doors are merely for show, passed around the main body of the house and rapped on the door in the ell. The rap was not answered, though she could hear some one moving about within and a shrill voice singing "The Sweet By and By." So she rapped again and again, but still no one came to the door. At last she ventured to open it.

A thin woman with her head tied up in a colored cotton handkerchief was in the room vigorously wielding a broom. She was singing in a high cracked voice. The opening of the door let in a gust of cold wind, which struck the singer in the back of the neck and caused her to turn around hastily.

"Hey!" she exclaimed. "Land sakes! You scare a body to death! Shut that door quick! I ain't hankerin' for influenzy. Who are you? What do you want? Why didn't you knock? Where's my specs?"

She took a pair of spectacles from the mantelshelf and set them on the bridge of her thin nose.

"I beg pardon for coming in!" shouted Phoebe. "You are Mrs. Beasley, aren't you?"

"I don't want none," replied Debby, with emphasis. "So there's no use your wastin' your breath."

After some strenuous minutes the visitor managed to make it clear to Mrs. Beasley's mind that she was not a peddler. She tried to add a word of further explanation, but it was effort wasted.

"'Tain't no use!" snapped Debby. "I can't hear you, you speak so faint. Wait till I get my horn. It's in the settin' room."

Phoebe's wonder as to what the "horn" might be was relieved by the widow's appearance a moment later with the biggest ear trumpet her caller had ever seen.

"There, now!" she said, adjusting the instrument and thrusting the bell shaped end under the teacher's nose. "Talk into that. If you ain't a peddler, what be you—sewin' machine agent?"

Phoebe explained that she had come some distance on purpose to see Mrs. Beasley. She was interested in the Thayers, who used to live in Orham, particularly in Mr. John Thayer, who died in 1854. She had been told that Debby formerly lived with the Thayers and could no doubt remember a great deal about them.

Mrs. Beasley, her hearing now within forty-five degrees of the normal, grew interested. She ushered her visitor into the adjoining room and proffered her a chair.

"What you so interested in the Thayers for?" inquired Debby. "One of the heirs, be you? They didn't leave nothin'."

No, the schoolmistress was not an heir, was not even a relative of the family. But she was—was interested just the same. A friend of hers was a relative and—

"What is your friend," inquired the inquisitor—"a man?"

There was no reason why Miss Dawes should have changed color, but, according to Debby's subsequent testimony, she did; she blushed, so the widow declares.

"No," she protested. "Oh, no! It's a —she's a child, that's all—a little girl."

Mrs. Beasley remembered many things, but nothing at all concerning John Thayer's life in the west.

"He never wrote home but once or twice afore he died," she said, "and when he did Emily, his wife, never told me what was in his letters. She always burnt 'em, I guess. I used to hunt around for 'em when she was out, but she burnt 'em to spite me, I cal'late. Her and me didn't get along any too well. She said I talked too much to other folks about what was none of their business. Now, anybody that knows me knows that ain't one of my failin's. I told her so; says I"—

And so on for ten minutes. Then Phoebe ventured to repeat the words "out west," and her companion went off on a new tack. She had just been west herself. She had been on a visit to her husband's niece, who lived in Arizona—in Blazeton, Ariz. "It's the nicest town ever you see," she continued, "and the smartest, most up to date place. Talk about the west bein' oncivilized! My land, you ought to see that town—electric lights and telephones and—and—I don't know what all!"

This was but the beginning. It was evident that Mrs. Beasley had thoroughly enjoyed herself in Blazeton and that the sorrows of the bereaved Desire Higgins had been one of the principal sorrows of that enjoyment. The schoolmistress endeavored to turn the subject, but it was useless.

"I fetched home a whole pile of them newspapers," continued Debby. "They was awful interestin'; full of pictures of Blazeton buildin's and leadin' folks and all. And in some of the back numbers was the advertisement about Mr. Higgins. I do wish I could show 'em to you, but I lent 'em to Mrs. Atwood, up to the Center. If 'twan't such a ways I'd go and fetch 'em. Mrs. Atwood's been awful nice to me. She took care of my trunks and things when I went west—yes, and afore that when I went to Bayport to keep house for that miser'ble Cap'n Whittaker. I ain't told you about that, but I will by and by. Them trunks had lots of things in 'em that I didn't want to lose or have anybody see. My diaries—I've kept a diary since 1850—and"—

"Diaries?" interrupted Phoebe, grasping at straws. "Did you keep a diary while you were at the Thayers?"

"Yes. Now, why didn't I think of that afore? More 'n likely there'd be somethin' in that to help you with that geographical tree. I used to put down everything that happened and— Where you goin'?"

Miss Dawes had risen and was peering out of the window.

"I was looking to see if my driver was anywhere about," she replied. "I thought perhaps he would drive over to Mrs. Atwood's and get the diary for you. But I don't see him."

Just then, from around the corner of the house, peeped an agitated face; an agitated forefinger beckoned. Debby stepped to the window beside her visitor, and the face and finger went out of sight as if pulled by a string.

Miss Phoebe smiled.

"I think I'll go out and look for him," she said. "He must be near here. I'll be right back, Mrs. Beasley."

Without stopping to put on her jacket, she hurried through the dining room, out of the door and around the corner. There she found Mr. Bangs in a highly nervous state.

"Why didn't you tell me 'twas Debby Beasley you was comin' to see?" he demanded. "If you'd mentioned that deef image's name you'd never got me to drive you, I tell you that!"

"Yes," answered the teacher sweetly, "I imagined that. That's why I didn't tell you, Mr. Bangs. Now I want you to do me a favor. Will you drive over to Trumet Center and deliver a note and get a package for me? Then you can come back here, and I shall be ready to start for home."

"Drive—drive nothin'! The blacksmith's out and won't be back for another hour. His boy's there, but he's a big enough lunkhead to try bailin' out a dory with a fork, and that buggy axle is bent so it's simply got to be fixed. I'd no more go home to Ketury with that buggy as 'tis than I'd— Oh, my land of love!"

The ejaculation was almost a groan. There, at the corner, ear trumpet adjusted and spectacles glistening, stood Debby Beasley. Bailey appeared to wilt under her gaze as if the spectacles were twin suns.

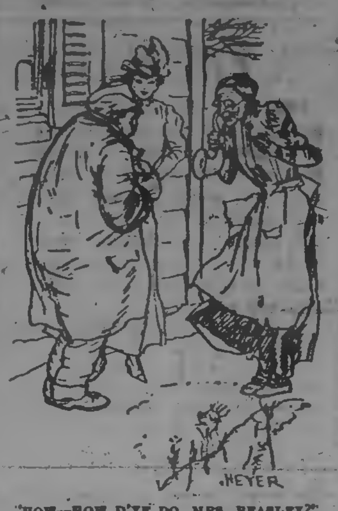
"How—how d'ye do, Mrs. Beasley?" faltered Mr. Bangs. "I hope you're smart."

"Yes," she answered. "I'm pretty toler'ble, thank you. What was the matter, Mr. Bangs? Why didn't you come in? Do you usually make your calls round the corner?"

The schoolmistress came to the rescue.

"You mustn't blame Mr. Bangs, Mrs. Beasley," she explained. "He wasn't responsible for what happened at Captain Whittaker's. He is the gentleman who drove me over here. I was going to send him to Mrs. Atwood's for the diary."

"Who said I was blamin' him?" queried the widow. "If he was that little Tidditt thing I might feel different. But, considerin' that I got this horn from Mr. Bangs, I'm willin' to let bygones be past. It helps my hearin' a lot. Them ear fixin's was good while they lasted, but they got out of kilter quick. I shan't bother Mr. Bangs. If he can square his own conscience I'm satisfied."



"HOW—HOW D'YE DO, MRS. BEASLEY?"

Bailey's conscience was not troubling him greatly, and he seemed relieved. Phoebe told of the damaged buggy.

"Humph!" grunted the widow. "The horse didn't get bent, too, did he?"

Mr. Bangs indignantly declared that the horse was all right.

"Um—hum! Well, then, I guess I can supply a carriage. My fust cousin Ezra that died used to be doctor here, and he give me his sulky when he got a new one. It's out in the barn. Go fetch your horse and harness him in. I'll be ready time the harnessin's done."

"You?" gasped the teacher. "You don't need to go, Mrs. Beasley. I wouldn't think of giving you that trouble."

"No trouble at all. I wouldn't trust nobody else with them trunks. And, besides, I always do enjoy ridin'. You could go, too, Miss Dorcas, but the sulky seat's too narrer for three. You can set in the settin' room till we get back. 'Twon't take us long. Don't say another word. I'm a-goin'."

RHEUMATISM KEPT HIM IN BED

Suffered Tortures Until "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him

McMILLAN'S CORNER, ONT.,
SEPT. 30th, 1910

"Your remedy, "Fruit-a-tives" is a perfect panacea for Rheumatism. For years, I suffered distressing pain from Sciatica or Sciatic Rheumatism, being laid up several times a year for days at a time. I went to different doctors who told me there was no use doing anything—it would pass away. They gave me mustard plasters and other remedies that did no good. Plasters took no effect on me—except to blister me and make raw spots. I took many advertised remedies without benefit, but fortunately, about two years ago, I got "Fruit-a-tives" and they cured me.

Since then, I take "Fruit-a-tives" occasionally and keep free of pain. I am satisfied "Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism and they will cure anyone who takes them as directed. If this letter would be of value to you, publish it" JOHN B. McDONALD.

Indeed, this letter is of value to us and to the thousands of sufferers from Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago and Neuralgia. It points the way to a certain cure. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50 trial size, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

New York will manufacture and sell ice at cost to the poor this summer.

JUDGE BARHORST DOES HIS DUTY TO RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS

If you suffer from Rheumatism and don't read this advice, then the terrible disease must have robbed you of your power to be fair to yourself. Read it:

"I, John Barhorst, Justice of the Peace of McLean Township, Ft. Loramie, Ohio, do certify that after treatment by three doctors without result, I have been cured of a very bad case of Rheumatism by using two bottles of RHEUMA. It is now two years since I used the remedy, and I am still as well as ever. Previous to using RHEUMA I was a cripple, walking with crutches, and I feel it my duty to let other sufferers from Rheumatism know what it will do. The result seems almost miraculous to me. I have advised RHEUMA to at least a dozen persons, and each one speaks as highly of it as I. I will answer anyone suffering from the disease if a two-cent stamp is enclosed."—May 31, 1912.

You can secure a bottle of RHEUMA for only 50 cents at Warne's Drug Co., and they say, if not as advertised, money back. It's just as good for Gout, Arthritis, Lumbago and Sciatica.

Among the Chinese They Are Gladly Accepted as Presents.

Some one who knows Chinese people very well once told a tale to show that they do not permit themselves the luxury of nerves. She said she had gone one day, before the Boxer riots, to visit an old lady who lived outside the country far beyond Weihsien. When the American woman arrived the old lady was out, but presently she came in and announced that she had just been out "watching the men dig her grave, but as it began to rain she had told them to wait for a pleasanter day." She did not die for years after that, but she had the comforting assurance that her grave was ready for her without any unseemly haste whenever she cared to occupy it.

The same American had the experience of sleeping in a room with a very large coffin when she was visiting a Chinese friend, and the next morning the old grandfather of the family called her attention to its excellences and explained that his son had made him a present of it. "Isn't the wood fine!" he asked admiringly. "It cost a lot of money." Old people accept such presents as marks of filial love, and not at all as a hint for them to occupy the coffin.—New York Post.

Priceless Tears.

Before General Luke Wright became governor general of the Philippines he practiced law in Memphis. It so befell on one occasion that he was engaged to defend a man for murder, while his son was the state prosecutor.

In his final argument while pleading with the jurors to free his client General Wright wept copiously. As he finished his speech and sat down, wiping his still streaming eyes, the younger Wright rose to close the case for the commonwealth.

"Gentlemen of the jury," he began, "I am overcome with admiration for my father. He has powers which even I, his son, did not suspect he possessed. You behold him shedding tears for his client, who, I am informed, has paid him only a small fee. Gentlemen of the jury, I never before knew my father could weep in court for less than $5,000!"—Saturday Evening Post.

A PRESENTATION AT IVANHOE

IVANHOE, July 3.—Sunday morning Rev. Mr. Buckler preached his farewell sermon here, as he and his family intend moving to Peterborough this week. In the afternoon after the usual services of the Sunday School, Mrs. Buckler was asked to take a seat on the platform while Miss Stella Mitts read the following address:

Ivanhoe, June 29th, 1913.

Dear Mrs. Buckler,—We felt as though in saying good-bye to-day we would like to express our thanks to you for the splendid help you have given up, in the Sunday School as teacher of our Bible class, in the League as organizer and president, in the choir as our leader, and in the Auxiliary as its president. In the Mission Band too, you always gave your very efficient help.

We have always found you bright, cheerful and yet self-sacrificing. Your example has been like that of our Maker, a lesson in unselfishness. We have always found you the same; In our successes, ready to rejoice with us; in our sorrows, ready to sympathize; in times of discouragement you have comforted us and helped us to take a fresh beginning.

In our concerts, our picnics and social evenings not only in our own church but in the neighboring churches, you were ever ready and willing to give us excellent help. We have appreciated it.

In the parsonage we shall miss you as an adviser, a neighbor and a friend. You were always willing to aid us in our difficulties. In fact we felt in you we had always "a friend at court."

Mrs. Norton has said, "They serve God well, who serve His creatures." This may be truly said of you, Mrs. Buckler; you were ever most solicitous over our physical and spiritual welfare. You were ever about our Father's business.

Now, we would ask you to accept this purse as a small token of our appreciation. We know that it is not within our power to reward a work like this. But the approving smile of our Master and His "well done, good and faithful servant" can and will.

Too much praise cannot be given to your daughter, Miss Annela Buckler, for her very efficient services as organist, both in the choir and Epworth League and also as superintendent of the Pocket Testament League.

Our prayers and kindest good wishes will follow you all to your new home and field of labor. We hope you will not forget us, but still be present with us in spirit if not in person.

Signed on behalf of the Sunday School,

T. S. TUMMON,
C. A. MITTS.

Mrs. Buckler replied on behalf of herself and Miss Buckler and gave the members of the Sunday School excellent advice.

FITZPATRICK—CRAWFORD

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in All Saints Church, Peterboro, on Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock when Miss Oral Gertrude, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Crawford of Lakefield, became the bride of Mr John Fitzpatrick, of Peterboro. The bride, who was given away by her uncle, Mr. Wills looked charming as she entered the church attired in a gown of cream satin trimmed with French lace, and a veil looped with orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of bridal roses and lillies of the valley. Miss Edith Fitzpatrick assisted the bride wearing a gown of cream voile with trimmings of pink satin, and carried pink carnations. Mr. Percy Welsh of Peterboro acted as best man.

After the ceremony many hearty congratulations were bestowed upon the happy couple, and a dainty repast was served. The tables were artistically decorated with white and pink carnations, and were presided over by Miss E. Taylor and Miss L. Nelson, who were dressed in white, and wore white carnations.

The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl pendant, to the bridesmaid a pearl crescent and to the groomsman a pearl stick pin. Many beautiful presents were received, among which was a beautiful arm-chair from the girls of the Lamp Department of the C. G. E., and a gent's rocker from the boys of the Lock room at the Lock Works.

Mr. and Mrs. Fitzpatrick left on the 4.10 train for a short trip to Hamilton and Rochester. Their many friends wish them a long and happy life.

THE KING'S REFUGE.

Boscobel House and Oak Tree Will Be Sold.

The famous Boscobel House, with its estate of 700 acres, where King Charles II. of England hid after the battle of Worcester and where there still grows the historic oak tree in which he concealed himself, is to be sold at auction.

Situated on the borders of Shropshire and Staffordshire, the house was built about the year 1549 in the centre of Brewood forest, and had been used for many years before King Charles' time as a hiding place for Roman Catholic priests and political refugees.

But its principal interest is wrapped in the time when it sheltered King Charles in September, 1651, after the battle of Worcester. Here he lay hid for several days, and in the paddock adjoining, protected by iron palisading, is the oak tree in which he took refuge when surprised by horsemen. It is said there is no doubt about this being the identical tree.

The principal part of the house remains now as it was then, and in the garden is a curious mound surmounted by an arbor much as it was at the time of King Charles' sojourn.

Prince Charles, the eldest son of King Charles I. of England, was 19 at the time of his father's beheading by the victorious Parliamentarians, in 1649. He was then at the Hague and immediately assumed the title of King. The colony of Virginia in North America invited him to set up his kingdom among them, but, in 1650, the Scots offered him their crown, so he went to Scotland and was crowned at Scone in the beginning of 1651. After the defeat of the Scots at Dunbar he put himself at the head of their army of 10,000 men and dashed into England. But it was then that Cromwell put forth his supreme military genius and, with his Ironsides, crushed the royal troops at Worcester.

Charles knew that for the present all was lost. He showed courage and address in covering the flight of his beaten soldiers and afterward turned his steps to Boscobel House, where he was assured of a secure retreat from the pursuing Roundheads. At White Ladies the King had his long hair cut, his hands and face smeared with soot; and for his royal dress he substituted the green and greasy suit of a countryman and a leathern doublet. He next endeavored to reach Wales, but on account of the vigilance of the Puritans was obliged to return to Boscobel wood. With Major Carlis, who had led the forlorn hope at Worcester, he ascended a thick pollard oak, from which they watched at intervals during the day the Roundheads in search of them, passing by unaware of their near presence. In the evening they descended, and made their way to the manor house, where the King remained hidden two days.

After many dangers Charles escaped to France where he maintained a royal court, such as it was. He had little money, except what was provided by his devoted followers and his adherents in Great Britain and Ireland. He was content to wait. Time would fight for him more surely than infantry and horse. As a child and youth he had borne hardship and privation and seen the red blood flow upon the battlefield. Now he would be a king of pleasure, if he were to be king at all. The red blood should become the rich red burgundy, the sound of trumpets and kettledrums give way to the melody of lutes and viols. He had a singularly pleasant manner and a word from him could win over the harshest opponents.

The old cavaliers who accompanied their master in exile were like Napoleon's veterans in Elba. With their tall powerful forms they stalked about the courtyards, longing grimly for the time when they could once more smell the pungent powder of the red field of war. But the change was coming. The English people were tiring of Puritanism and praying in secret for their King. So it came about that one morning in May, 1660, the King came into his own, landing at Dover and being escorted to London by frenzied, adoring crowds of his people. The Merry Monarch was at home again and, although that early popularity was at times strained, he never wholly lost the good will of his people. The treasury might be bankrupt; the navy might be routed by the Dutch; the King himself might be too much given to dissipation; but his people forgave him all, because everybody knew that "Old Rowley"—their nickname for him — would clap an honest citizen on the back, and joke with all who came to see him feed the swans in Regent's Park.

Turns Coal Cars Upside Down.

A novel device for rapidly unloading gondola coal cars has been adopted by an English railroad at one of its terminals. The car is run on to a section of track extending between two circular steel frames, which form rings large enough to admit the passage of the car. A clamping device holds the car fast to the track when in position, and track, car and all are then rotated until the car is practically upside down, and its contents are discharged into a pit under the track, from which an automatic conveyor carries the coal to the storage pockets.

Ireland's National Flag.

The design and shape of the national flag which is to float over the Irish Parliament Buildings is a topic that is now keenly exercising the minds of Irish students.

It will, no doubt, come as a revelation to many Irishmen when they are told that there never was a national flag for Ireland. The golden harp on green; the golden harp on blue; blue, green and gold; the golden sunburst on green—all are familiar and each has secured a certain measure of popularity.

MARVELS OF PHOTOGRAPHY.

How Creatures Invisible to the Eye Are Shown as Monsters.

Photographing the invisible sounds like a misnomer, but correct to say invisible by the unaided eye. This complex and valuable science is revealing wonders in the excessively minute, and myriad objects, animate and inanimate, are brought to view whose existence has all along been unknown.

Two methods of illuminating the objects are in use—strong light is passed through very thin layers of the substance or reflected from the outside surface of thick masses and also from the external portions of exceedingly small opaque bodies.

These solid particles can be placed on glass slides or floated in transparent liquids, as a drop of water between two very thin glasses. Pinch the glasses close together; there is no danger of killing the smaller kinds of animals, such as bacteria and microbes. They have plenty of room in a film of water so thin as to be beyond imagination.

The magnifying lenses for expansion of images of these minute objects require the most consummate skill in manufacture, the microcamera likewise, and the two combined are triumphs of human genius. The finished products, the perfected pictures, are highly educational. Many different kinds of greatly improved glass are now made in Jena, Germany, and these have almost revolutionized microscopy. And the wonders accomplished by using the most sensitive plates ever made, and these with many different kinds of waves of light, are almost beyond comprehension.

The "Arabian Nights" people are eclipsed. Thus put a drop of stagnant water on glass, lay a thin plate upon it, press down, and the layer of water will be thin indeed. Put it under the microscope, turn bright light through the layer, pass this light into the very small camera and let it fall on a prepared moving film; then the amazing effect of animals in motion is to be fixed on a film that is itself in motion. This film, a long strip, is then placed on rollers and unwound, so that it will pass powerful projecting lenses in a moving picture outfit.

This is, indeed, photographing the unknown. Since man appeared on earth no such aid to refined research into nature's labyrinths has been discovered. Then a large audience can see all that there is in a minute drop of water on a screen from ten to sixteen feet in diameter. Totally invisible creatures become monsters and move with great rapidity before the eyes of the people. Thousands of new species of minute living organisms are rescued from realms of the unknown. —Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

WASH DRESS.

It Has a Gracefully Cut Tunic Drapery.

NEW EPONGE GOWN.

Tunics are used in a great many wash dresses, in both heavy and lightweight materials. They are becoming to most people and give an opportunity for originality in design and trimming. With the tunic it is possible also to have a frock which seems to be rather elaborate, yet can be done up by the average laundress.

The dress seen in the cut is of tan sponge combined with plain linen. The only trimming used is large white pearl buttons. The chicness of the costume is attained in the very unusual way in which the two materials are combined.

THE SAME OLD SEASONS.

They Are Just About as They Were a Couple of Centuries Ago.

The belief of many people that the seasons are undergoing some kind of change has led Professor Ignazio Galli to examine the weather records of the entire eighteenth century.

The investigations of Professor Galli show fifty-one winters that lasted well into spring, thirty-one warm winters, thirteen unusually early winters, twelve mild winters followed by cold springs, eleven mild winters followed by mild springs, eleven cold autumns, eight very warm springs, eight summers with frosts and five very warm autumns. There was one instance of six consecutive warm seasons. More than three-quarters of the periods of unusual weather occurred between the middle of autumn and the end of spring. Many times during the eighteenth century the same apparent anomalies recurred at the same seasons in several successive years. In every case the seasons regained their normal characteristics.

There have always been persons who imagined that the seasons were becoming warmer or colder than before. There is, however, small foundation for such beliefs. The world has indeed experienced many cold summers and many warm winters, but such seasons are not the rule, but the exception.—Youth's Companion.

New Cotton Fabrics.

The semi-military Balkan styles lend themselves well to development in the new cotton stuffs. Belted jackets of ratine or eponge are mounted over skirts of cotton crape or harmonica, crape with a thickened thread in the weave which gives the effect of pin tucks or broken stripes. Buttons are the first requisite of the Balkan costume, and the buttons must be gay enough to make themselves heard, so to speak, on the costume or their effect will be lost. With such frocks are worn hats of a smart semi-tailored character and buttoned boots of white buckskin.

The lard used in the United States in a year would fill a pail 295 ft in diameter and 334 feet deep.

NORWOOD NEWS

Special Correspondence.

NORWOOD, July 2.—A special meeting of the Board of Education was held on Monday evening, June 30th.

Those present were J. A. Finlay, (chairman), Messrs. Burkell, Doherty, Cuthbertson, Marks, Elliott and Webster.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and adopted.

Mr. Harris, of the Dominion Radiator Co., was present and gave estimates of costs of heating apparatus in Public School.

Moved by Mr. Elliott, seconded by Mr. Cuthbertson, that Mr. Pakenham and Mr. Finlay be a committee to advertise in the Globe and Mail and Empire, for prices on a tubular boiler, and also on fire box boiler suitable to heat the public school.—Carried.

Board adjourned.

Miss Maud Ball, of Ayr, is visiting friends in Norwood this week.

Miss Hattie McLachlan, of Bracebridge is spending her vacation at her sister's, Miss M. E. McLachlan, Peterborough street.

Mr. George Duffield and family left on Tuesday morning of this week for their summer cottage at Stoney Lake.

Now that the schools are closed Norwood's population will be sadly depleted for the next two months as nearly everybody will seek the cool breezes of the lakes and rivers.

Quite a number of Norwood people braved the heat and went to Havelock on the first of July to take in the citizens' annual picnic. Needless to say, they all had an enjoyable time.

The weather for the past two weeks has been exceptionally hot and dry. Rain is badly needed in this locality. Unless we get rain this week some of the crops will be very short. The hot weather is bringing the corn in very rapidly, and this feed unit will figure very prominently in the stock fodder during the coming winter.

The Better Farming special train that called here and stayed all day on Friday last, attracted considerable attention. A large number of people took advantage of the opportunity and paid a visit to the cars during the stay here, and were able to learn many things, whereby the farming and dairying branches can be improved on, thereby increasing the profits accruing from these occupations.

The Presbyterian Sunday School held a garden party and lawn social at the church grounds on Monday evening of this week. The evening's amusements were enlivened by the presence of the Norwood band, which furnished music from 8 o'clock to 10 o'clock.

The union Methodist and Presbyterian Sunday School annual excursion, which was to have taken place on Friday last to Lindsay, was postponed until Friday of this week, July 4th.

On Tuesday, July 1st, the Baptist Sunday School had their picnic to Trent Bridge. Quite a large number attended and spent a very enjoyable day.

Mr. G. Andrews, of Albert College Belleville, is at his home here for the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Andrews, Havelock, visited their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Johnston, on Sunday last.

The High School boys, who went to Kingston for a two weeks' drill on the Signalling Corps, returned home on Friday last after a very pleasant and profitable outing.

After the regular services of the Epworth League last Tuesday night a very pleasant surprise was tendered Mrs. Rev. Johnston, on the eve of her departure for Lakefield, where Rev. Johnston has been assigned a pastor of the Methodist church. Mrs. Johnston was asked to come forward and take the chair, while Mrs. Benjamin Kindred read the following address:

Dear Mrs. Johnston.— We, the members of the E.L.C.E. of the Keene Methodist church, regret your removal from our midst, and feel that we cannot allow you to depart without acknowledging our appreciation of your labors among us during your stay with us the past four years, your example has been such that might well be followed by all. While your constant, Christian department under all circumstances has ever won the respect of all, you have been faithful in the discharge of your duties in the League, Sunday school and other departments of church work, in view of which we wish to convey to you the high sense of our appreciation and regard which we, one and all entertain toward you, and as a more tangible recognition we beg you to accept this chair as a slight token of our esteem, with the wish that you may long live to use it and enjoy rest and ease from your labors.

Wishing you and Mr. Johnston a very happy and prosperous term in your new field of labor, we are,

Yours in the Work,

CANNOT CONNECT WITH CITY SEWER

North Monaghan Resident Makes Application in Vain

Israel Payne, who resides in North Monaghan, wrote the Board of Works last night, with the request that he be allowed to connect with the city sewer; but his request was not granted as there is no precedent and the Board did not wish to register one.

It was stated that a similar application had been refused some time ago, in another locality.

SATISFACTORY SERVICE

The Grand Trunk Railway System have received a communication from the Barnum & Bailey Circus in connection with the handling of their four trains over their lines in Canada which reads as follows: "We take pleasure in stating that your service in handling our shows has been most satisfactory; we also speak a word for your employees with whom we came in contact. They all seemed to do their utmost to make it pleasant for us and I assure you it was greatly appreciated by our people."

A PAYING BUSINESS.

Authoress Who Does Not Neglect Home Duties For Literary Work.

"I am aware," said Mrs. Rinehart, author of popular plays and novels, in a recent interview, "that folks imagine Mary Roberts Rinehart is an old maid, with a lean, wrinkled face, spectacles, a dress that doesn't fit and perhaps a parrot, or that she is mannish in her garb and yearns for a vote, or that she talks of art and the wonders of Bohemia. I know they do, and it hurts me.

"I'm a regular person, with a home and a husband and three children, with all the desire of my sex to wear the best gowns I can have and wear them as well as the next woman. I don't yearn for a vote. I don't talk about art, because I'm busy with my household and my writing. As for Bohemia, I have no part or parcel of it.

"We have a Pomeranian and an Airedale terrier and a Persian cat. We have a lot of chickens—Orpingtons, Plymouth Rocks and Wyandottes, all white—and a few turkeys.

"I have a very pleasant library in our home at Sewickley. It is equipped with all the books, pictures and desks that any author's heart could desire, but—I can't write in it. The only work I can do in our house is running the house. In a Pittsburgh office building I have a small office, with a plain table and chair in it. There I do my writing. I consider five hours' work a good day, and then I go back to Sewickley and take up my household duties and pleasures again.

"So you see literature is more of a business than a passion with me. I like to write, but it doesn't take up all my thoughts. There is a demand for what I turn out, and I produce it as carefully and conscientiously as any manufacturer would produce collars or candy.

"It has had its rewards like any other business. There were lean years and fat years. The leanest of the lean years brought $1,200, and in the fattest of the fat I earned $50,000. I once made $5,000 in three weeks."

THE FIRST WINDOW.

What Is Supposed to Have Happened After It Was Made.

A window is an aperture in an otherwise unbroken wall. It, the said aperture, was invented for at least two reasons—one to provide air and the other to enable the light to penetrate the cell, thus saving candles, coal oil, gas or electricity, as the case and community and time may be.

No hotel proprietor ever invented the window. No record exists of the age or origin of the window, but common sense teaches us that some cave man started the custom of windowing habitations by poking a hole through the clay wall of his residence and finding the resultant light and air good to see and to feel.

Whereupon Mrs. Cavedweller sniffed contemptuously and fastened the branch of a fig tree over the newly invented window in such a way as to keep out as much light as possible.

"What's that?" inquired the head of the cave.

"That's a curtain," was the not uncertain answer.—Pearson's Weekly.

LIFE INSURANCE

THE pessimist and the prophet of woe have no rightful place in any consideration of the expediency of insuring life. But certain hard facts should be squarely faced by every man of moderate means who has anyone dependent on him. Hundreds of men are yearly rejected for life insurance who would have been accepted had they not delayed their applications until ill health had come upon them. Why do men in good condition take such a long chance of remaining well? It is an impressive fact that out of 8549 holders of policies in a leading life insurance company who died in the past year, only 64 died of old age. The remainder were carried away by disease or accident. Hence the wisdom of insuring early in life. The best years for saving are from 20 to 40, and no man should let that period pass without taking out an insurance policy. For that part of his career an endowment policy, which is likely to mature while he is still living and can secure the proceeds of it himself, is to be preferred.

There will probably always be poor old men, their ranks will be recruited from the successful men of an earlier date, and fortunate is he who has made certain provision by means of endowment insurance in the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

SHIPS JUST LIKE A VILLAGE.

Strange Little Worlds Are the South Pacific Ocean Steamers.

In the morning (how strange at sea) I was awakened by the bleating of a lamb and by a lusty cockcrow. The Royal Mail steamers of the west coast are a strange little world. Built for an ocean where storms are unknown, they combine certain comforts not to be found on much more pretentious boats.

Their saloons and cabins are exceptionally large and open directly upon the promenade decks that stretch the entire length of the ship, there being, properly speaking, no steerage and no second class. The natives and others who cannot afford the first class ticket travel in the "cubierta," as it is called, a deck at the stern roofed with canvas, but otherwise open, where in picturesque confusion, surrounded by bags and bundles, they loll in hammocks or lie wrapped in shawls.

Toward this deck the hencoop faces—a big two story affair, partly filled with ripening fruits, bananas, oranges and the like and partly with chickens, ducks and other forlorn looking fowl, fattening for the table. Between decks stand your beef and mutton on the hoof, gazing mournfully up at you as you look down the hatchways.

Upon this homelike boat, quiet and contented, with no unseemly hurry, you meander down the coast at ten knots. The air is soft as a caress, and for at least eight months of the year the sea is as placid as a mountain lake, a glassy mirror reflecting an azure sky.—Ernest Peixotto in Scribner's Magazine.

POCKETS VERSUS HAND BAGS.

Real Reason of the Subjection of Woman to Man.

Civilized man finds it difficult to make his way through life without a dozen pockets. The ordinary walking suit has fifteen. Civilized woman makes her way through life without pockets, depending on a single bag carried in the hand. The professional humorists have never tired of commenting on woman's pocketless condition, but it is really no laughing matter.

Here is a sex difference which is something more than fashion, which goes to the very heart of the subjection of woman to man. If we accept Spencer's definition of the evolutionary process as consisting in progress from an indefinite homogeneity to a definite heterogeneity the superior position of man is at once established. His fifteen diversified pockets, each allocated to a separate use—watch, cigar case, pocketknife, purse, newspaper and package of garden seeds—need only be contrasted with the single reticule in which the female of the species stores away an unco-ordinated mass of handkerchiefs, toilet articles, car fare, press clippings, telephone addresses, dress goods samples, confectionery, memoranda and tradesmen's bills that have long been settled by check.

Strong in his pockets, man walks the earth free in the play of his upper limbs, whereas woman sacrifices the use of her right arm before venturing out in a world of street cars, motor cars, moving staircases, elevators and ticket booths.—New York Post.

No Wonder She Behaved.

"I believe," said the minister, with a twinkle in his eye, "that the saying that children and fools tell the truth" is true. The other day my wife and I were invited out to dinner. The children of the family were so remarkably well behaved that my wife remarked:

"'What lovely, well behaved children yours are, Mrs. Brown.'

"Both Mr. and Mrs. Brown beamed at this approval of their offspring, when up piped little Mary, 'Well, pa said that if we didn't behave he'd knock our blocks off, didn't you, pa?'"—Mothers' Magazine.

Royal Informality.

At Cadinen, Emperor William's model farm in West Prussia, where he loves to tramp about in rough clothes and high top boots, there is a certain blacksmith whose hand is never too grimy for his kaiser to shake. The Princess Victoria Luise from earliest years has shared her father's liking for the man's sterling qualities. One day the emperor and princess, in company with a high official, called at the smithy. As its owner turned from work to welcome them the kaiser introduced him as "a special friend of my daughter's."—Pictorial Review.

Toasted Bugs.

An insect much resembling the June bug and found in great quantities in the high plains about Quito, capital of Ecuador, is toasted and eaten as a delicacy by the natives of that country. It is sold in the streets in the same manner as are chestnuts in the cities of this country. The roasted bugs taste very much like toasted bread.

"Well, he didn't seem any too well pleased," replied the boob.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Cost of Living

IS A PROBLEM that affects, in a greater or less degree, every member of the community. It presses hard on some, and on a few its effect is a negligible quantity

THE enterprising merchant is thoroughly alive to the fact that the high cost of living is in many ways an oppressive burden. He knows that the margin between income and expenditure is often a very narrow one. He buys newspaper space to let people know that he knows. In short, he advertises.

The merchant who advertises has something worth while to tell. That stands to reason, don't it, because newspaper space costs money? It will pay you, therefore, to watch carefully the announcements of the stores that advertise. You'll find all the good stores advertising in

The Daily Review

THE persistent reader of newspaper advertisements has discovered the best way to combat the high cost of living. His dollar has a greater buying power than that of the non-reader—or spasmodic reader—of ads because he employs it with more knowledge and more discrimination. It is an easy matter to cut down your living expenses by fifteen, twenty or twenty-five per cent.—and even more—by being a careful student of the daily store ads. In this way you will get "wise" to the values. You will ask for the advertised article at the advertised price and you will know before you go shopping what you are going to pay.

CHASE AFTER HENS WAXED WARM

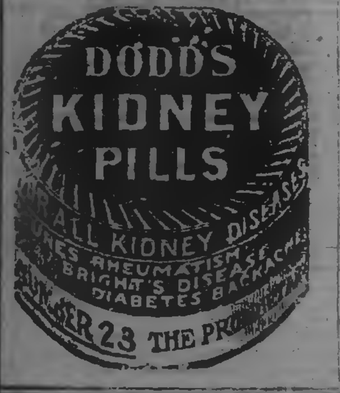
Hot Time on Hunter Street When Hens Broke Loose

Considerable excitement was caused at the office of the Dominion Express Co. this morning when three hens, the property of a local man who resides on Princess street managed to get out of their enclosure. After a mad race with excitement reigning supreme, the hens gained Hunter street, where one of the trio started for the Bank of Commerce, while the other two commenced to surmount the long flight of steps reaching to the offices above the bank. The hen that entered the bank soon became aware that it was out of its place and it retreated to the door where it flew over the heads of the express company employes who were assembled for the purpose of cutting off the retreat. After getting out of the bank the bird joined its pals at the foot of the steps and they started for the top. The hens were met by a small force of people consisting of express men, stenographers and a few others, who were on the track of the feathered creatures.

The capture of the birds was finally effected by two of the company's employes, for whose heroism after everybody from manager to office boy had quit, the company should present a medal.



ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

Story of a Locomotive Engineer's Courtship

By VERNON ARNOLD

Jim Tucker was a locomotive engineer. He was thirty-five years old, unmarried, and kept his belongings in a boarding house at one of the terminals of the railroad for which he worked. Since his was a day run he usually slept in his room nights.

Life was beginning to get tiresome for Jim—that is, when he was not running his engine. He had lost a young man's taste for amusement, but, not being an educated person, did not care for books. When on time he got in from his day's run out and return at 4 o'clock and was ready to leave the roundhouse at from 5 to 6. His evening meal was finished by 7, and he read a newspaper till 8. The rest of the evening was very lonesome for him. He would sit in his room wishing for a home, a nice little cottage not far from the roundhouse, where he might be comfortable between the hour of his coming in the evening and his departure in the morning. He would picture a tidy woman standing in the doorway waiting for him and several "wee things toddlin'" down the walk with outstretched arms on the way to meet him. Then he would sigh, read the advertisements in the newspaper and go to bed.

Not far from the terminal which Jim considered his abiding place, about 200 yards from the track, was a small house that looked as if it might have been built by the white settlers of the country. It stood in the center of a four acre lot, on a part of which were forest trees. When Jim had commenced his runs on the road the place was uninhabited, and, although he had passed it twice a day for six years, he had never seen a person on the premises. Notwithstanding its dilapidated appearance, it required little stretch of the imagination to picture it a pleasant home. A porch, an arbor, a small barn, all in a state of decay, remained, and Jim as he drove by it loved to fancy the persons who had used them.

One Sunday he walked out to the deserted house—it was but a mile from the roundhouse—and went over it. Through open spaces where a weatherboard had rotted away he could see that the framework was of the stoutest oak. It had already lasted probably one or two hundred years and would likely last as much longer. Indeed, two-thirds of the building was like iron; the rest needed renewing. If Jim only had a wife he would buy the place and fix it up.

But he hadn't the wife. And this matter of getting a wife is a very uncertain matter. It is not necessarily a matter of means. Many a man worth millions has lived to be very old and never been blessed with a home. Jim was getting good pay and had money laid up, but he was as far from possessing a wife as if he had neither pay nor a nest egg. So he went back to his lonely room, spent a lonely evening and went to his lonely bed.

One morning when he pulled by the deserted place he was surprised to see a little pile of new lumber in the grounds. A few days later a man was sawing a board. When Jim returned in the afternoon the man was putting in new posts where there was most decay. Jim took notice of the man at work when he passed for a couple of weeks, at the end of which time the buildings had been restored to their primitive condition. A painter took the place of a carpenter, and when the painter left the place was again deserted.

But a few days later as Jim sped by on his iron horse he saw a woman busying herself about the house. It was spring, and the windows and doors were open. The woman was gathering the small pieces of wood and piling them in the wood house. Jim was not near enough to her to see what she looked like, but he could see that she was neither old nor slatternly. When he returned in the afternoon the refuse had been got rid of and the house looked habitable. Every morning and every afternoon the engineer took note of the cottage and its gradual improvement. Then he saw curtains in the windows, and it was evident that the new tenants had moved in.

Jim was curious to know of what persons the family would consist, but weeks passed, and not a person did he ever see about the place except the woman. One afternoon as he was driving by she was coming down the walk that led to the road beside the rails, dressed evidently to go into the city. She reached the road just as Jim's locomotive clattered by, and he saw her plainly. She appeared to be between twenty-five and thirty years old, neatly clad and not bad looking. She caught Jim's eye fixed intently upon her, but it was only for a moment, and her own eyes were turned away immediately.

The house having been put in order, the grounds next received attention. But for this the woman was not so fitted on account of lack of physical strength. Her efforts consisted chiefly in setting plants about the house and trimming some small flowering trees. How Jim wished he could use a spade there in the evening, after coming in from his day's run, and keep the grass from growing rank.

One reason why he had never married was that he had very little pluck in addressing a woman. Yet the most cowardly men in this respect will sometimes do the rashest things. They are like soldiers fighting behind breastworks, inordinately brave. Jim might have gone out to the place when not on duty, made an excuse to call on the woman, find out if she were single and court her, if he liked her, in the regular way. But he was not up to this. So he laid a plan for attacking her while traveling by on his locomotive. She could not strike back, for she could not get at him. With his hand on the throttle he felt like a warrior grasping a sword.

On several occasions during the summer this lone lady was in that part of her grounds nearest the track when Jim passed, and safe in his cab he made bold to look at her admiringly. How she took this evidence of interest in her he could not tell, but she gave no evidence of being displeased with it. Jim was not a bad looking fellow, and if any profession requires strength and nerve that of engine driving surely does. But Jim was not conscious of the advantage this would give him with a woman.

Jim nailed several boards together, making a surface about four feet by three. On one side he chalked "Good morning" and on the other "Good evening." He took the board with him in his cab and waited for a time when the woman whose acquaintance he wished to form was in the yard and looking at the passing train, as she often did. Then be prepared to swing out his message, displaying the appropriate side.

An opportunity occurred on his in run. The woman was standing in her doorway and was looking at the train. Jim took up his message and held it where she could see it. But she was not looking at the engine and failed to notice this beginning of a correspondence. But Jim tried it again and again till one morning he saw her laugh and knew that he had attracted her attention. He hoped that when he passed her house on his return trip he would get a reply, but this was not to be expected. She might alone read a message from Jim, but all on the train could read a message from her to him.

One morning when he passed he saw something white in one of the upper windows. It would not attract the attention of any one except the one for whom it was intended, and Jim felt confident that it was meant for him.

Jim made inquiries about the woman and learned that she was a young widow who had been a dressmaker, but, having a greater taste for country life and a small bank account of savings, had rented the cottage with a view to getting a living out of it either by chickens or vegetables. She had no children and was an orphan, without brothers or sisters.

Jim thought of a great many things he would like to say to her in chalk letters, but a reply would be too conspicuous to be considered, so he was obliged to make up his mind to beard the lioness in her den. It did not require much bravery to call upon a woman who had waved to him from her window, but the moment he left his cab he seemed to lose all courage. However, he was not up to facing the widow without some kind of announcement and wrote the following note with a carpenter's pencil on the bottom of a cardboard box:

I'm coming to see you next Sunday. If you don't want me to, put out a notice.

One day when passing and having the woman's attention he threw the message from the cab and, on rounding a curve farther on, looked back to see her pick it up.

When Jim went by the place again he saw a sign in the yard, "No Trespassing on These Premises on Sunday."

Jim's heart sank within him till he saw the widow at a window waving at him. But even this did not convince him that the sign in the yard was to let him know that his message had been received and the waving was to assure him that he would be welcome.

When Sunday morning came round the sun rose bright and shone straight into Jim's heart. He put on his best clothes and made himself look as attractive as possible. He would have liked to go on his visit as soon as he had finished his breakfast, but had the discretion to give the widow time to do her chores and the usual Sunday morning tidying up. About 10 o'clock, finding that the minutes were going like hours, he could wait no longer. When he approached the house the widow saw him coming and met him at the gate.

Jim's call was a success. The widow had a good dinner for him, and neither she nor Jim was disposed to a long delay in coming to an understanding. Jim wanted a home, and the widow wanted a man for a companion, protector and partner. Before Jim left the preliminaries were settled—that is, Jim was to call often, and they were to take steps to find out something about each other.

In a month they were engaged, and in the fall they were married. The next spring Jim spent more money on the house and a good deal of labor on the grounds. Mrs. Jim chose chicken farming for an occupation, and a large chicken house was built during the winter.

Jim still sticks to his engine. But when he walks home from the roundhouse he sees his wife standing in the door and his "wee things toddlin'" to meet him, as he had dreamed when passing the deserted house a few years before. Jim's first love letter is a part of the chicken house. It is placed over the door, and the chalked letters, "Good morning," have been replaced by painted ones. It is said that chanticleer always raises his head toward it when he gives his first daily crow.

Love is a disease against which mighty few of such take precaution.

MUST PAY UP OR MOVE OFF

Boat Owners Have Neglected to Pay the Rent

The chairman of the Property Committee was given authority last night to act in the case of the "Robinson Crusoe" who has anchored, on a floating boathouse at the Island above the C. P. R. bridge. This is city property.

John McHarry, who owns a boat house on the river bank, will be requested to paint the same at once. He has been notified before but the work was not done.

Notice will be given to four boat house owners who have not paid the rent for their lots, that the fee must be paid, otherwise they must move.

The committee agreed to accept the names of W. Graham and R. Routley as bondsmen for Wm. Hall, one of the two garbage collectors.

BRAWNY BOATMEN OF PERU.

They Looked Like Egyptian Galley Slaves to a Traveler.

Harbors there are none from Guayaquil, Ecuador, to Callao, Peru, the ships anchoring about a half mile off shore, a fact that in these peaceful waters entails neither the discomforts nor inconveniences that it does on other coasts. Here at Eten we hoisted our new passengers aboard in a sort of car like those used in roller coasters, four people at a time. Freight is transferred in lighters which they call lancias. Even before we had been "received" by the captain of the port several of these could be seen approaching us.

How can I describe them? They are about the size of a seagoing schooner. Five heavy beams laid across the bow form seats for ten men, whose brawny arms and well developed deltoids and pectorals would do honor to trained athletes. Their type—the broad, flat face, the high cheek bone, the narrow eyes set atilt and the drooping mustache—plainly shows their descent from the Chimus, that strange Chinese race whose civilization seems to have centered about Trujillo, somewhat farther down the coast. Clad only in jerseys and trousers, bareheaded or shaded by wide rimmed straw hats, each lays hold of a gigantic sweep, five on a side. And how they row, wing and wing, throwing the whole weight of their mighty frames upon the oars, rising in their seats till standing—the only boatmen I ever saw who suggested the galley slaves of the Egyptians or the men who manned the Roman triremes.—Ernest Peixotto in Scribner's Magazine.

TREATMENT TO PRESERVE TIMBER OF ALL KINDS

Former Peterboro' Boy is Superintendent of Plant at Fort Frances.

The treatment of timber of all kinds in order to preserve it against decay has made rapid strides of late years The growing scarcity of timber is a direct cause of this development. From an economic point of view, however, the time arrived many years ago, when preservative treatment was advisable. To-day in Canada there are a few successful plants engaged in this work and perhaps one of the most interesting is that of the Messrs. Alex. Bruce & Co., of Fort Frances, Ont. , This plant was built a little over a year ago and has been under the supervision of Mr. B. Blastorah, a Peterborough boy and who is at present spending a few weeks' vacation in this city, the guest of his brother, Mr. Fred Blastorah.

Since the completion of the plant it has been in operation day and night treating railway ties for the Canadian Northern Railway, a company which very early saw the advantage of having its ties preserved. The ties are barked and seasoned three months before treatment. Most of the ties are jack pine, a small percentage being tamarac and spruce.

After the timber has been thoroughly seasoned, it is taken by electric conveyors from the cars to steel bogies (a minature car). A train of eight bogies after being loaded is pulled into the steel cylinder which is 100 feet long by 7 feet in diameter. First of all the timber is subjected to a high vacuum which commences immediately the doors have been closed and is continued for three-quarters of an hour, the average being 26 degrees. Preserving solution is then admitted to the cylinder and forced at high pressure into the lumber. The solution, which consists principally of zinc chloride with sulphate of alumina added, is at the temperature of 140 degrees, Fh. The pressure is raised to 130 lbs. per square inch and the temperature is then raised to 150 degrees, Fh. This pressure is maintained for one hour, after which the process is complete. At no time during the process is the lumber heated above 160 degrees, Fh., so that the strength of the timber is in no way affected.

The plant is self contained completely. The company generate their own electric power and thus have the luxury of electric lights. A first-class repair shop is maintained and all the men employed, usually about seventy-five, are boarded on the spot. Direct siding connections with the main line of the Canadian Northern Railway gives the company excellent shipping facilities by rail. They are located on the shores of Rainy Lake and therefore take delivery of lumber by water.

THE LIGHT AT ENTRANCE TO THE CEMETERY

Officials Ask for New Arrangement—Board of Works Session

The Little Lake Cemetery Company want a new arrangement made in connection with the present electric light in front of the cemetery gates, as they are now beautifying the entrance to the cemetery by the erection of new gates and other features.

When the question came before the Board of Works last night it was agreed that the Fire, Water and Light Committee should deal with the matter.

NEW LINE TO THE CAPITAL.

It was decided to permit the Bell Telephone Company to plant poles on Smith street. The company needs these poles in connection with a new direct long distance line to Ottawa.

WIDTH OF BABB'S LANE.

The width of Babb's Lane will be decided by the Mayor, chairman Buller and the City Engineer, who were instructed so to act.

TOO EXPENSIVE.

The City Engineer reported that it would be unnecessary expense, to construct a sidewalk around the block on which the new West Ward school is situated, and the members were of the same opinion. The Board of Education made the request for this pavement.

DRAINAGE SYSTEM.

The De Laval Co. have asked for a drainage system, as they have encountered considerable expense, and at the present time much water remains on their property. It was decided to obtain the advice of the City Solicitor in regard to a surface drainage scheme.

---

There will be no practice of St. John's choir to-night as Mr. Devey is out of the city.

Expensive Evening Gowns

are not matters of every-day purchase, and therefore even the independently wealthy like to take the greatest care of them. Yet some times the functions of a single evening will ruin their appearance temporarily. We can remedy this, however, by our system of careful cleaning, and in any case we can dye the garment and make it like a new one.

WATER THE DOWN TOWN STREETS ON THE SABBATH

Oil Would be Too Expensive at This Stage of the Season so Board of Works Will Use an Extra Water Wagon

It is possible that some streets in the down town section of the city will be watered on Sundays.

Following instructions, the City Engineer submitted quotations on oil, to the Board of Works, last night. They were from seven cents to ten cents per gallon, if bought in large quantity. But a carload is not necessary and as a smaller quantity would make a rather large bill — too much for the Board of Works—so the oil question is shelved again.

What the Board proposes to do is make use of an iron watering cart, which is too heavy for a team of horses. Three horses will be used and more attention will be given to the streets of the central district.

In regard to watering streets on the Sabbath, no definite action was taken but the suggestion will be considered.

The Mayor held that present conditions were disgraceful.

CITY ENGINEER WILL APPOINT SEWER FOREMAN

Not Possible to Make Comparison in Cost of Sewer Work by Contract and Day Labor, Engineer Tells Board of Works.

There are five applications on fyle for the position of sewer foreman. Several times the question of an appointment has come up before the Board of Works without action being taken.

Last night chairman Buller moved that if it is decided to construct the sewers by day labor, the City Engineer make the appointment. This motion carried but Ald. Johnston and Ald. Anderson did not vote a yea.

Ald Johnston held that as the engineer was a new man, he might not be in a position to make the best selection, but it was explained that he could consult with the board members.

Some time ago the chairman and the engineer were instructed to delve into the question of the cost of sewer work and learn if possible if the work could be done cheaper by contract.

The engineer reported last night that in a city the size of Peterboro it was impossible to make a comparison.

MILK VENDORS ASS'N PROTEST AGAINST MILK BEING SOLD WITHOUT LICENSE

They Have to Pay Fee and Observe all Sanitary Regulations, While the One-cow Dealer Does not

A committee of the local Dairymen's Association called on the Sanitary Inspector on Wednesday protesting against the practice of persons selling milk without a license. The milkmen claim unfair treatment in this respect. They have to pay a license fee of $1 and toe the mark in regard to all sanitary regulations. In the winter time when the milk supply is small compared with the summer supply, the person with one cow will not sell, but in the summer time, when milk is plentiful and the dairymen have a big supply, the one-cow dealer will sell and take the customers of the vendor who supplies milk the year round.

The Sanitary Inspector learned today the names of seven persons who are selling milk, but not paying a license. He will investigate and take the matter up with the Board of Health.

WAR TO BE PROCLAIMED

TO JAIL FOR THREE MONTHS

Jesse Airriess Came Back and Was Arrested

Last year just before the fishing season opened Jesse Airriess, a local man, was found guilty of illegal fishing and fined $60 or three months. The defendant left the city, without paying his fine. He returned several days ago and was arrested. This morning at police court, he did not have the $60 so he was sent to jail for three months.

WE-NEVER-SLEEP MOONLIGHT EXCURSION TO-MORROW NIGHT

COMPANY UNABLE TO GET RAILS

And the Street Paving May be Held Up

To the Board of Works, last night, came a letter from the City Engineer, stating that Mr. Munro, of the Street Railway Co. had informed him that it was impossible to secure steel rails for the new track to be laid as street paving proceeds, but that the question would be considered by a meeting of the directors to-day.

The Engineer pointed out that this situation would hold back the paving operations for two months and a half.

This was bad news for the Board and it was decided to investigate, as it was thought that the company might be able to secure sufficient steel to do the necessary work so that paving would not be held up.

The company will construct a new roadbed and pave between the rails, where pavement is constructed by the city.

GRAND WATER CARNIVAL

Full Bill of Water Sports to be a Feature of this Year's Canadian National Exhibition

Water sports are to be a big feature at this year's Canadian National. TAPE WORM

A Black Demon

From a little boy four years old, it is like a great Blood Sucker having the power to draw itself up to one-quarter its length; when drawn up it is about 5 ft long, a dark slate color with dark stripe running the full length of it. This is one of the most loathsome creatures I have from the bowels of a human being, and I have some hundreds of the most gruesome looking reptiles that has ever been seen. It is in a glass tube in my window on exhibition at 167 Dundas street, where I invite you to call and have a look at it.

Do not put off getting my remedy. Every day a tape worm remains in your system there is danger, as sometimes they tie in knots and cause inflammation of the bowels, besides they multiply and fill the bowels and cause alarming troubles. Just think for a moment of one or more monsters from fifteen to thirty feet in length crawling about in you. Is it any wonder that you feel languid, weary and tired? Get my famous remedy and be relieved of this loathsome trouble. There is no fasting, no danger, it is easy to take: sure in results. I have tape worms from babies two years old removed without causing sickness to the infant or any bad after effects.

If you are troubled with Tape Worm now is your time to be relieved of this loathsome and disgusting creature, which is slowly but surely undermining your constitution and sapping your vitality, laying the foundation for more serious disease, causing general debility, consumption, epilepsy, heart failure and nervous prostration, madness, and insanity. Do not delay, but call at 384 Water Street, Peterborough or 167 Dundas Street, Toronto, and get Prof. Mulvenny's world famous remedy, or write for information, which is free.

NORTHERN TOWN WIPED OUT BY FOREST FIRES PEOPLE FLEE TO RIVER TO SAVE THEIR LIVES

New Railway Centre is Scene ot Terrible Destruction When Wall of Flame Descends on Buildings and Drives the People to the River to Save Their Lives.

NORTH BAY, July 4.—Belle River, 186 miles east of Cochrane, on the National Transcontinental Railway, is now know to have been wiped out by bush fires. News was brought in by a man from Belle River who reached Cochrane Wednesday.

Belle River is a new settlement and consisted of five stores, including a Hudson Bay store or post for trading with the Indians and the general stores of Bernard, Wright and Martyn, besides Hill's sawmill. Resident Engineer Courtwright, with his wife and child, occupied a house built by the Government at Belle River, and in the entire population there were only five women and four children. The settlement is on the banks of a river.

Mr. Courtwright arrived last night with his wife and baby, but with very little luggage, as, with the exception of a few clothes saved by his wife, they lost everything in the bush fires which swept over Belle River Tuesday an dleft nothing but a pile of smoking cinders of one of the newest Canadian communities. When the Courtwrights came Mrs. F. Palm of Hespeler, whose husband has building contracts on the National Transcontinental.

Mr. Courtwright describes the Belle River fire as a terrible ordeal, rendered more trying by the presence of six women and seven children. There were sixty people in all there when the fire attacked the town. For days bush fires have raged, with black curtains of smoke hiding the sun by day, while the night was illuminated by flames, but the Belle River folks stayed with their possessions and homes, hoping that the fire would pass them by.

On Tuesday, however, the wind blew a gale direct on the clearing, and at two o'clock a wall of flames leaped on the buildings so quickly that the inhabitants had just time to escape to the river, leaving all their household goods to be destroyed. The women were taken in canoes away from the fire. Women with babies were paddled several miles through blinding flames and hot cinders. The flames swept away at right angles and the danger was over.

A Russian laborer, who had been sent back to headquarters early in the afternoon for a relief train, managed to get through and after the refugees had been in the canoes from two in the afternoon until midnight, the welcome whistle of the rescue train was heard in the distance, but it was not until some hours later that the party was able to reach the train, as the fire zone could not be crossed until it had cooled down.

Everywhere along the National Transcontinental east of Cochrane, bush fires have reaped a harvest of ruin and as far as heard from 18 camps have been destroyed, while only previous experience has prevented loss of life. As Belle River was the supply department of the Northern Railway, a Montreal enterprise, and that was wiped out.

The total loss at Belle River is placed at $300,000, including supplies and the fur stores of Messrs. Bernard, Wright and Martyn Camellaye. There was no insurance.

Raging Near Cobalt.

COBALT, July 4.—The wind has risen again and is blowing strongly, and the north is once more fighting fire all along the T. & N. O. Railway. Cobalt and its mines, while perfectly safe within their own circle of bare rock, are ringed in by fires. The settlers on the edge of North Cobalt are out fighting hard for their shacks, and the blaze that caused so much consternation at West Cobalt has sprung up again and is driving hard to the southwest.

The fires in the Gillies Limit are once again roaring. The Cobalt fire brigade, which spent all Tuesday night safeguarding the powder magazine at Clear Lake, was on duty there last night.

Powder Magazines Blew Up.

TIMMINS, July 4.—The powder magazine on Pearl Lake Mine exploded yesterday afternoon, causing a considerable amount of damage to property and much anxiety, but no harm to anyone. Forest fires are quiet here to-day, as there is little or no wind.

Another Magazine.

SCHUMACHER, July 4.—A powder magazine at Schumacher has just blown up, shaking the country for miles around.

Three Deaths at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, July 4.—Three deaths and 15 prostrations were reported yesterday as the result of the terrific heat here. Shortly after noon the thermometer took a jump of three degrees and went to 96, with prospects of going higher later in the day. A breeze that swept the city during the morning was all that prevented the number of casualties from being greater.

To Cross Mediterranean.

ISSY-LE-MOULINEAUX, France, July 4.—Ernest Francois Guilleaux, the Frenh aviator who in April last made a 1,000-mile flight from Biarritz, France, to Kollum, Holland, started on a long journey in his aeroplane yesterday, when he ascended here with the intention of flying to Casablanca, Morocco.

German Army Bill Passes.

BERLIN, July 4.—The Bundesrath adopted yesterday the armament bill, which increases the peace strength of the German army by approximately 136,000 men, and the measures for financing the army increases. Saxony's four representatives voted in the negative. Bundesrath then adjourned till the autumn.

SYLVIA PANKHURST IS SUMMONED TO COURT

Is Charged With Exciting Mob to Hoot Cabinet Ministers.

LONDON, July 4.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst annouzced at a meeting of militant suffragettes in London last night that she had been summoned to appear at a police court on July 5 in connection with the Downing street raids, of which she was the leader last Sunday night.

Miss Pankhurst expressed regret that she was not arrested at that time and added:

"I am charged with inciting. I asked the public at Trafalgar Square to go to Downing street and hoot the Cabinet. Downing street is a public thoroughfare. What right have the police to stop the public from going there to hoot the Cabinet."

Referring to the "cat and mouse" bill, she said: "It means death — a slow, lingering death. The only alternative is for the Government to give way. The women prisoners will never give way."

Alluding to the conditions under which women worked in the east end, she said: "I hope before long that we shall see coming from the east end a great army of women armed with sticks and stones to imprison the Cabinet Ministers in their homes, just as the Ministers have imprisoned us in Holloway jail."

DOUBLE SUICIDE IS CONFIRMED

ST. CATHARINES, July 4.—The body of Jessie Phillips of Thorold was found in the old canal yesterday morning confirming the suspicion that she ended her life on Monday after learning that her elder sister suicided with carbolic acid following a quarrel between the two over a small matter. The girl ran from the house to the canal in her stocking feet. Louise was buried Wednesday. An inquest was not considered necessary.

Irish Giant Dead at Regina.

HYDRO OFF AGAIN.

Another Four-Hour Break Occurred Yesterday Morning.

TORONTO, July 4.—Defective insulators along the transmission lines again put the Hydro-electric out of business yesterday. The interruption occurred at 3.30 a.m. and lasted until 7.30 o'clock. At this period of the day, except for the street lighting, Hydro power is not generally in use, consequently the kicks by consumers were not nearly so many as on previous occasions. Employes of the Hydro patrolled the line and found the broken insulators at several points between Toronto and Dundas. The explanation for the crippling of the service was the same as given by Chief Engineer Gaby when the first interruption occurred about a month ago, poor material in some of the insulators.

The theory is advanced that the sudden increase in the voltage causing the defective insulators to burst has been responsible for the interruptions.

Bulgarians Deny Reverse.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, July 4.—The authorities here absolutely deny all statements issued in Belgrade reporting the success of the Servian troops.

An official statement sent out yesterday says the Bulgarian troops repulsed the Servians and captured a number of villages on the banks of the Zlatnovska river, in Macedonia.

Afterward orders were given to the Bulgarians to cease firing, and they returned to their former positions. The Servians are said to have suffered heavy losses.

MEASURE IS NOW READY FOR SENATE

Tariff Revision Ends—Oiling the Senate Machinery.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—After three months tinkering, Democratic tariff revision is at last on the ways ready for launching in the Senate as the Underwood-Simmons bill. The Democrat caucus of the Senate late yesterday finally approved the measure as revised by the finance committee majority and by its own action, and a final meeting of the caucus will be held Saturday, when the resolution to bind the Senators to its support will be presented and adopted.

For the first time in history, the bill as it comes through the Senate revision machinery is a lower tariff measure than passed the House, notwithstanding the fact that the estimated revenues to be derived from the bill as it is now framed are larger by about $5,000,000 than under the measure as it came from the House.

The total estimated revenue under the Underwood-Simmons measure will be, including the income tax( about $310,000,000. For the first year it will be $8,000,000 greater than that, inasmuch as the Senate caucus has approved the amendment of the finance committee postponing effectiveness of the cut in sugar until March 1, 1914.

Notice was given last night that the resolution binding the Democrats to support the bill will be introduced Saturday, and every Democrat was urged to be present. Senator Ransdall and Thornton of Louisiana and Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska will not be bound. No other defection from the party ranks is expected, and even Senator Hitchcock is not going to oppose the bill. If all the other Senators accept the terms of the binding resolution, and administration leaders were assured last night that they would, there will be a clear majority for the bill of two Democrat votes without the vote of the vice-president.

Another resolution adopted yesterday directs the finance committee in order to expedite consideration of the bill, to interpose objection to all requests for bringing up anything in the Senate except the tariff bill. It is proposed to cut off all long speeches in the morning hour business of the Senate and to keep the way clear for uninterrupted debate of the tariff measure until it has been passed. It also is proposed to hold sessions beginning at 11 o'clock as soon as the debate begins and later to begin at 10 o'clock every day.

To-day majority members of the finance committee will meet to check up the final draft of the bill and also to fix a date when all the schedules note specifically provided for shall become effective. It is the sense of the caucus that some time after the passage of the bill should be granted, and it is planned to fix Oct. 1, 1913, as the date when all the new rates, except sugar and a few other matters otherwise directed, shall become operative. As to wool, a recommendation of the finance sub-committee, will be made Saturday.

Couldn't Endure Gibes.

MONTREAL, July 4.—After being teased and tormented by backyard neighbors, Mrs. A. L. Magazine of 16A Leduc lane, went into her house yesterday morning and drank carbolic acid. "I am tired of fighting," she said, before taking the fatal draught.

BERLIN APPROVES JUSTICE GERARD'S AMBASSADORSHIP.

JUDGE JAMES W GERARD RIDING NATOMA

Justice James W. Gerard has been selected by President Wilson as Ambassador to Germany instead of to Spain, as was originally intended. The reason for the change is supposed to be President Wilson's desire to fill the most important posts at once. Justice Gerard is an expert horseman and his greatest pleasure is his daily ride.

"COCAINE KING" MUST PAY FINE AND GO TO PRISON

Two Year Term and Fine of $3000 For Conspiracy.

NEW YORK, July 4.—Dr. Abraham Glickstein, known as the "cocaine and opium king," was last night found guilty in the Federal District Court's criminal branch of conspiracy to use the mails in marketing cocaine and of the manufacture and sale of smoking opium. He was sentenced to serve two years in the federal prison at Atlanta and to pay a fine of $3,000.

Judge Mayer, presiding, said he had been appalled at the number of "human wrecks" who had testified to having purchased opium and cocaine from the defendant.

On June 12 last four of Dr. Glickstein's confederates — his brother, Elias Glickstein, Isidore Glickstein, Nathan Ulrich and Louis Levy—were found guilty on a similar indictment. Sentences were suspended on the former pair, but Ulrich and Levy were given terms in Atlanta penitentiary.

Will Dump Fireworks In Bay.

NEW YORK, July 4.—At least six truck loads of fireworks designed to go up to-morrow, will go down instead, into the waters of New York bay, whither they will be consigned by the street cleaning department. During four days past, fire department inspectors have made seizures of fireworks in 300 retail stores, which are without licenses. The explosives had the hose turned on them and will come to their independence day and somewhere between the Brooklyn and Staten Island water fronts. The work of confiscation is still going on.

PROBABILITIES

South and west winds, mostly fine and warm to-day and on Saturday.

MOONLIGHT EXCURSIONISTS STRANDED

BROCKVILLE, July 4.—The big excursion steamer, Thousand Islander, returning from a moonlight excursion to Alexandra Bay, ran on the sand bar east of the lighthouse at Ogdensburg early yesterday. The accident occurred in a dense cloud of smoke and the Islander was up on the bar about five feet. The steamer Riverside went to the assistance of the disabled craft and ferried the two hundred passengers to the city.

Later the tug Myra succeeded in pulling the Islander off. She was not damaged.

Military Tactics In Western Ontario.

GALT, July 4.—The 29th Waterloo Regiment has been changed from a rural to a city regiment. Following this comes the intimation that the 29th has been included among the city regiment to take part in the manoeuvres in western Ontario in August. These manoeuvres will be an experiment in western Ontario military training, and will likely have an important bearing on the future methods to be adopted by the Canadian militia. Recruiting for the four local companies is going on.

STARTS ON 10,000 MILE CANOE TRIP.

John H. Sullivan, Jr., of Indiana, has started on a 10,000 mile canoe trip from New York city to San Francisco. Mr. Sullivan expects to make this journey in a year. He will go by inland waters and the Panama Canal.

WAR FOR SUPREMACY IN THE BALKANS IS NOW INEVITABLE

Powers Have Given up Hope of Averting a Sanguinary Struggle Between the Former Allies and Fierce Fighting is in Progress.

LONDON, July 4.—The condition of affairs in the Balkan rupture is extraordinary. The 24 hours which the Bulgarian Government accorded to Greece and Servia to cease operations, have expired. During the same period Bulgaria undertook to abstain from hostilities in order to give Russia time to intervene in favor of peace. But hostilities are being carried on on both sides, apparently with the fierceness characteristic of the Balkan soldiers, and no declaration of war has yet been made. The respective diplomatic representatives are still at their posts.

There is now only the faintest hope that Russia or the powers will be able to prevent the struggle which is to decide whether or not Bulgaria shall be predominant in the Balkan confederation.

A new complication arose yesterday in the decision of Roumania to mobilize her army. What role Roumania will play is quite unknown, but she is generally expected to follow her traditional policy of waiting on events, in readiness to take advantage wherever it may be obtained with the least risk and trouble. Roumania's mobilization causes uneasiness in Austria, where it is regarded as a defeat for Austrian diplomacy.

Little news has come to hand to-day of the military operations in Macedonia, and owing to the fact that Bulgaria, as in the former campaign, is very reticent concerning her military movements, and because the representatives from the Servian and Greek sides are clearly exaggerated, it is exceedingly difficult to form any estimate of the actual position of affairs.

It is believed from the disposition of her troops that Bulgaria has carefully prepared a plan to place some of her forces between the Greeks and Servians and prevent their junction, and it is reported that the Bulgarians are now executing a great flanking movement in the direction of Egri-Palanka.

The Belgrade Government issued no reports from the theatre of war yesterday, but, according to a despatch from Premier Pachitch to the Servian legation at London, the Servian losses in the first three days' fighting were 6,000 killed and wounded. This included the great battle at Ovtchepolye. The Servians captured 2,000 prisoners and 300 guns from the Bulgarians, whose casualties exceeded the Servians. Sixty of the prisoners were officers.

That very heavy fighting occurred is confirmed by the arrival of 2,000 wounded at Belgrade.

Official reports issued at Athens claim the capture of Guevgheli and Kilkish, after severe fighting and heavy losses. It is added that Bulgarian prisoners declare that the Bulgarians are preparing to attack Saloniki.

King Constantine of Greece, in a statement to the British public, says:

"On May 20 Bulgarian troops concentrated in large numbers, delivered a sharp attack upon a Greek regiment at Anghisma. After a sanguinary fight lasting 15 hours the Bulgarians seized several villages in the neighborhood of Panghaion, which were occupied by the Greek army.

"To put an end at all costs to this state of affairs, and to prevent fresh incidents of the same kind, a convention was signed on June 2 at Salonika between the chief of staff of the Greek army and the commander-in-chief of the Bulgarian troops in the region of Serres. This convention established a neutral zone which the two armies were to evacuate, and in which neither party was to penetrate.

"In spite of this agreement the Bulgarian general staff neglected to evacuate most of the points which it had promised to abandon. Besides this, Bulgarian troops on June 23 attacked the Servians at Istib. On the night of June 29, Bulgarians also attacked the Servians at Guevkheli, which they occupied on the morning of June 30. In addition to all this, the Bulgarians attacked a second time the Greek troops at Panghaion, and also those at Nigrita on June 29. Finally, on June 29, Gen. Hessaptchieff, in command of the Bulgarian troops at Salonika, no longer concealed his intention of leaving the town. This fact left no possible doubt as to the hostile intentions of the Bulgarian general staff, which had designed to keep inactive in Salonika for as long as possible an entire division of the Greek army."

The Saloniki correspondent of The Daily Telegraph describes King Constantine of Greece as again displaying amazing rapidity in his military movements. The Greek second division, which left Saloniki after disarming the Bulgarians at about four o'clock Tuesday afternoon, camped last night at Baldja, fifteen miles to the south, where the king arrived next morning. He ordered a general advance of eight divisions, and at dusk Wednesday the entrenched positions at Kilkish were taken at the point of the bayonet after the Greek troops had waded waist deep through a three-mile belt of marsh land.

The correspondent adds: "I believe that the battle of Kilkish will be immortalized as one of the finest examples of lightning offensive in military records of the world. The Bulgarians made a great stand within three miles of Kilkish, but the Greeks, 4,000 strong, delivered a terrific bayonet charge, taking the position and causing immense losses."

Statesmen Go Golfing.

ST. ANDREW'S, N.B., July 4.—Premier Borden and Hon. W. S. Fielding, accompanied by their wives, arrived here yesterday and hope to enjoy a few days' golfing

FAVORS WOMEN POLICE

Canadian Testifies to Their Value in Stopping White Slavery.

LONDON, July 4.—The advisability of establishing women police in this country to help fight the white slave traffic was discussed at yesterday's sitting of the International Congress for the Suppression of the White Slave Traffic. Miss Elisesem of Norway stated that her country had already women police, and was well satisfied with their work.

Mrs. Leathes of Toronto, Canada, said the women police some time ago existed in Ottawa and other centres in Canada. A woman delegate from Sweden said that in her country women police were found of immense value. They were called "police sisters."

Police Commissioner Bullock of Scotland Yard also spoke of the great assistance which was given by women to the police in the white slave traffic work. He believed it was essential that the police should be so assisted, but he doubted if such assistance would be better for being actually official rather than voluntary. He already had a lady assisting him in his work, but she was not a "policeman," not having taken the oath of a constable.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 4.—Mayor Harrison made a sensational assault on vice in Chicago yesterday by revoking the licenses of scores of disorderly saloons, after making a sleuthing tour himself, incog. Wednesday night in the Twenty-second street red light district.

He described the conditions he found as intolerable and said that he was going to clean up Chicago and institute a reform era that would last through his administration.

Several weeks ago the mayor ordered the segregated vice district to close, but recently he received information that the resort keepers had ignored his orders. He refused to trust the police and sent investigators of his own. The conditions they reported caused the mayor to make his personal investigation Wednesday night.

LONDON, Ont., July 4.—Chief of Police W. T. Williams, president of the Canadian Police Chiefs' Association, made the statement yesterday that the executive of the organization would in future make all moral reformers substantiate their claims of white slavery or suffer the consequences.

Every report of alleged white slavery is to be probed to the bottom and and in the event of it being found incorrect the names of all persons connected with the start of the rumor will be forwarded to Ottawa and the necessary steps taken for their punishment.

ROBERT BRIDGES CHOSEN.

New Poet Laureate of England Was Formerly a Physician.

LONDON, July 4.—Premier Asquith has offered the poet laureateship to Robert Bridges, who was a physician at London Hospital for many years, and after retiring from the practice of medicine in 1882, devoted himself to poetry and playwriting. It is understood that Dr. Bridges has accepted the post.

Dr. Bridges was born on Oct. 23, 1844, in the Isle of Thanet, at the mouth of the Thames. He was educated at Eton and Oxford. He studied medicine at St. Bartholomew's, London, and became casualty physician there. Later he was assistant physician at the Children's Hospital and physician at the Great Northern Hospital. He has published several poems and plays.

SIX YEAR OLD LAD SENT CHUM TO HIS DEATH

Canadian Press Despatch.

CHICAGO, ILLS., July 4.—After telling three different stories to account for his chum's disappearance, Harold Fregel, aged seven, admitted he had pushed George Hammer, aged six into the river last Tuesday.

Harold made his confession sitting on the knee of a police captain who fed him watermelon to keep back the tears. "I pushed George into the river after he had thrown my wagon in," he said [illegible]

THE EMPIRE AND IT'S WHEAT

The question of wheat growing in the Empire is one which often occurs to the Imperialist mind. It is very important that the Empire should be able to produce enough wheat to feed itself, so that in any event it would not be dependent upon foreign nations. All of the principle countries in the Empire, outside of the United Kingdom, are wheat exporters. It is stated by the British Board of Trade that if all the people of the Empire ate as much wheat products per head as do the people of the British Isles, and if every acre in the Empire under wheat produced as much wheat as the wheat acres of the British isles, there would be enough to go around. There are in the Empire about 50,000,000 acres under wheat cultivation, and the acreage under average yield of the British wheat area is 33 bushels to the acre, so that for the 300,000,000 people of the Empire, there would be 1,500,000,000 bushels, or 5 or 6 bushels per head. The Victoria Colonist makes some remarks on the subject that are of interest:

"We have never seen any figures relative to the extension of the wheat-growing area in Canada as compared with the increase of her population. It would be highly valuable to secure these as it might afford an index to the possible expansion of the export trade of this country in that commodity and give some clue to the growing demand for internal consumption. In the United Kingdom, Australia, Canada and New Zealand the wheat area has increased from 11,500,000 in 1901 to 20,000,000 acres in 1911, or by 76 per cent. The population of these countries during the same decade has increased from 51,500,000 to 58,000,000 or by thirteen per cent. It is a noteworthy fact that for the past ten years the wheat area in the United States has remained practically stationary. For this reason as her population grows her export trade in wheat necessarily declines. In the past Great Britain has been her chief customer but during recent years there has been a marked falling off in the export of wheat to that country principally due to larger quantities being shipped from Canada. In mentioning this fact it must be seen that as long as Canada and others of the Overseas Dominions produce a large surplus over home requirements so long will they be able to supply the needs of the Motherland. At present there seems no need of alarm for the increase in production in Canada at all events has been very much in excess of the growing requirements of the population. The same applies generally to countries within the British Empire. Compared with 1901 the increase of the wheat area in the Empire (five countries) in thousands of acres was 45.5 per cent, compared with a 6.6 per cent. increase of thousands in population. In eleven European countries the figures were 17.1 per cent. and 15.1 per cent respectively, and in six other countries 19.9 per cent. and 20.6 per cent.; the total for the whole being 22.9 per cent. increase of wheat area and 13 per cent. increase of population.

From the foregoing it is obvious that up to date the supply of wheat is more than keeping pace with the increased demand. This expansion of the wheat-growing areas has been most marked in the British Dominions, a factor in which Canada holds the leading place. The figures we have quoted deal with most of the wheat-growing countries in the world and the majority of the wheat-eating peoples. It is not easy to draw specific deductions beyond saying that as far as wheat is concerned the Empire should be self-supporting, and there should be no need in the very near future for Great Britain to import any of this food commodity from foreign countries."

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is the edict of King George that there is to be no riding astride by the ladies in Rotten Row—or there will be a rotten row about it (see it?)

It may be a source of relief to a man to inform every friend he meets that "it's warm," but he must not regard himself as a source of valuable information.

If you want to know anything about the state of house property in Peterborough try and rent a house.

There is a general complaint about the food meted out at the volunteer camp at Kingston. Some of the warriors boarded out.

The "Globe" asks: "How long will the nations of Europe bear this colossal burden of armaments?" So far as the British Isles are concerned—as long as Canada refuses to share the burden

They are still troubled with wolves in Brandon. One of these prowlers strayed recently within the city limits and was pursued for a half hour by a man on a motor cycle. This is one of the best uses to which such a machine could be put; the wolf must have had a terrible time of it, and no doubt welcomed death as sweet relief.

Fire insurance companies are keeping pace with the growing prosperity of the country, and the statements for 1912 are very satisfactory. British companies have still a pre-eminence over both Canadian and foreign companies in premiums and losses.

EYES OF NEEDLES.

Why They Never Rust Nor Cut the Very Finest, Softest Thread.

Millions of needles are sold daily. It was not so long ago when the thread in the needle was cut by the sharp edges left in the eye after manufacture. The smaller the needle the sharper the edge and the greater the annoyance to users. Then, again, the eye would rust, for a woman will dampen the end of the thread on her tongue in order to make a point so that the needle may be threaded more easily. Complaint was loud and long, and orders were passed down the line to produce an eye in the smallest needle that would not cut the finest and softest thread in the world.

This was done by inventing a new machine in the shape of die cutters for the making of the eyes. The points on these minute augers are so small that they cannot be seen with the naked eye or detected by the most delicate sense of touch. A microscope is necessary. So it was essential to invent new machines to manufacture the dies and to sharpen the tiny drills.

Polishers and burnishers had to be made that would finish off every rough edge in an instant almost because needles sell a dozen or so for a few cents. When this was done the needles were placed in a rack, through which the eyes projected and held so tightly that when immersed in water only the eyes were covered. In this way the heads of the needles became the negative pole of a powerful battery, and in a few moments the eyes of several million needles were gold plated and hence rendered rust proof.—Harper's.

When Father Sings.

Little Mildred lives on the Kansas side and is four years old. She has a good voice and likes to sing. Her father has a very poor voice and wouldn't carry a tune on his shoulders. He is aware of his failing. So is Mildred. Whenever he starts to sing the rasping noise grates on her music loving ears, and whenever Mildred is naughty father threatens her thus:

"Mildred, if you don't behave papa will sing."

Mildred immediately turns up her nose, puts her hands behind her back and walks away. But she always behaves.—Kansas City Star.

Latest Quotation in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc

CHICAGO, July 3.—Persistent rumors that a large amount of export business had been done gave the bulls the control of the wheat market today, but the resulting gain largely disappeared when diligent inquiry failed to show that the stories had much basis, in fact. Latest prices were relatively weak, but ⅛ to ⅜c over last night. Corn finished ⅛c off to ⅛c up, oats a shade lower to ⅛ to ⅛c advance, and provisions varying from 10c decline to a gain of 12½c.

The Liverpool market closed ¼d to ⅞d higher on wheat and ⅝d to ⅝d higher on corn.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, July 3.—The wheat market opened strong on higher Liverpool cables, shorts covering over the approaching holidays, and in sympathy with firmer Americans. Trading in options was light. Flax prices again advanced sharply. July and October were sold 3⅝c higher, December being 2c higher in bid. The cause of the advance was an excellent export demand. Wheat options opened ¼ to ⅜c higher and closed ⅛ to ⅜c lower. The cash demand for wheat continues quiet, with fair offerings and no export trade. Cash prices closed ¼ to ½c higher on contract. Oats were a shade easier, while flax was decidedly strong. Cash oats closed ⅛ to ¼c higher. Cash flax closed 2 to 3c up, and options 2¼ to 2⅝c higher. There were 387 cars inspected Wednesday; in sight today 250 cars.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE number of reasons given by Mr. Bangs, one after the other, to prove that it would be quite impossible for him to be Mrs. Beasley's charioteer was a credit to the resources of his invention. The blacksmith might be back any minute; it was dinner time, and he was hungry; Henry, the horse, was tired; it wasn't a nice day for riding and he would come over some other time and take the widow out; he— But Debby had a conclusive answer for each protest.

"You said yourself the blacksmith wouldn't be back for an hour," she observed. "And you can leave word with the boy what he's to do when he does come. As for dinner, I'll be real glad to give you and Miss Dorcas a snack soon's we get back. I don't mind if it ain't a pleasant day. A little fresh air'll do me good. I been shut up here housecleanin' ever since I got back from out west. Now hurry right along and fetch your horse. I'll unlock the barn."

"But Mrs. Beasley," put in the schoolmistress, "why couldn't you give us a note to Mrs. Atwood and let us stop for the diary on our way home? I could return it to you by mail, or you might get it yourself some other day and mail it to me."

"No, no! Never put off till tomorrow what you can do today. My husband was a great hand to put off and put off. For the last eight years of his life I was at him to buy a new go-to-meetin' suit of clothes. The one he had was blue to start with, but it faded to a brown, and toward the last of it I declare if it didn't commence to turn green. Nothin' I could say would make him heave it away even then; seemed to think more of it than ever; said he wanted to hang to it a spell and see what 'twould turn next. But he died and was laid out in that same suit, and I was so mortified at the funeral I couldn't think of nothin' else. No; I'll go after them papers and the diary while they're fresh in my mind. And, besides, do you s'pose I'd let Sarah Ann Atwood rummage through my trunks? I guess not!"

Phoebe began to be sorry she had thought of sending for the diary, particularly as the chance of its containing valuable information was so remote. Mrs. Beasley went into the house to dress for the ride. The schoolmistress went with her as far as the sitting room. The perturbed Bailey stalked off, muttering, to the blacksmith's.

In a little while he returned, leading Henry by the bridle. Debby, adorned with the beflowered bonnet she had worn when she arrived at the Cy Whittaker place and with a black cloth cape over her lean shoulders, was waiting for him by the open door of the barn. The cape had a fur collar, "cat fur," so Mr. Bangs said afterward in describing it.

"Pull the sulky right out!" commanded the widow.

Bailey stared into the black interior of the barn.

"Which is it?" he shouted.

Mrs. Beasley pointed with her ear trumpet.

"Why, that one there, of course. T'other's a truck cart. You wouldn't expect me to ride in that, would you?"

Mr. Bangs entered the barn, seized the vehicle indicated by the shafts and drew it out into the yard. He inspected it deliberately and then sat weakly down on the chopping block near by. Apparently he was overcome by emotion.

The "sulky" bequeathed by the late doctor had been built to order for its former owner. It was of the "carryall" variety, except that it had but a single narrow seat. Its top was square and was curtained, the curtains being tightly buttoned down. Altogether it was something of a curiosity. Miss Dawes, who had come out to see the start, looked at the "sulky," then at Mr. Bangs' face and turned her back. Her shoulders shook.

"It used to be a real nice carriage when Ezra had it," commented the widow admiringly. "It needs ilin' and sprucin' up now, but I guess 'twill do. Come!" to Bailey, who had not risen from the chopping block. "Hurry up and harness or we'll never get started. Thought you wanted to get back for dinner?"

Mr. Bangs stood up and heaved a sigh.

"I did," he answered slowly, "but," with a glance at the sulky, "somethin' seems to have took away my appetite. Teacher, do you mean to"—

But Miss Dawes had withdrawn to the corner of the house, from which viewpoint she seemed to be inspecting the surrounding landscape. Bailey seized Henry by the bridle and backed him into the shafts.

"Back up!" he roared. "Back up, I tell you! You needn't look at me that way," he added in a lower tone. "I can't help it. You ain't any worse ashamed than I am. There! The ark's off the ways. All aboard!"

Turning to the expectant widow, he "boosted" her, not too tenderly, up to the narrow seat. Then he climbed in himself. Two on that seat made a tight fit. Bailey took up the reins. Debby leaned forward and peered around the edge of the curtains.

"You!" she shouted. "You, Miss What's-your-name—Dorcas! Come here a minute. I want to tell you somethin'."

The schoolmistress, her face red and her eyes moist, approached.

"I just wanted to say," explained Debby, "that I ain't real sure as that diary's there. I burnt up a lot of my old letters and things a spell ago, and seems to me I burnt some old diaries, too, but maybe that wan't one of 'em. Anyhow, I can get them Arizona papers, and I do want you to see 'em. They're the most interestin' things. Now," she added, turning to her companion on the seat, "you can git dap just as soon as you want to."

Once out on the open road the sulky received the full force of the wind. Mrs. Beasley clutched her driver's arm.

Another gust tilted the carriage top. Debby clutched the arm still tighter.

"Why, it blows awful hard!" she cried. "I'd no idee it blew like this."

"Want to 'bout ship and go home agin?" whooped Bailey hopefully.

"No, no!" she answered. "I guess if you folks come all the way from Bayport I can stand it as fur's the Center. But hurry all you can, won't you? I'm kind of 'fraid of the springs."

The widow's stop at the Atwood house, which was in the immediate rear of the Atwood store, was of a half hour's duration. Bailey refused to leave the seat of the sulky and sat there, speaking to no one, not even replying to the questions of a group of loungers who gathered to inspect the ancient vehicle and professed to be in doubt as to whether it had been washed in with the tide or been "left" to him in a will.

At last Debby made her appearance, her arms filled with newspapers. The latter she piled under the carriage seat and then climbed to her former place beside the driver. Henry, in response to a slap from the reins, got under way once more. The axles squeaked and screamed.

"Gee!" cried one youngster from the steps of the store. "It's the steam calliope. When's the rest of the show comin'?"

"Hi!" yelled another. "See how close they're hugged up together. Ain't they lovin'! It's a weddin'!"

"Shut up!" roared out the tortured Bailey, whose hat had blown back into the body of the sulky, leaving his bald head exposed to the cutting wind.

The audience begged him to give them a lock of his hair and added other remarks of a personal nature concerning the youth and beauty of the bridal couple and their chariot. Mr. Bangs was in a state of dumb frenzy. Debby, who without her trumpet had heard nothing of all this, was smiling and garrulous.

"I found all the papers," she said. "They're right under the seat. I'm goin' to look 'em over so's to have the interestin' parts all ready to show Miss Dorcas when we get home. Ain't it nice I found 'em?"

In spite of her driver's remonstrances, unheard because of the nonadjustment of the trumpet, she reached under the seat and brought out the pile of Blazeton weeklies. With her feet upon the pile to keep it from blowing away, she proceeded to unfold one of the papers. It crackled and snapped in the wind like a loose mainsail.

"Keep that dratted thing out of my face, won't you?" shrieked the agonized Bailey. "How'm I goin' to see to steer with that smackin' me between the eyes every other second?"

"Hey? Did you speak to me?" asked the widow sweetly.

"Did I speak? No, I screeched! What in tunket"—

"I want you to see this picture of the mayor's house in Blazeton. Eva, my husband's niece, lives right acrost the road from him. Many's the time I've set on their piazza and seen him come out and go to the city hall."

"Keep it out of my face, I tell you! Reef it! Furl it, you—you woman! I wish to thunder the piazza had caved in on you! I never see such an old fool in my born days. Take it away!"

Mrs. Beasley removed the paper, but only to substitute another.

"Here's Eva's brother-in-law," she screamed. "He's one of the prominent business men out there, so they put him in the paper. Ain't he nice lookin'?"

Bailey's comments on the prominent business man's appearance were anything but flattering. Debby continued to reach for more papers, carefully replacing those she had inspected in the pile beneath her feet.

"I know what I'll do," declared the passenger—"I'll hunt for that missin' husband advertisement of Desire Higgins'. Let's see, now! 'Twill be down at the bottom of the pile, 'cause the paper it's in is a last year one."

She bobbed down behind the high dashboard.

"Here 'tis!" exclaimed Debby. "I remember it's in this number, 'cause there's a picture of the Palace hotel on the front page. Let's see—'Dog lost'—no, that ain't it. 'Corner lot for sale'—wish I had money enough to buy it. I'd like nothin' better than to live out there. 'Information wanted of my husband.' Here 'tis! Um—hum!"

She straightened up and eagerly began reading the advertisement. A terrific burst of wind tore around the corner of the bluff. The widow in her excitement at finding the advertisement had inadvertently removed her feet from the pile of papers. In an instant the air was filled with whirling copies of the Blazeton Weekly Courier.

DAMP, DARK DAYS.

And Their Depressing Effects Upon the Human System.

Next time it is a dark, dreary day and you are sure that you have some really terrible ailment don't worry. Just cheer up and realize that there is nothing the matter with you except that the weather is damp, and the first sunny day will be sure to set you right.

At least this is the opinion of Dr. Rankin, a London physician, who has been giving lectures on the subject of health and happiness. He attributes most of the ordinary woes of humanity to the damp weather and explains his theory scientifically.

"In damp weather," he says, "the skin does not perform its functions properly. Products which should be thrown off in perspiration remain and clog the skin. Under ordinary circumstances in a normal temperature the amount of vapor passing from the skin reaches thirty ounces per day. In moist air the amount passing out from the skin is reduced to seven or eight ounces.

"As perspiration contains poisonous properties, it is not surprising that during damp weather these poisonous properties which are retained in the body lower the vitality and produce various temporary ailments."

So it's really a comfort to know that when we do not feel "well" in damp weather it is no sign of constitutional ill health, but just the weather.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Castle Garden.

Castle Garden was built by the United States in 1807 from the plans of Lieutenant Colonel Jonathan Williams, C. E., and was called Fort Clinton. In 1822 it was ceded to New York city. In 1824 it became a place of amusement and about 1826 got the name of Castle Garden. In 1845 there were Ethiopian minstrels there, in 1847-9 theatrical companies played there, and in 1850 Jenny Lind sang there. In 1855 it was closed as a place of amusement, and the commissioners of immigration took it as an immigrant depot. In 1870 it suffered from fire, and on July 9, 1876, it was burned to the ground. It was rebuilt at once. In 1892 the depot was moved to Ellis island, and Castle Garden reverted to the city, which in 1896 opened an aquarium there.

Veteran Teetotaler.

The death took place recently at White Coppice Hall, Chorley, of Mr. Alfred Ephraim Eccles, at the advanced age of 83 years.

The deceased gentleman was a native of Darwen and a cotton manufacturer, who retired in 1873. In 1840 he signed the temperance pledge with Teare, one of the famous seven Preston founders of the teetotaler. His munificence in the temperance cause was felt throughout the kingdom, for he spent about $2,500 yearly in publishing and distributing temperance literature and the four-fold pledge.

Resembles June Bug.

An insect much resembling the June bug and found in great quantities in the high plains about Quito, the capital of Ecuador, is toasted and eaten as a delicacy by the natives of that country. The insects are sold in the streets in the same manner as are chestnuts in the cities of the old country. They taste much like toasted bread.

The Telephone Brings Companionship

WHEN her morning's work is done and lunch disposed of, the housewife turns to the social side of housekeeping—she calls up her friends and brightens the day by a personal chat. Books, piano, needlework—these are sometimes diverting, but a woman craves real companionship. She longs to hear a living, laughing, human voice—longs for someone to talk to about the little, intimate, personal things.

She talks and listens to the voice that talks to her about the things she likes best. The telephone has banished her loneliness.

CRESSMANS' ANNUAL PICNIC THE BEST YET

Ideal Weather and a Happy Crowd – Prize Winners at the Races

The 6th annual outing held yesterday proved to be the most enjoyable and the most successful of any that has formerly been held. The steamer left the upper wharf at 9.30 a.m. with about 80 persons on board, and proceeded towards Rice Lake. The weather was perfect. An orchestra furnished music, and the company agreed, that surrounded – as they were with such lovely scenery, it seemed folly to go away from Peterborough and its environments, when vacation time offered an opportunity. "Jubilee" was reached after two hours' delightful sailing, and, after a brief stay, the boat headed across Rice Lake for Gore's Landing. Here everyone landed, and preparations were at once made for luncheon. The tables beneath the trees were loaded with tempting viands, and when the company sat down the picture was the complete ideal of a summer picnic.

Everyone declared they were almost starving, yet before any attempt was made to satisfy the ravages of hunger, Mr. Schleuter called for attention, and in a few suitable words, thanked the firm for their kindness in providing such a pleasant outing. Just at this moment Mrs. Cressman was presented with a bouquet by Miss Olive Edney. After this nothing but ripples of laughter and sounds of mastication disturbed the rustic atmosphere. After luncheon a cruise on the lake added several thicknesses of tan to the faces and arms of the company, and when "Jubilee" was again reached, a general movement was made towards the grounds, where the sports were to be held. The fun at the races can better be imagined than described, though it was most laughable to see the "wheelbarrows" collapse in the the wheelbarrow race, and to see Mr. Schleuter winning the orange eating contest, with Mr. Richardson a close second.

At the close of the baseball match the company was photographed and supper was served. The Geneva weighed anchor at 7.45 p.m., and at 10.30 discharged its passengers at the upper wharf. All the way up the river songs were sung by Mr. F. Cressman and different members of hte company, while everyone joined in the old "folk songs" that seem to be so fitting on occasions of this sort.

The singing of the National Anthem ended this most enjoyable outing of the season.

FABRIC HATS.

A Mode on Smart and Picturesque Lines.

CREPE DE CHINE HAT.

The soft crowned, floppy brimmed hat of flowered fabric pictured is of buff crepe de chine, printed with terra cotta figures. The ribbon trimmings match the color scheme. The brim droops over the eyes and shades them while the bow in the rear droops over the neck.

Closely fitting turbans are particularly becoming to young girls, though not unsuitable for more mature faces of a certain type. They are always so trim and distinctly appropriate for tailored suits that their popularity is easily accounted for. These new models are of such fine straw that they may be bent into practically any shape desired and cannot fail to be exceedingly becoming.

BON VOYAGE GIFTS.

Special Steamer Cake Boxes Are Acceptable Offerings.

Be very sure that your friend who is setting forth shortly for Europe or the Mediterranean is an excellent sailor before you scatter your substance in costly floral offerings. The fate of most cut flowers sent as bon voyage remembrances is a salty grave, and, unless the stewardess desires for herself the expensive orchids, roses and violets that are hastily turned over to her, when once the vessel begins to roll, overboard they go.

If one's friend is an experienced sailor one of the special steamer cake boxes will make an acceptable bon voyage gift. These boxes are fitted with lock and key and may be used afterward for the safe keeping of personal belongings. Inside are little trays and drawers, each filled with appetizing sweet and spiced cakes. Afternoon tea on board the steamer is a great institution, and the woman who can dispense hospitality in the way of delicious little cakes is sure to be popular. Preserved ginger in the small blue jars in which it is put up is another thoughtful bon voyage remembrance, for there are times when at the thought of anything except preserved ginger and a lemon the very soul sickens.

A steamer rug is a substantial and handsome gift, and a rug, pillows and rubber lined case in which these belongings may be packed for storage until the return voyage is a gift that any traveler will be overjoyed to receive.

Amazed at Restaurant Diet.

A party of Tibetan youths who are to be educated in England at the expense of the Government have reached London. They are to be placed at suitable schools in England, being shown the while something of the world in which they are temporarily to move. Needless to say, the journey of the travelers was simply a progress from one sensation to another, and while passing through Marseilles their amazement was intense at the abounding wealth and incessant movement all round them, and especially of the lavish arrangements of a well appointed restaurant. To men accustomed to a mountain diet of barley, rice, and mutton, more or less raw, the food resources of a rich city seemed uncanny.

Longest Fence In World

Stretching across western Australia is a rabbit tight fence, said to be the longest in the world. It extends for a distance of 1,200 miles without break, except for gates. It begins in the temperate regions and ends in the tropics, and sometimes for nearly 100 miles it never passes a human habitation. The fence is divided into sections, each of which is under the control of an inspector.

MOTOR DRIVEN APPARTUS FAVORED BY COMMITTEE

Letters From Fire Chiefs as to Results Obtained, Make Favorable impression on Fire Water and Light Committee

"I guarantee that we'll put a by-law before the people regarding the purchase of a piece of motor fire apparatus by next year," said Mayor Bradburn at the meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, last night.

The several communications appeared to impress the members and it was the general opinion that the motor apparatus was a better proposition than the fire sub-station for the present. The sub-station will come later.

Several letters were read from fire departments, using the motor apparatus and all letters spoke highly of the excellent results obtained from the use of the motor apparatus in summer and winter.

Mayor Bradburn—"Before making a decision for the sub-station I would rather buy a piece of motor apparatus."

The matter was left over for future consideration.

Regarding the communication from the Cemetery Board concerning the changing of the light at the entrance to the cemetery, the matter was left in the hands of the chairman and Mayor to look after.

The fire chief's request to attend the convention at New York in September was left in the hands of the Mayor and the Chairman.

In regard to some fifty feet of hose, part of which was destroyed by the C.P.R. engine backing up after the crew had been warned not to do so, the City Clerk was instructed to bill the company with the damages.

The hose was severed during a fire near the Quaker Oats dam, when the firemen had occasion to string the hose across the tracks.

No action was taken in regard to the use of the hydrants opposite Ryersville for the purpose of fire protection for the residents of Ryersville.

The matter of building a conduit on George street for the fire alarm lines was left in the hands of the Mayor and Chairman.

Chief Howard was present and read a letter from Mr. Doin, of the Bell Telephone Co., offering the city space for their wires from the corner of Dalhousie street and George to Brock street on George street for the sum of $181.30 rental per annum.

Ald. Duffus made a suggestion that the city build a conduit on some other street big enough for the electric and other wires and charge rent for it. No action was taken in the matter.

TORONTO YOUNG LADY DROWNED AT CROWE'S LDG.

A belated report from Crowe's Landing, Stony Lake, gives particulars of the drowning at that place of Miss Ena Gillelan, of Toronto.

The accident occurred on Wednesday and it is stated that the young lady who was bathing at the time slipped from a rocky shelf into deep water.

Her companions were unable to effect a rescue. After twenty minutes the body was recovered and although efforts at resuscitation were continued for several hours, no success was met.

The late Miss Gillelan resided at 15 Callendar street, Parkdale, Toronto, and had just been given two weeks' holidays by the Steele Briggs Company, in whose office she was employed.

MOTOR LEAGUE EXECUTIVE AS GUESTS OF LOCAL AUTOISTS

Trip to Stoney Lake To-morrow With Dinner at Burleigh Falls—League is Interested in Campaign of Public Safety

On Saturday next, July 5th, the Ontario Motor League are holding their regular Executive meeting in Peterborough and it has been arranged that the Automobile Association of this city entertain them on that occasion.

The program for the day is as follows: Motor to Young's Point in time to catch the S.S. 'Stoney Lake" at 4 o'clock, for a sail through the lakes, arriving at Burleigh Falls for dinner at 6 o'clock and returning to arrive at Young's Point about 8 o'clock.

Tickets: Gentlemen $1.00, Ladies' 75 cents; Children 50 cents. (This covers boat and dinner.)

Those who intend taking in this outing should notify Mr. C. K. Rackham as soon as possible.

Every motor owner should join this association not only in their own interests but in the interests of the community and of Ontario in general. If motorists are to command the respect of the public, they must get together and create some sort of public conscience as to the rights and safety of the people. The Motor League has rendered valuable service in the development and the perfecting of roads throughout the province, and for this it deserves the support of farmers as well as motorists.

DECREASE THE NUMBER OF ACCIDENTS

The Motor League is now interested in a campaign of Public Safety and at Toronto it is proposed to disseminate information through the press, the schools and other agencies, calling attention to the rules of the road, and to give instructions how to act.

The Ontario Motor League is taking up the work very enthusiastically. When all the various organizations get together, to consider the public safety, the result ought the public safety the result ought is so to educate all classes of the public as to eliminate all unnecessary risk of accidents in the street.

PERSONAL

Miss Armstrong, of Peterborough, George Street Methodist Church choir, who spent the week-end with Miss Lillian Garbutt, delighted the Methodist congregation here last Sunday evening by her singing. Her solo, "The Gentle Shepherd," was sung in excellent voice. She also assisted the choir with the regular anthem by taking solo part and duet with Miss Garbutt. — Madoc Review.

Something New From England.

A new kink in addressing envelopes has been noticed recently by some of the postoffice clerks. Instead of the word "personal" on these envelopes to indicate that the letter is intended only for the eye of the person addressed has been written "himself." In each case these letters had been sent from England. In some parts of Ireland the head of the household is always referred to by the members of the family as "himself," and the influence of that custom may have had its effect on the English writers, or possibly the writers were Irishmen living in England.

Cost Big Sum.

The Swaffham Board of Guardians have received notice of the death of a female lunatic belonging to their Union who has been an inmate of the Norfolk Asylum since 1865. During her 44 years' residence in that institution her maintenance cost the ratepayers $5,500.

FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION

Local Sons of Uncle Sam Celebrate To-night

That the many miles that separate United States subjects from the land of the Stars and Stripes does by no means lessen their patriotism, is amply proved by the large celebration that will be held to-night across the river from the Street Railway wharf. It is under the auspices of the Americans in the drafting room of the C.G.E., and a big time is expected.

Relax in the Water.

Lew Sarett explains the difficulty which the nonswimmer has in remaining afloat in "The Knack of Learning to Swim," in Outing, as follows:

"The nonswimmer, fearing the water, very naturally tenses his muscles as he struggles to keep his head above the water until he is as hard as a rock, and, like a rock, he sinks, whereas the swimmer, having no fear, relaxes his muscles and hence becomes buoyant. The explanation is a simple physical one. Tense, taut muscles increase the specific gravity of the body and make it sink in water; loose, relaxed muscles (given an ordinary supply of air in the lungs) will make the body float."

A Little in Advance.

A Washington man and his wife, whose domestic complications are frequent, but not serious, had one evening called upon a married couple. On their way home the lady said:

"Now, in the case of the Parkers, I should say it was an ideal marriage. Really, I believe they both think absolutely alike."

"Charming people, charming people!" said hubby. "But about the thinking, Gladys, if you will notice, she generally thinks first."—Lippincott's.

Undesirable Neighbors.

"There's a foreign couple living in the flat next to us, and they are simply torment to my wife."

"Why so?"

"They quarrel incessantly, and she can't understand a word of it."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Points for Mothers

Dressing the Baby.

Mothers seem to be divided in their opinion of how to dress the baby, but their ideas are generally so extreme that they can easily be divided into two classes—the sensible, who believe in simplicity, and the foolish, who try to see how fancifully they can dress their little tots.

The elegance of baby's clothes should always be interpreted in fineness and not by fancifulness. If its little slips are to be the most beautiful they should be of the finest hand woven lingerie cloth and made so daintily that the eye can scarcely perceive the stitches in their narrow seams. That is real beauty and luxury for the baby.

The baby's first slips are the prettiest in the plain bishop style—finished with very narrow valenciennes lace edging around the neck and sleeves and brier stitching at the top of its hem. For "best" wear you may want a slightly more fanciful dress, with tiny hand embroidered yoke in the front (narrow tucks running to the neck in the back) and dainty embroidered flowers strewn here and there above the hem. Of course hemming always makes a desirable finish at the seams and is not waste.

The infant's petticoats should be just as fine and plain as its slips. And in winter its "heavy" petticoats should be of the finest French flannel, so that they will not wash together and become weighty and bulky. The flannel petticoats should be finished with brier stitched hems. All petticoats should be made with little waists or wide waistbands.

Juvenile Nerves.

With highly strung children there is often a readiness to pick up nervous tricks from their elders. Thus from one a child learns to stammer, while from another it adopts various nervous movements of the muscles of the face or limbs. Such a child needs to be well fed and kept as much as possible in the open air, to lead a quiet life without excitement and without overexercise of the brain. Above all, it must be kept as much as possible away from those people from whom it seems to be taking the tricks of nervousness.

Reserved Boys.

Mothers, don't be too ready to think that your boy shows a want of trust in you if he occasionally keeps a secret or omits to tell you every little thing that he has done. Many boys are very reserved. They cannot bear to speak of what they feel deeply. Make your son understand that mother will always be glad to hear what he chooses to tell her, but that she does not want to force his confidence. Then he will speak much more freely to you than he would do if he felt that you were "always after him."

Screwing Up the Eyes.

Disastrous to beauty of a child's expression is the habit of screwing up the eyes. The trick points very plainly to defective vision and calls aloud for a visit to an oculist. The visit must not be delayed, for ugly wrinkles round the eyes is the least evil of this defect. A shortsighted child is severely handicaped when it begins its school life, and neglected myopia leads to serious eye trouble in later life. Properly prescribed spectacles are all that is required to end this particular trouble.

Mouth Breathing.

Mouth breathing, which is one of the signs which point to the presence of adenoids, can only be cured by going to the root of the matter and having the adenoids removed by operation. With very young children it is a wise precaution to do as the Indian squaws do, and that is to press the lips of the young child together when he first falls asleep.

Sunbonnets For Babies.

Protect the baby's eyes if the sun is very strong. Little sunbonnets of pink or pale blue chambray are both pretty and very sensible for young children. It is far easier to prevent weak eyes than to cure the weakness once it is contracted, and, while the sunshine does not always injure the eyes, you must remember that even a grown person cannot stand or work in the hot sunshine without feeling bad effects from the exposure.

Solid Foods.

The importance of never allowing a "taste" of ordinary food while the baby is small can hardly be overestimated. Not so much as "a crust or bite" should be allowed before he is nine or ten months old, and even that is better postponed until after the first year is completed.

Increase In Height.

Although perfectly healthy children differ greatly and no fixed rule is possible, the average child increases in height an inch a month between the second and fourth months. After this, up to a year, a half inch a month.

Nourishing Dishes.

Small children who are much in the open and who take vigorous exercise, should have cheese dishes and a little meat, mutton or broth for supper.

Method In Geniality.

"What is your purpose in shaking hands with everybody you see?"

"Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "I am a pretty powerful man. And as a rule I can shake hands so hard with a constituent that he won't have breath left to ask me any questions."—Washington Star.

He Wanted to Know.

Henry, aged five, had two younger brothers. Henry's father had just moved and was busy laying the kitchen linoleum. In order to facilitate the work he gave Henry the task of furnishing him with tacks. The little fellow worked faithfully for half an hour. Suddenly, however, he turned to his father and said:

"Papa, you like me best, don't you?"

"Oh, I like all my boys," said the father.

"But don't you like me a little bit better than the others?" queried Henry.

"I like all my boys equally well," answered the father.

"Well, papa," said the lad, after a moment's reflection, "what's the use of my handing you these tacks then?"—Indianapolis News.

Not a Gentleman's Bet.

A lawyer tells this story: "There are two brothers in a St. Louis brokerage office, not twins, but they look so much alike that even the head of the firm cannot tell them apart. I wanted to invest $20,000 for an estate that I represent, and as I greeted one of the duplicate brothers I said facetiously, 'Bet $2 you are your brother,' and I produced a two dollar bill. He said, 'Wait a moment till I get $2 from the cashier and I'll cover that bet.' He went to the rear of the office, came back a moment later and said, 'Here's the two dollars.'

"I said: 'The bet is off. I know now that you are not your brother, and no gentleman ever bets on a sure thing.'"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THOMPSON STOPPED THE SAINTS' DANGEROUS RALLY

etes Won First Game at at St. Thomas by4.2

St. Thomas Ont., July 4.—Peterborough appeared here for the first time this season, yesterday, and rabbed a game from the Leaders. he locals only got one hit off Traey up to the ninth, when they ade three in a row, but Thompson got in front of Wright's liner and killed th echance to win. The home team was considerably weakened by the absence of second baseman Gurney and outfielder Craven. The former is out of the game with a sore hand and the latter is ill. Kopp's running catch in left field was the feature. "Bill" Baker pitched a great game, but his support was ragged, and he was compelled to retire at the end of the seventh on account of the excessive heat. Inker played second base. Pitcher Reilly has been released, and Brodie, formerly of Peterborough, has been signed by Manager Dr̃t.

LL STAR TRIO TO TRAVEL THE CINDERS AT RIVERSIDE

A change is as good as a rest any d time, so the fans and fanettes ho enjoy a little variety will be iven an opportunity to witness a trace at Riverside Park Saturday fternoon.

None others than the famous Tom ongboat, Alf. Shrubb and Ted Wood will be seen in action, and they mpete in a five-mile race, during reathing time between the Mercantile League games.

The Toronto Star has the following:

What looks like one of the best races of the season between the pro-runners will be run off at Peterborough on Saturday next, when Longboat Wood, and Shrubb come together in a 5-mile race. The Indian was never better than he is running now, and judging by his last two races at the Island, Wood and Shrubb will have to step some to beat him. This is the race the promoters here intended putting on for the next card but the eastern city beat them out. It certainly looks like a good race.

THE LOST ROAD.

Lady Tells of Her Journey Across a Desert.

A lively account of what she called a "rather fruitless journey across the Syrian desert in search of a lost road" was given by Miss Gertrude Lowthian Bell at a meeting of the Byzantine Research and Publication Fund in the the rooms of the Society of Antiquaries in London the other day. Miss Bell started from Damascus, and crossed the desert by post road to Heet, and in doing so came across traces of the lost road in the middle, and followed it to the end. She is going back again to pick up the track at the beginning. There is now no caravan road across the desert, and only a fortnightly camel post from Grassos to Damascus. The road, she hazarded, was used in the days of the great Kalifate of Baghdad. Miss Bell started from Damascus in the beginning of 1911, during the coldest months known in Asiatic Turkey for several generations, and the desert was frozen.

The guide whom the explorer should have taken with her was snow bound in the desert, and, as she had to keep her intentions secret from the Government because they would not allow her to make the journey without an escort of soldiers, she was compelled to rise early one morning and drive out unostentatiously in a cab on the first stretch of her journey. At a height of 2,800 feet above sea level the land was at one part of the journey monotonously flat and covered with black, flinty stones; there was no greenery, no road, and no water. A stone in the distance would look in the mirage like a man on a camel. The desert was like a sheet of glass on which the camels slipped and scattered their burdens, and the guides went about moaning that "their legs were like soap." The travelers were bitterly cold. All, Miss Bell's guide, had lost his sheepskin to a party of marauding Arabs, and when she promised to give him a tip sufficient to buy a new one he answered, "Please God," which in Arabic expresses doubt. He had the tip, but in point of fact it was mortgaged to pay for a new outfit of wives. Miss Bell only discovered the road after being badly lost through the pertinacity of her guide, who persisted in taking her southwards.

Sir Hercules Read, who presided, said that during the past season the fund had done a very fine thing in the production of a volume on the church of St. Irene at Constantinople. The next work, now in hand, represented the great Church of Paros, by Mr. Jewell, the text of which was being written by Mr. Hasluck, assistant director of the British School at Athens. The committee were about to publish a volume on the Dome of the Rock at Jerusalem and its mosaics, by Mr. Wm. Harvey, who has executed the beautiful drawings of the Church of the Nativity. Next season some of the Coptic remains would be brought before the public. Sir Ernest Cassel had contributed as much as the speaker had demanded for exploration in Egypt. Unfortunately, there were difficulties in securing a site worthy of their energies, and the work of exploration would be postponed for a season. During the last few days they had been fortunate enough to get a letter in very pleasant terms from the Committee of Egyptology, granting them the right to excavate the site of Der Wadi Sarga, west of Sedfu, near Assiat.

Child "Danger Days."

"This is 'danger' weather for all children under the age of twelve."

So declares an East London (Eng.) doctor.

"Children," he said, "are more liable during these changeable days of sun and rain to contract infectious disease than when the weather is equably warm or cold.

"Just recently a very large number of London children, almost all of them under twelve, have been taken to the hospitals — chiefly in the East End districts—suffering from scarlet fever.

"There is also an epidemic of mumps among London children, more particularly in thickly populated districts.

"My advice to parents is to keep children away from crowds. Plenty of open-air and good plain food, with gravies and fatty foods in preference to starchy diet—are the best means of safeguarding a child from infection."

The word "affectionate" is an instance of how meanings change, for an affectionate person was originally the reverse of agreeable, the word meaning passionate or willful. John Knox in 1554 writes of "the government of an affectionate woman" being "a rage without reason," and a century later another writer deplores the evils of affectionate soldiers. And now, as any nursemaid knows, affectionate soldiers have no evils.—London Standard.

King's Weight In Gold.

If King George, when he went to Calcutta, had not set his face against the proposition he would have been weighed in gold, and the amount required to make him tip the scales would have been distributed among the poor.

This is a very ancient custom that still prevails in many Eastern lands. A Maharajah who was recently crowned seated himself in one of the pans of the balance, while into the other was thrown gold coin until royalty rose in the scales. The Maharajah, by an old unwritten law, did not become legally chief until he had been weighed in this manner.

The custom of weighing monarchs is not so extravagant as it may appear to be. The case of George V. it was calculated that $100,000 in gold would be devoted to the weighing and the expenses of the entertainment; but that is not to say that the expense was necessarily determined by the bulk of the monarch. As much more may be added to the fund as any number of persons desire to give. However, the native Indian potentates are usually heavy enough to satisfy all demands.

A Cannibal Relic.

While on a journey through the bush Rev. F. T. Paton, an English missionary in New Hebrides, was ambushed by a tribe of savages. Friendly relations having been restored, the tribe made him a pudding which was 13 feet round, and included in its ingredients a whole pig and some fowls.

His share was three feet three inches of the circumference and two feet into the centre and he was just about to begin with a wooden spoon when a native told him something which made him halt. This spoon (which Mr. Paton showed his audience) had been used for eight generations at the cannibal feasts of the tribe. Once it was white, but human blood, grease and dirt had turned it to the color of ebony.

Wearisome Anticipation.

"I wish I could find some way to live without workin'."

"What are you working at now?"

"Oh, I ain't doin' nothin' now, but it gits so blame tiresome expectin' I may have to begin almost any time."—Chicago Record-Herald.

HUGH GIBBS GETS ONE MONTH IN JAIL FOR STABBING WOMAN

His Housekeeper Was the Victim, But She is Sure the Affair was an Accident—Women Must be Protected Says Magistrate

Hugh Gibbs was re-arraigned before Magistrate Dumble this morning, on the charge of assaulting Mrs. Louise Gibbs. The prisoner elected to be tried by the Magistrate, and on the evidence, he w sentenced to one month in jail.

V. J. McElderry appeared for the prisoner, and Crown Attorney Wood conducted the prosecution.

IS HIS HOUSEKEEPER

Mrs Louise Gibbs, the first witness called said; "I do not want to lay any charge against Hugh. I have been his housekeeper for nearly 20 years, and we are at present living at 316 Bethune st., in company with a couple named Mr. and Mrs. Thompson.

"Last Monday night, Hugh came home drunk and brought another man with him. I do not know the other man. Anyway, when he came in he asked me to get him some supper. I did so, and after I had got it ready he told me he didn't want any. Then Hugh and the other man started cheering about something, and I told the other man to go as I was afraid they might get into a scrap. The other man left and I went to my room."

'DRUNK ALL THE TIME."

"Is your husband in the habit of getting drunk," aseкd the Magistrate,

"Yes, he is drunk all the time," replied the witness.

"After I went in my room," continued Mrs. Gibbs, "Hugh followed me in and went to pull me off the bed, and during the melee I felt something sharp stick into my breast and leg. I yelled and said: 'Oh Hugh you have killed me.' There was no light in the room."

To the Magistrate Mrs. Gibbs said that she didn't have to go to a doctor and that both wounds were healing rapidly.

The witness said while in her room Gibbs called her very bad names and asked her who was in her room with her. After awhile, a policeman came and Gibbs left, did. I am sure it was an accident.

Mr. McElderry— "Do you think he did it purposely."

Witness— "No, I don't think he did. I am sure, ti was an accident."

COULDN'T REMEMBER

The prisoner, Hugh Gibbs, was called but failed to recollect anything that happened except that he went home drunk.

"We can't allow this abusing of defenceless women and stabbing them, whether she be your wife or not," said Magistrate Dumble, in imposing the above sentnece.

FIRST THURSDAY HALF HOLIDAY WAS OBSERVED

The Thursday half-holiday came in for universal observance yesterday, and the noon-hour closing will continue every Thursday during the months of July and August.

One dry goods store, where a special sale had been arranged for some time ago, remained open ,as the sale had been extensively advertised, and the management could not break faith with the public. This store, however, will observe the half-holiday during the remainder of the two months.

Not only the stores in the central district, but those in the outlying districts throughout the city pulled blinds and closed shortly after twelve o'clock, thus bring about a very satisfactory situation to all concerned.

As is the practice on Sundays, the proprietors of drug stores will take their turn and remain open during the day.

Cavan Lady Suffered Dislocation of Arm and Shoulder

BETHANY, July 4.—What might have proved a serious accident happened on the 12th line of Cavan, east of the village, when Mrs. J. Stewart was thrown out of a buggy and was badly hurt. Her arm was dislocated at the shoulder, and other bruises were also sustained. Mr. and Mrs Stewart, and daughter were going to a funeral, and while driving along the horse frightened at a cow on the side of the road, throwing the three occupants out of the rig. However, Mrs. Stewart was the only one hurt. She was taken to Mr. C. White's house, where the service was going on, and Drs. Sutton and Hamilton were called, and found that it was not near as bad as was expected.

John McCormack, a laborer for the corporation, is under arrest on a serious charge. It is said that he was seen committing the offence near a stable on Aylmer street yesterday afternoon.

Boys Scouts Light Town.

A night watch of Boy Scouts is a novel feature of Wymondham, Eng., at present. They do not call out, "Ten o'clock and a fine night," like the watchmen who preceded the modern police, but they carry Chinese lanterns. It was decided at a parish meeting some time ago that a lighting rate of 7d. in the pound was too high and that not more than a sixpenny rate must be incurred. The town is therefore plunged in darkness at an early hour save for the fitful gleams of the boys' lanterns as they light the inhabitants to their homes or guide travelers as they pass through the town to or from Norwich. Some residents put candles in their front windows to light wanderers home.

FATAL INJURIES TO JOS. DAIGNAULT

Just before noon, Mr. Fd. Vinette telephoned to the Hydro offices at Toronto and was informed that Daignault was still living. Chances for his recovery are, however, very slight. The accident happened last evening.

It is with the greatest of regret that the many friends of Mr. Joseph Daignault, formerly an employe of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., now of the Hydro Electric Co., of Toronto, will learn of his sudden death, which occurred this morning.

The storm yesterday played havoc with the lines of the above company, and Mr. Daignault and his fellow employes were straightening out the line. In some manner the unfortunate man touched a live wire and was badly burned. He passed away about three hours later at 9.30 this morning. Full particulars of the accident are lacking.

The deceased was 31 years old, and leaves a young widow, but no children. The body will be brought to the city.

HEROIC EFFORTS OF VILLAGERS FAIL TO SAVE PETER BROWN CREEK

New Village, 200 Miles East of Cochrane, Is Completely Destroyed After Thrilling Acts of Daring on Part of Settlers—Patients Who Could Not Be Moved on Train, Protected by Hospital Staff

COCHRANE, July 5.—Peter Brown Creek, a settlement 200 miles east of Cochrane, has been wiped clean off the map, but not before there had been remarkable and heroic scenes. All that human exertion could do had been done to save the little settlement, but in vain. The fire fighting force worked in vain to save the hospital. Here were five or six patients that could not be moved on the relief train, which had already taken most of the men, women and children to safety. Dr. Cameron and Hugh Gillian, his assistant, and some others decided to stay and fight for their lives. So close was the heat of the fire that it was seen that the Union Jack which waved over the little log building, was on fire. Seeing that a hospital orderly, an Englishman, climbed on to the building at the peril of his life and smothered the blazing flag in his arms. The incident seemed to have nerved the little band to renewed exertions, for the crisis of the battle was safely passed and at the end of the day the heroic little band stood victors with their patients safe.

But all else had gone, the five stores, the machine shop, the engine repair shop, the contractors warehouses—everything was bare and black, but the little wooden hospital with the singed British flag waving over it.

Peter Brown Creek was headquarters for O'Brien, McDougall & O'Gorman, and is the terminus of the present service on the Transcontinental Railway east of Cochrane.

In the story of the fight against bush fires all through the north, news now coming through shows that scenes along the Transcontinental were most perilous. The gravel train which picked up imperilled men and women for 150 miles was on fire time after time. Ties were burning under the wheels, and it is extraordinary how there was no loss of life.

George Bishop, letter carrier on the Transcontinental, and John Daly, Dominion constable, brought mail out on a gasoline speeder while the ties blazed underneath them. The flames shot out at them from the surrounding forest and smoke obscured their vision for thirty miles.

Belle River settlement is swept clean out of existence, the settlers there barely escaping with their lives. The official estimate of loss at Jacksonboro, the Jackson and Tindle settlement west of Cochrane at Mattagami river, is $30,000. Of their 100,000 logs cut not one has been saved and the mill has been saved only by the most strenuous exertions.

As an example of the loss by settlers may be cited the case of William Morgan, a man with holdings at Lillebell Lake, just outside Cochrane. He has lost everything he had in the world, about $800. The Ontario Government has lost thousands of dollars, since the corduroy on practically all the roads built by Mr. Whitson last year has been destroyed.

A heavy rain fell yesterday at Cochrane and east along the Transcontinental, and the situation appears safe. But west of Cochrane as far as Hearst the ties are still blazing along the track, though Hearst is safe after strenuous fighting.

QUESTIONS FOR PREMIER

Mr. Proudfoot Asks Sir James to Answer Six Questions.

TORONTO, July 5.—While addressing a public meeting at Brook, North Grey, last evening, William Proudfoot, M.P.P., while referring to the charges brought by himself against Premier Whitney and the Provincial Secretary, said that he had six open questions to which he would like an answer from the Premier, and he thought that a meeting such as he was now addressing was a suitable occasion for addressing these questions to Sir James.

The questions are as follows:

1. Believing, as you so frequently said you do, in the British form of government and ideals of public men, and knowing as you do that no British Prime Minister would for a moment retain in office a colleague who had been guilty of the act which you admitted in the Legislature that Mr. Hanna was guilty of, why do you retain him in office?
2. Is it because you were personally an accessory after the fact and feel that if you compel him to resign, you should also do so?
3. Can you suggest any other reason for retaining him?
4. After you found that Mr. Hanna was guilty of the act admitted by you, did you place the fact before the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario?
5. If not, why not?
6. Do you think it is in the interests of clean government that the Lieutenant-Governor should under the circumstances accept you and Mr. Hanna as two of his responsible advisers?

Hon. W. J. Hanna, answering the challenge that he address a meeting in North Grey, has made arrangements to speak at Owen Sound on Saturday, July 12. Mr. Proudfoot has been invited to be present and to present his charges.

Russian Peasants Burned.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 5.—One hundred and fifty-four peasants were burned to death yesterday in a fire which destroyed the village of Astradamovkao, in the District of Alatyr, according to a despatch in The Novoe Vreymra.

AUTO CRASHED INTO CROWD.

One Child Killed and Twelve Injured In "Glorious Fourth" Disaster.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 5.—Several hundred school children assembling on the streets of West Pittsburg, preparing for the school parade, part of the day's festivities, were scattered by an uncontrolled automobile that plunged through the crowd, hurling the little forms to either side, until it crashed against some stone steps and was wrecked.

When anything like order could be restored, one lifeless little body was picked up. It was that of John Greenawalt, aged four. Twelve others ranging in age from eight to eleven, were prone, helpless in the street, while frantic mothers were tearing the clothes from Abe Yunegling, aged 25, the driver of the car.

The home of a physician, almost at the scene of the tragedy, was turned into a temporary hospital, where the children's wounds were dressed. Yunegling was arrested and locked up.

May Get New Trial.

OTTAWA, July 5.—The case of Charles Gibson, the young Toronto man sentenced to hang on Wednesday next for the murder of Joseph Rosenthal, was considered by the Cabinet Council yesterday, Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, being present to give his opinion as to the merits of the application for a new trial. The order in council passed was sent by special messenger last night to the Administrator, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, at Murray Bay, where he is holidaying with ex-President Taft.

Until the order in council returns with the ratification of the Administrator no official announcement as to the Cabinet's decision can be obtained, and the utmost secrecy prevails. It is believed, however, that the Cabinet has recommended a new trial for the condemned man.

Four Men Drowned.

VANCOUVER, B.C., July 5.—Alexander Hayes, pre-emptor of land near Fort George, was drowned Thursday. The Fraser river still is taking a heavy toll of victims among incoming settlers in northern British Columbia. Two volunteer pilots, names unknown, leaped off a scow which had been wrecked in the Grand Canyon and never came up. Another scow man named Christianson was knocked off by the boat's sweep and perished.

CABINET OF SILVER FOR REV. DR. AND MRS. ROBINSON

Rev. Dr. Robinson, of Hamilton, who is a brother of Mr. T. W. Robinson, Weller St., has been superannuated after 48 years' active service in the Methodist Church.

At a meeting of Simcoe street Methodist Church congregation Thursday night, Rev. Dr. Robinson and Mrs. Robinson were presented with an address and cabinet of silver. They will continue to reside in Hamilton.

Rev. E. A. Pearson, formerly of this city, was present and made an address.

INSPECTION IS RAPID

Gen. Ian Hamilton Nears End of His Trip Through Canada

OTTAWA, July 5.—After a quick charge across the continent and back again, six thousand miles in less than a fortnight, Major-Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton, Inspector-General of the oversea forces, and Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes, with their staffs, Imperial and Canadian, returned to Ottawa last evening. It was a rapid action engagement with Canada's portion of the Empire's militia forces, but though the battle fought were all sham battles, and the inspection by the military experts of the two War Offices was necessarily somewhat hasty, it was none the less effective. It was by all odds the most comprehensive and successful annual inspection of Canada's militia forces ever made.

The rapidity with which the successive camps from Quebec to British Columbia were visited was due to the joint energy of Col. Hughes and the C.P.R., the former supplying the steam and the latter a special train. The results of the trip, which will be concluded next week with a similar round of inspections in the Maritime Provinces, have greatly impressed Sir Ian Hamilton, and have delighted the heart of the energetic and enthusiastic Minister of Militia and Defence for Canada.

Sir Ian Hamilton, the distinguished veteran of many battlefields, said last night in an interview: "I must not, of course, anticipate my official report, now in course of preparation, but I can say with all sincerity that I have been inspired by the spirit, the alertness, the physique, the enthusiasm and the loyalty and patriotism of the thousands of volunteers I have seen both in eastern and western Canada. The will to learn is everywhere in evidence, the raw material for an effective and thoroughly trained defence force is of the very highest character, and the progress towards the highest effectiveness is most satisfactory."

The general believes that Canada is proceeding along right lines in the development of her militia training. "The spirit of the British flag and of the red coat," he said, "is linking east and west with even stronger and more enduring bonds than the steel links of your great transcontinental railways. The men of the Canadian militia are imbued both with Canadian patriotism and Imperial loyalty."

If a cloth is dampened with strong tea it will serve as an excellent cleanser of varnished paint.

Grass stains may be removed by soaking them in alcohol, kerosene or molasses.

VICARS VINDICATED.

Former Ulster King-of-Arms Gets Heavy Damages.

LONDON, July 5.—Sir Arthur Edward Vicars, who was Ulster king-of-arms at the time the crown jewels were stolen from Dublin Castle in the summer of 1907, was yesterday awarded $25,000 damages for libel in a suit brought against The London Mail, a sensational weekly newspaper.

The newspaper alleged that Sir Arthur Vicars had shielded the woman who took the jewels, out of jealousy of his attachment for Lady Haddo, the wife of Lord Haddo, son of the Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

Both Sir Arthur Vicars and Lord Haddo denied in their testimony all knowledge of the disappearance of the jewels or of their whereabouts.

The newspaper did not attempt to justify its story.

The evidence given disposes of the various stories in circulation that Lord Haddo knew something about the missing jewels.

Threw Petition at King.

BRISTOL, Eng., July 5.—While King George was driving to open the Royal Agricultural Show here yesterday, a woman, believed to be a suffragette, rushed at his carriage and threw a petition at His Majesty. She was immediately arrested.

Militants Cause Fire.

BIRMINGHAM, Eng., July 5—Damage amounting to $20,000 was done yesterday by a fire in a large factory at Sutton Coldfield, which is believed to have been the work of a suffragette "arson squad."

Admit All to R.M.C.

KINGSTON, July 5.—Royal Military College authorities are hoping to be able to accommodate every candidate who passed examinations for admission this fall.

Col. Lowther Promoted.

OTTAWA, July 5.—Lt.-Col. Lowther, C.M.G., D.S.O., who came to Canada with the Duke of Connaught as military secretary, will not be able to remain in this country during the continued term of His Royal Highness.

He succeeds to the command of his regiment, the Scots Guards, in April next, and has been ordered to rejoin his regiment in October of this year.

The name of Major F. D. Farquhar of the Coldstream Guards is mentioned as his probable successor.

Black Hand Letter.

ST. CATHARINES, July 5.—The authorities are endeavoring to discover the author of a letter signed "Black Hand," received by Joseph McNulty, proprietor of the Mansion House, Merritton, demanding that a thousand dollars be left under a stone along the G.T.R. tracks, a few hundred yards from the Merritton station, threatening death to the hotel man and his family unless the order was carried out.

FOURTH OF JULY TOLL

Eight Deaths and Three Hundred and Sixty Five Injured

Canadian Press Despatch.

Chicago, July 5.—A compilation of results of the Fourth of July celebration made early this morning finds only eight deaths and 365 injured caused by fireworks. None of the deaths were in the large cities.

TROOPS FIRED INTO THE CROWD

Four Killed and Fifty Were Injured

Canadian Press Despatch.

Johannesburg, July 5th—Four civilians were killed and fifty injured during mine strike riots last night when dragoons repeatedly charged a mob and troops fired into the crowd.

Notice

Prof. Mulveney's warning in another part of this issue is based on the fact that several persons in Toronto and surrounding cities have been victimized and defrauding into buying packages of baking soda put up as Prof. Mulveney's World Famous Tape Worm Cure, by smooth talking house to house solicitors. Beware of these canvassers as they have no connection whatever with Prof. R L Mulveney

RANCHERS DELUSION

Sarnia Prisoner Says Desperados Are On His Trail.

SARNIA, July 5.—Andrew Guibout, an Alberta rancher, who was a passenger on the Hamonic, arriving here yesterday, caused some excitement on his way down, by his strange actions. He labored under the delusion that a gang of men, whom he had caused to be convicted and sentenced to a six-year term in the penitentiary for stealing cattle from his ranch, were on his trail, intending to kill him. He became so violent that it was necessary to lock him up. Chief Forbes was called by wireless to meet the Hamonic on its arrival, and he was given into his charge.

Guibout appears to be quite rational on all other subjects. He has tickets for France by steamship from New York. He asked Mayor Bell to allow Chief Forbes to accompany him to Montreal, as he feared he would be attacked. The mayor advised that Guibout remain in the hospital for a day or two and consented to Chief Forbes accompanying him to Montreal.

PROBABILITIES

Fresh to strong southwest winds, very warm with local thunderstorms. Sunday, west and northwest winds mostly fair, becoming cooler.

VICTORY AND LOSS FOR SERVIANS

London, July 5—Despatches from Sofia say two hundred Servians have been taken prisoners and several guns captured in the Kustendil district and that an entire division was surrounded and captured near Veles. Despatches from Bucharest say the feeling in Roumania is strong against Bulgaria and Austria and that a demand has been made for a satisfactory reply on the boundary question within twenty-four hours. On the other hand Vienna says Roumania and Bulgaria have accepted Austrian mediation.

Belgrade, July 5.—Servians have captured the town of Kotchana after a severe battle, after having it is reported, annihilated the right wing of the Bulgarian army under General Kovatcheff and captured many trophies. The Bulgarians are said to be retreating precipitately.

SALONIKA, July 5.—Since their victory over the Bulgarians at Kilkish the Greek troops have been successful in a number of smaller engagements, in which the fighting was of a very severe nature.

They were driving the Bulgarians before them toward the north and east. During the fight which resulted in the occupation of Ghevgheli by the Greeks, the Bulgarians became panic-stricken, and hundreds of them jumped into the River Vardar, where many of them were drowned.

The railroad between Ghevgheli and Salonika, by way of Karasuli, has been restored and is in operation.

About 2,000 wounded Greek soldiers arrived yesterday in Salonika, furnishing evidence of the heavy fighting that had taken place.

No news has reached here as to the result of the battle which began on Thursday between the Greeks and the Bulgarians to the north of Kilkish, but it is known that the Greeks were successful in another fight at Matsukovo, in which the Bulgarians suffered heavily.

The Greek authorities complain that the Bulgarians have looted some Greek villages, and have tortured the inhabitants who will not sign a petition asking the Bulgarians to continue their occupation of the district.

Servians Capture Positions.

BELGRADE, July 5.—The Servian troops yesterday took from the Bulgarians two strong positions to the north of Kotschana, which the Bulgarians defended with 100 field guns. The Bulgarians retreated to Kotschana.

Two Days' Conflict.

VIENNA, July 5.—A fight between the Bulgarians and Servians for the possession of the Welanina heights, dominating the road to Sofia, has been in progress for two days, according to The Neue Freie Presse.

Turks Have Had Enough.

LONDON, July 5.—The Chronicle's Constantinople correspondent says that the new war in the Balkans has naturally caused great excitement here and has given rise to renewed jingo spirit. The cry has been raised that the opportunity should be seized to retake Adrianople. "The Tamin," however, urges a more moderate policy, and advises that the present complication should be utilized to strengthen Turkey in its stand against the payment of an indemnity to the allies. There is little likelihood of Turkey embarking upon a fresh war enterprise. A member of the Cabinet, speaking to me in an unofficial capacity, remarked that the Turkish Government had had enough of war.

SHE USED NO INFLUENCE

Lady Sackville Denies Allegations of Scott Family

LONDON, July 5.—The reappearance on the witness stand yesterday of Lady Sackville to undergo further cross-examination in the suit known as the "fight for the millions" again attracted a fashionable audience to the Probate Court, where Sir Samuel Thomas Evans is the presiding judge. The action is being taken by members of the Scott family, who say Lady Sackville secured her huge legacy in the late Sir John Murray Scott's will by the use of undue influence.

Fred. E. Smith, one of the Parliamentary Unionist leaders, who is counsel for the members of the Scott family, questioned Lady Sackville, who at the outset of her testimony told the court she had been ill and her doctor did not think she would be able to attend, as he said she was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. She, however, declined a seat when one was offered to her, saying she would sit down as soon as she felt tired.

She also made a request to be allowed to make a statement of all the payments Scott had given to Knole Park, the county residence of the Sackvilles, through her. She said it was impossible to go through the checks.

The judge announced that Lady Sackville would not be required much longer, an indication that her examination would be brief.

Attorney Smith examined Lady Sackville at length in regard to the incidents related by members of the Scott family to show the influence she exercised over the testator. Lady Sackville, however, said they were greatly exaggerated, and emphatically denied that she had used any influence with Scott to induce him to leave her any money.

No Old Glory For Moose Jaw.

MOOSE JAW, Sask., July 5.—Waving two American flags on Main street, an American was set upon by a score of youths. The Stars and Stripes was trampled into rags and the American enthusiast was rolled in the mud. Later an American attempted to raise a flag on top of a lamp-post. It was torn down and a free fight ensued.

Earlier in the day fifty Americans, waving flags, attempted to march up Main street. Fearing a riot, the police turned them back to the hotel, where they had been celebrating.

Five Airships Ordered.

TORONTO, July 5.—The fact that Messrs. Vickers, Limited, of Barrow-in-Furness, propose to construct airship sheds on a site on Walney Island, separated from Barrow by the Walney Channel, supplies some confirmation of the report that the Admiralty have provisionally placed an order for five airships with Messrs. Vickers.

The site is at the north end of the island, almost adjoining the Walney Fort. To the west is the Irish Sea, and to the north the estuary of the River Duddon.

A substitute for silk is being made out of wood pulp in England.

AUTO RACERS ARE KILLED

Harry Knight's Car Bursts Tire and Two Men Are Dead

COLUMBUS, O., July 5.—Harry C. Knight of Indianapolis, known as the "hero of the Indianapolis speedway," was almost instantly killed and his mechanician, Milton McCallis, of Houston, Texas, died at an hospital last night from a fracture of the skull sustained yesterday afternoon when Knight's front wheel drive car blew a right-rear tire and turned turtle on the 100th lap of the 200 mile automobile race, given under the auspices of the Columbus Automobile Association.

Knight had been out of the race for 30 minutes because of engine trouble and had just re-entered. He was said to have been running at 70 miles an hour when the accident occurred.

Johnny Jenkins of Springfield, O., was following Knight at a short distance and, according to some of the witnesses, ran over Knight's body, which had fallen to the track. Jenkins declared he ran over something, but does not know whether it was a body or a part of a machine.

When the tire blew up the car turned over twice and landed in an upright position. McCallis was thrown out at the first turn and suffered a fractured skull. Knight was pinned and mashed under his steering wheel, but fell out just as the car finally righted. He died almost immediately after assistance reached his side.

The accident occurred almost immediately in front of the grandstand and was witnessed by thousands of spectators.

Although Knight gave his residence as Indianapolis, his parents live at Jonesboro, Indiana, near Marion. He was 23 years of age. He gained the title of "Hero of the Indianapolis speedway" several years ago when he smashed into a brick wall in preference to running down a driver who had been thrown from his car to the track.

STORM HITS ONTARIO

Bad Disturbance Brings Damage But Freshens Crops.

TORONTO, July 5.—A terrible storm swept its course over almost the whole of the western part of the province. The lightning was the most severe in some years, and wrought considerable damage over a wide area. The rainfall constituted a record, and within two hours as much rain fell as during the whole of the past month, in which the now famous $10,000,000 downpour was included. In Toronto, for the first time in years, it flooded the King street subway to a depth of a foot and more, and all traffic had to be diverted.

Toronto's street railway was crippled for hours by a break in Toronto Electric power and thousands of citizens walked miles to their homes.

Withal, there was a glittering silver lining. "A veritable godsend," exclaimed Mr. P. J. Carey, Dominion fruit inspector. "One of the greatest and best of Providence's blessings! It means more than ten millions to fruit and agriculture."

THE BALKAN SQUABBLE

The Balkans have got rid of the Turk, but a more treacherous despot seems to have taken his place.

Jealousy and suspicion has taken possession of the various States; already the soldiers who fought side by side against the Sultan have turned their swords against each other.

While such a sequel was not altogether unforeseen, it is none the less a pitiable spectacle to see these Christian nations after such a noble fight for liberty entering into such a bloody and disgraceful quarrel before the eyes of the civilized world.

It is true that the Christianity of most of these people is of a very crude order and little better, if as good, as the despised Mohamadanism of the Turks.

The Balkan war was not a fight of the cross against the crescent, it was the survival of the fittest of a set of ignorant and cruel nations and while the struggle is not without its compensations and the victory is on the right side, yet it remains for the great Powers to stop this foolish fracas with a firm hand.

How this is to be done would be a simpler question if the Powers themselves were united. Sir Edward Grey has done noble service in trying to bring about a settlement, but each power seems to have its favorite and for business or political reasons, fears to act.

Liberty in this case is not an unmixed blessing.

THE UNIONISTS CHANCE

The British political situation at present is very interesting. The Asquith Government is being slowly forced to the wall. The recent bye-elections showing the results of the insurance law are all strongly against the Government, Home Rule arouses no enthusiasm, Welsh Disestablishment has made enemies, and the Marconi scandals have put the Government in a very unpleasant situation. On the other hand, the Unionists have made gains in the favor of the electorate, and the indications are that their policy will appeal with greater force as the country gets sick of the "advanced socialism" of Lloyd George and his coterie. The Toronto News says, in regard to the Unionist policy:

It was under a protective tariff backed by a navy which kept her immune from invasion that Great Britain became commercially supreme and "the workshop of the world." The introduction of Free Trade found the country practically without competitors in other countries. Since then the extended use of steam and electricity in industrial enterprises and for transportation purposes has helped to maintain the advantage in world trade which Free Trade England took over from Protectionist England. The country has also shared largely in the expansion of commerce caused by a lavish production of gold from the mines, but her rivals are overtaking her. British workmen are miserably underpaid, unemployment is widespread in the most "prosperous" times, agriculture languishes and the people fly to protectionist countries like Canada and Australia for a chance in life.

Little wonder, therefore, that increasing numbers of Old Countrymen regard Tariff Reform (which is to say moderate protection plus a trade preference to the overseas Dominions) as extremely desirable. They see in the Unionist policy (1) a means of broadening the basis of taxation to meet growing social and Imperial needs; (2) a means of safeguarding British industries and British workmen against unfair competition from highly protected countries; (3) a lever with which to secure concessions in foreign markets. (4) a bond of common advantage between all parts of the Empire. Such a duty on foreign wheat and other foodstuffs as the Unionists ultimately will propose should give the British, Canadian and Australian farmers larger profits without increasing the cost of bread to Old Country workmen. At has there will be no such advance in the cost of living as there will be in wages.

Cobden promised that Free Trade would enrich English agriculture but we know that the areas under cultivation have greatly shrunk that the rural population has hopelessly decreased, and that the country's agricultural losses since 1870 aggregate $8,500,000,000. That English Liberals are less uncompromising Free Traders than they used to be, is proved by the Asquith's Government's action in facilitating a preferential trade arrangement between Canada and the British West Indies by its recognition of the principle of tariff protection in the Irish Home Rule Bill, and by its legislation compelling the manufacture of patented articles within the British Islands. The Prime Minister, the Earl of Crewe, and Mr Lloyd George have all expressed their appreciation of the benefits conferred on British trade by the tariff preference which it enjoys in the Canadian market.

The chief advantages which British industries would derive from the Unionist policy may easily be summarized. A moderate duty would check the unfair dumping of foreign products, render the home market more secure, enlarge the colonial market and thus by increasing the volume of the output actually reduce the unit cost of production. The increased employment which would result for the people would stimulate their spending capacities and the material condition of the whole community would be improved. There is every reason to believe that Tariff Reform and Imperial Preference would improve the business of British railways and steamship companies, and thus enable them to pay better wages. The same result would develop in industrial fields, for the masses in any country are well off largely in proportion to the amount of work which the Government conserves for its wage-earners.

Slips In Oratory.

Even the most facile speakers are guilty of unpardonable errors in their oratory. Mr. Arthur Balfour on one occasion spoke of "an empty theatre of unsympathetic auditors," and Lord Curson of Kedleston remarked that "though we are not out of the wood, we have a good ship."

Mr. Asquith once stated that "redistribution is a thorny subject which requires delicate handling, or it will tread on some people's toes."

Mr. St. John Brodrick, when a member of the House of Commons, told that assembly that "among the many jarring notes heard in this House on military affairs this subject (mobilization) at least must be regarded as an oasis."

In a debate on the London Education Bill Mr. Walter Long said, "We are told that by such legislation the very heart of the country has been shaken to its very foundations."

The late Gen. Redvers Buller, desiring to convey that there was little to be gained by so-called Army Reform, declared that "the army is honey-combed with cliques and kisses go by favor in this web of axe-grinders."

Gold Caskets as Cigar Boxes.

The decision of Manchester and Liverpool to present the usual loyal addresses without caskets, substituting pieces of old plate, when King George and Queen Mary, visit Lancashire in July will doubtless be appreciated by their Majesties, for they already possess sufficient gold and silver caskets, of every imaginable design, to fill a good-sized room. Some are used as ornaments in the royal apartments, while King George has also followed the example of his father and had one or two lined with cedar wood, in order that he might use them as cigar boxes.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON

MOSES, THE GOODLY CHILD.

—July 6.—Exodus 1:22—2:10.—

"Whose receiveth one such little child in My name, receiveth Me."
—Matthew 18:5.

AFTER Joseph had been Grand Vizier of Egypt for eighty years, he died at the age of one hundred and ten years. Shortly thereafter, another Pharaoh came into power who "knew not Joseph"—who ignored his services to Egypt and the tentative covenant with the Israelites. This Pharaoh is supposed to have been Rameses II., a hard-hearted, selfish despot.

This Pharaoh perceived that the Israelites were multiplying much more rapidly than were the Egyptians. Therefore he considered them a menace. At first they had been viewed as a protection to Egypt, because Goshen lay eastward, and an enemy advancing against Egypt would encounter the Israelites first. Egypt's only antagonist in those days was Assyria. When the Israelites became more numerous than the Egyptians, a new danger threatened; for an invading army might bribe them, and thus the rule of the Pharaohs be overthrown.

"Taskmasters to afflict them."

To meet this contingency, various expedients were tried. First, an edict compelled the Israelites to perform arduous labors, which it was hoped would weaken them. On the contrary, however, they seemed to flourish with every added burden. The next repressive measure was the edict that every male child be strangled at birth. But this command was disregarded, the Hebrew midwives claiming that they arrived too late. The final resort was the royal edict that the Israelites must drown every new-born male infant. Failure to do this was made a punishable crime.

It was under these conditions that Moses was born. The account indicates that his parents were pious, and hence we are not surprised that as a babe he "was a goodly child"—fair, beautiful. Comparatively few parents seem to realize that where children are otherwise than graceful in feature and character, a responsibility rests upon them. As careful breeding affects the features, form and character of animals, and improves both fruits and flowers, so also it is potent in respect to humanity. Parents have in their control the most wonderful power known in the world whereby to influence the character and form of their children before birth and not to be ignored after their birth—the power of the mind.

If every mother realized that during the period of gestation her mental moods were either blessing or cursing her offspring, how persistent she would be in resisting evil moods and tantrums! How carefully she would guard her reading, her companionship, her mental reflections! How faithfully she would follow the suggestions of the Apostle respecting whatsoever things are pure, just, true, noble, honorable and beautiful—to think on these things, and thus to birth-mark her child after the highest, noblest conceptions of which she might be capable!

The princess finds Moses.

And if the father realized his responsibility, how careful he would be to do his full duty! not merely as a father or life-giver, but as a protector and guardian of the mother, assisting her in the most important function of human life and in the time of her greatest need. The mother, during gestation particularly, would be surrounded by things suggestive of the good, the great, the noble, the pure, the intellectual, the cultured. He would be especially sympathetic and would endeavor to keep the mother's mind at ease.

Co-Operating With God's Providence.

Probably Moses' parents knew of the custom of the Egyptian princess to resort to a certain secluded spot on the Nile for her bath, presumed to have been part of a religious ceremony. They surmised that so beautiful a babe would have special attraction for her. A little basket was woven of bulrushes, and made watertight with pitch. The babe was placed within, and at a proper time was left near the spot visited by the princess. Then conveniently near stood Moses' little sister Mariam, ready to suggest the bringing of a nurse. It is quite probable that the princess herself perceived the ruse and merely co-operated, believing that the babe might as well have for its caretaker its own mother, and that she might be its patron.

Thus in God's providence, notwithstanding the opposition of the king, Moses was reared in the royal palace, and became "learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians." Thus God's providence prepared the suitable person for his great work as leader of Israel—the prototype of Messiah, who in God's due time will be the Deliverer of all humanity desirous of becoming God's people and willing to be led by Him into the antitypical Land of Promise.

In to-day's lesson we see how God made the wrath of man to praise Him and to accomplish some of His purposes for the furtherance of His great Plan of the Ages amongst those wholly ignorant of Him. This increases our faith in Him and in all His gracious promises to His people.

CY WHITTAKER'S PLACE

By JOSEPH C. LINCOLN

Copyright, 1908, by D. Appleton & Co.

Henry, the horse, jumped sidewise. The reins were jerked from the driver's hands and fell in the road.

"Mercy on us!" shrieked Debby, clutching her companion about the waist. "What"—

"Let go of me!" howled Bailey, pushing her violently aside. "Whoa! Stand still!"

But Henry refused to stand still. The flapping paper still clung to his agitated head. He reared and pranced, jerking the sulky back and forth, its wheels still wedged in the ruts. Bailey sprang to the ground to pick up the reins. He seized them, but fell as he did so. The tug at his bits turned Henry's head, literally and figuratively. He reared and whirled about. The sulky rose on two wheels. The screaming Mrs. Beasley collapsed against its downward side. Another moment and the whole upper half of the sulky—body, seat, curtains and Debby—tilted over the lower wheels, and the rusted bolts, failing to hold, slid with a thump to the frozen road. The wind, catching it underneath as it slid, tipped it backward. Then Henry ran away.

Miss Dawes, left alone in the house at the foot of the hill, had amused herself for a time with the Beasley library, which partially filled a shelf in the sitting room.

Sitting there, she was a witness of the alarming catastrophe on the hilltop and reached the front gate just in time to see Henry go galloping by, dragging the four wheels and springs of the sulky, while sprawled across the rear axle and still clinging to the reins hung a familiar bowling and most wickedly profane individual of the name of Bangs.

The upper part of the sulky, with its boxlike curtained top, lay on its side in the road. From somewhere within the box came groans and screams, greeting Phoebe, who ran to the spot.

The panting and alarmed teacher stooped and peered into the dark shadow between the dashboard and the back curtain. All she could make out at first were a pair of thin ankles and "congress" shoes in agitated motion. These bobbed up and down behind the overturned seat and its displaced cushion.

"Oh, Mrs. Beasley!" screamed Phoebe. "Are you hurt?"

The rescuer pulled the seat forward and with an effort tumbled it clear of the curtains. Debby raised herself still higher.

"Oh!" she groaned. "Talk about—Land sakes! Who's comin'? Men, ain't it?"

She scrambled out of her prison on hands and knees and jumped to her feet with reassuring alacrity.

"I'm a sight, ain't I?" she asked. "Haul this bunnet straight, quick's ever you can."

Miss Dawes, relieved to find that the accident had no serious consequences and trying her hardest not to laugh, assisted the widow to rearrange her wearing apparel. The blacksmith and his helper came running up the hill.

"Hello, Debby!" hailed the former. "What's the matter? Hurt, be you?"

Mrs. Beasley, whether she heard or not, did not deign to reply.

The blacksmith pointed to his shop in the hollow. Before it stood Mr. Bangs, holding Henry by the bridle and staring in their direction.

"He's all right," volunteered the "helper." "The horse stopped runnin' soon's he got to the foot of the next hill."

Mrs. Beasley was not apparently overjoyed at the news.

"Humph!" she grunted. "I most wish he'd broke his neck. Pesky, careless thing, gettin' us run away with and upset! Who's goin' to pay for fixin' my sulky, I want to know?"

"Mr. Bangs will pay for it, I'm sure," said Phoebe soothingly. "If he doesn't I will. Oh, Mrs. Beasley, did you find the diary?"

"Diary? No, no! I told you I was afraid I'd burnt it up. Well, I had, and a whole lot more of them old ones. But I did get all them Arizona papers and took the trouble to tote 'em all the way here so's you could look at 'em. And now"—she shook with indignation and waved her hand toward a section of horizon where little white dots indicated the whereabouts of the Couriers—"now look where they be! Blowed from Dan to Beersheby! Come on to the house and let me set down. I been standin' on my head till I'm tired. Here, Jabez," to the blacksmith, "you tend to that carriage, will you?"

She stalked off down the hill.

Phoebe was downcast and disappointed. She was convinced in her own mind that the Honorable Atkins had some hidden motive for his espousal of the Thomas cause. Asaph's fruitless quest in Orham had not shaken her faith. Captain Cy had refused to seek Debby Beasley for information concerning the Thayers, and so she, on her own responsibility, had done so. And this was the ridiculous ending of her journey. The diary had been a forlorn hope. Now that was burned. Poor Bos'n and poor some one else!

Debby, marching down the hill, continued to sputter about the lost weeklies.

"It's an everlastin' shame!" she declared. "I'd just found the one with that advertisement in it and was readin' it. I remember the part I read, plain as could be. While we're eatin' dinner I'll tell you about it."

But Miss Dawes did not care for dinner. Like Mr. Tidditt and the captain, she had had about all the Debby Beasley she wanted.

"Yes, yes, you will stop, too," affirmed the widow. "I want to tell you more about Blazeton. I can see that advertisement this minute right afore my eyes—'Information wanted of my husband, Edward Higgins; five foot eight inches tall, sandy complected, brown hair and yellowish mustache; not lame, but has a peculiar slight limp with his left foot'"—

"What?" asked the schoolmistress, stopping short.

"Hey? 'Has a peculiar limp with his left foot.' I remember how Desire used to talk about that limp. She said 'twas almost as if he stuttered with his leg. He hurt it when he was up in Montana and"—

"Yes. You see, he used to be a miner or somethin' up there. He'd never say much about his younger days, but one time he did tell that. I'd just got as far as that limp when the sulky upset. Talk about bein' surprised! I never was so surprised in my life as when that horse critter rared up and"—

Phoebe interrupted. Her color had come back, and her eyes were shining.

"Mrs. Beasley," she cried, "I think I shall change my mind. I believe I will stay to dinner after all. I'm ever so much interested in Arizona."

CHAPTER XVII.

DECEMBER was nearly over. Christmas had come. Bos'n had hung up her stocking by the base burner stove and found it warty and dropsical the next morning with a generous overflow of gifts piled on the floor beneath it.

The board of strategy came in during the forenoon, and the presents had to be shown to them. While the exhibition was in progress Miss Dawes called. And before she left Gabe Lumley drove up in the depot wagon bearing a big express package addressed to "Miss Emily Thomas, Bayport."

"Humph!" exclaimed Captain Cy. "Somethin' more for Bos'n, hey? Who in the world sent it, do you s'pose?"

Asaph and Bailey made various inane suggestions as to the sender. Phoebe said nothing. There was a frown on her face as she watched the captain get to work on the box with chisel and hammer. It contained a beautiful doll, fully and expensively dressed, and pinned to the dress was a card—"To dear little Emmie, from her lonesome papa."

The board of strategy looked at the doll in wonder and astonishment. Captain Cy strode away to the window.

"Well!" exclaimed Mr. Bangs. "I didn't believe he had that much heart inside of him. I bet you that cost $4 or $5. Ain't that so, Cy?"

The captain did not answer.

"Don't you think so, teacher?" repeated Bailey, turning to Phoebe. "What ails you? You don't seem surprised."

"I'm not," replied the lady. "I expected something of that sort."

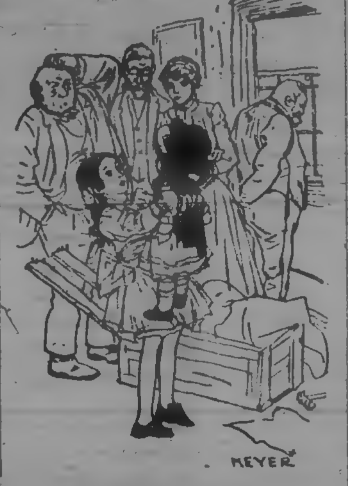
Captain Cy wheeled from the window.

"You did?" he asked.

"Yes. Miss Phinney said the other day she had heard that that man was going to give his daughter a beautiful present. She was very enthusiastic about his generosity and self sacrifice. I asked who told her, and she said Mr Tad Simpson."

In January the court gave its decision. The captain's appointment as guardian was revoked. With the father alive and professedly anxious to provide for the child's support, nothing else was to be expected, so Mr. Peabody said. The latter entered an appeal, which would delay matters for a time, two or three months perhaps. Meanwhile Captain Cy was to retain custody of Bos'n.

But the court's action, expected though it was, made the captain very blue and downcast. He could see no hope. He felt certain that he should lose the little girl in the end in spite of the long succession of appeals which his lawyer contemplated. And what would become of her then? Who would her associates be under the authority of a father such as hers?



"I BET YOU THAT COST $4 OR $5."

Phoebe Dawes had come to be his chief reliance. He saw a great deal of her. Often when she walked home from school she found him hanging over the front gate, and they talked of various things—of Bos'n's progress with her studies, of the school work and similar topics. He called her by her first name now, although in this there was nothing unusual. After a few weeks' acquaintance we Bayporters almost invariably address people by their "front" names. Sometimes she came to the house with Emily.

Phoebe was in good spirits. She was as hopeful as Captain Cy was despondent. She seemed to have little fear of the outcome of the legal proceedings, the appeals and the rest. Her optimism was the best sort of bracer for the captain's failing courage.

One cold, rainy afternoon early in February she came in with Bos'n, who had availed herself of the shelter of the teacher's umbrella. Georgianna was in the kitchen baking, and Emily had been promised a "saucer pie." So the child went out to superintend the construction of that treat.

"Set down, teacher," said Captain Cy. "What's the news—anything?"

"Why, no," replied Phoebe, throwing open her wet jacket. "There's no news in particular. But I wanted to ask if you had seen the Breeze."

"Um—hum!" was the listless answer. "I presume likely you mean the news about the appropriation and the editorial dig at yours truly? Yes, I've seen it. They don't bother me much. I've got more important things on my mind just now."

Congressman Atkins' pledge in his farewell speech concerning the mighty effort he was to make toward securing the appropriation for Bayport harbor was in process of fulfillment—so he had written to the local paper. But, alas, the mighty effort was likely to prove unavailing. In spite of the Honorable Heman's battle for his constituents' rights it seemed certain that the bill would not provide the $30,000 for Bayport—at least not this year's bill. Other and more powerful interests would win out and, instead, an other section of the coast be improved at the public expense.

So, at Simmons' and the sewing circle and after meeting on Sunday, Cy Whittaker was again discussed and derided. And this week's Breeze, out that morning, contained a sarcastic editorial which mentioned no names, but hinted at "a certain now notorious person" who had boasted loudly, but who had again "been weighed in the balance of public opinion and found wanting, for he had been a self appointed committee of one, who had promised to succeed if Atkins might fail."

Britain's Boasted Strength.

Europe combined against France and was beaten; the failure being largely due to us. The balance of power being overthrown, the war continued for 23 years. Our fleet was powerless to bring it to a close. It continued for nearly ten years after our signal victory at Trafalgar. Our army was only able to land very small numbers in Spain and formed about a quarter of the allied force which defeated Napoleon at Waterloo. We have never fought a great land campaign against a European power in the whole of our history. We have never faced a European enemy with more than [illegible] men. The balance has been made up by foreigners. And on the strength of that, we talk of having beaten the world!—Lord Percy, in The National Review, London.

The "A" In Cocoanut.

How an error led to the accepted spelling of cocoanut was explained by Sir Everard im Thurn, in the course of an address to the members of the Royal Horticultural Society recently.

He said that in the course of its growth the nut which was now known as the cocoanut was similar to the face of a monkey, and so the Spanish and Portuguese word "coco," meaning a grin or grimace, was attached to it.

When Dr. Johnson was compiling his famous dictionary he had an article on the "coco nut," but a careless proofreader passed a mistake in the spelling of the word, the compositor having inserted an "a," and the word appeared as "cocoanut," a spelling which has been used ever since.

OPINIONS ON THE PROPOSED INCREASE OF MEMBERS' INDEMNITY

Mr. J. H. Burnham is Opposed to an Increase Until the People Who Pay, Say so—East Peterboro Member Says the Salary is Not Sufficient

Asked for his opinion of the proposed increase in the members' indemnity, Mr. H. J. Burnham, M.P., gave the following statement to the Review:

"I may say," said Mr. Burnham "that I am strongly opposed to it, and am still until the people who pay the salary say that they wish to increase it. If I am not satisfied with my wages, it is open to me to quit. That is my view of the matter. It is true that at least 95 per cent of the members on both sides of the House do not agree with this position, and it makes it very difficult for men like myself to keep from becoming exceedingly unpopular, for, as you know, to oppose an increase of salary is not a popular thing to do. Mr. Borden, however, insisted, that the members should, during the summer, find out the opinion of their constituents, and for that reason the topic is a live issue in West Peterborough just now. I referred the matter to the County Council at its last meeting, and they recorded their opinion against the proposed increase. The Warden, Mr. Garbutt, however, has expressed himself openly as being against my opinion, and in favor of the members of Parliament voting themselves the proposed increase. Mr. Sexsmith, whose opinion is entitled to great weight, is very strongly of opinion that owing to the increased cost of living members should be paid much more than at present. He, of course, must speak for himself, and I understand from you that you are giving his opinions in your present issue in this respect. Mr. Sexsmith states that unless the people wish Parliament to consist only of men who can afford to go there on their own resources they will have to increase the pay of the members. There can be no question that if this is true the salary should be increased because Canada is in the same position that President Wilson says the United States is in, namely, in the grasp of the greedy ones. The man who deals in money, otherwise the financier and promoter, has all the cards in his hand and can make, as he does, profits at the expense of the people, and these profits are only reflected in the enormous fortunes of the men. It will take a long time to work it out, and possibly not so long, but it is doubtful if the people will be flim-flammed in the future as they have been in the past. Therefore, if Mr. Sexsmith's statement is correct, the proposed remedy is desirable, but let us get down to hardpan. The members can live in Ottawa, unless he wants to put on side, very comfortably on $60 a month. Four months is the proper length of his term of service, and if by reason of fighting for control of the treasury that time is extended, it is not the fault of the people, but of the members. $240, say $300, will pay a member's living expenses. If he has a wife this will be more than doubled. It is true that his business or profession suffers at home, but $2,500 is all that most men can make in four months, even at the risk of injuring their other business. At any rate, in view of the wages paid the great mass of the people, I think the salary is high enough. You must remember that during this last two years I have had the honor of being chairman of a committee that inquired into the economic conditions of life in Canada, and therefore I ought to know something about it, and I can tell you frankly that the solicitude for the increase of the pay by those in high places is not nearly so warrantable as the increase of the pay of the average wage earner. For the latter to shrink means almost literal starvation for himself and his family, but the former could shrink without doing himself any serious damage, and in many cases, speaking frankly, my own opinion is that a little shrinking would do many of our Canadian highfliers a great deal of good. On one occasion in the House, after I had made some remarks on another subject, but of somewhat the same tenor as this, the Hon. George Graham remarked that such sentiments were worthy only of demigogues. I must say that I was amazed, but not in the least bit terrified, and if the Hon. George Graham had opposed the C.N.R. grant as stoutly as he opposed the tenor of my remarks, he would have shown to my mind much better judgment. Of course I must not be understood as declining pay. That would be making too much of a saint out of myself altogether. I haven't reached that stage yet, but so long as I remain in politics, and that may not be very long, I shall most certainly not take my own pay out of the public treasury with my own hands whether it be large or small. Canadians are accused of having lost all pride because of their love for money and I regret to say that for various other reasons to me it looks exceedingly like it. If our clergy instead of preaching theology would recall us to a sense of appreciation of consistency in the conduct of life, it would be, I believe, a good thing. We are, to my own knowledge in the position in many cases of the little boy at the picnic whose stomach is too strong for his sense of personal dignity and who takes away in his pockets that which he is unable to eat. I may be talking wildly but I don't think it. In fact I am absolutely convinced from what I actually know that I am saying what is true, and it is an appalling thing to think that that portion of the community which has the greatest opportunity and the greatest leverage is willing to use both without even first asking the consent of that other portion which is so busy keeping itself from starving that it has no time to think of politics."

---

The Review also interviewed Mr. J. A. Sexsmith, M. P., and learned that the member for East Peterborough was very much in favor of the proposal, as he felt that the present indemnity was not sufficient to meet the high expenses incurred by attendance at Parliament. He said he could not afford to do it and that there were many other members in the same position as he.

"We have to pay all expenses during the session of Parliament," said Mr. Sexsmith, "and this includes one large item of telegrams. Some members have to send as many as from fifteen to twenty telegrams each day."

"Take the case of a member from British Columbia who has to make such a long trip. He cannot leave his family at home and therefore is put to heavy expense in bringing them to Ottawa where the cost of living is high. His own earning powers are also to be considered as it practically means that his business must give way to his duties in the House."

Mr Sexsmith said it was all very well for men with means but he pointed out that the moneyed men were very prominent when the Bank Act was being considered. When other business was up for discussion their seats were vacant.

Mr. Sexsmith would not say how much in his opinion, the indemnity should be.

THE ORIENTAL IS WELL LIKED

Popular House Under New Management is Well Patronized

Travelling men who come to the city are pleased with the Oriental Hotel under the new regime. Many say they are distinctly pleased. They have enough bustle and hurry when on the cities to appreciate a restful, quiet house. The Oriental was always a house that stood well with the travelling public, and Mr. Chas. Graham and Mr. Thos. McDonough had hosts of friends gained during the years of carrying on the business. There is probably no more popular hotel man between Toronto and Montreal than Chris. Graham, while Tom McDonough is a general favorite. The house under temperance management was looked at as more or less of an experiment, and it is gratifying to know that it is more than holding its own. True some faces are absent that used to frequent it. That is to be expected or else Mr. George and Mr. Chris Graham had no friends. Many are loyal to the old management, but very many are loyal to the old house, and express their satisfaction with things under the new management.

Tape Worm Cure

TAPE WORM.

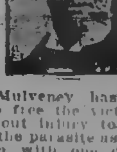
Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.



Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince us of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are, ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ¾ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress, which would take too long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always effects a cure. Further information free—Send stamped envelope or call at 167 Dundas St. Prof. R. L. Mulveney.

A HOST OF INTERNAL DEMONS.

A host of internal demons, thirteen in number, were expelled by Professor Mulveney's World's Famous Tapeworm Cure, from John Harkanon of No. 12 Drummond Place. Mr. Harkanon was eat alive with these evil paracites, which would measure over 200 feet; to all appearence he looked like a person who was dying with consumption, as he was so thin and weak. On the night of October 19th, 1911, he purchased Prof. Mulveney's Famous Tapeworm Cure. At 9 a.m. on October 20th he took the remedy and at 6 o'clock of the same day was relieved of thirteen tapeworms. This is the greatest tangle of tapeworms that the Professor has ever had brought to him in all his long experience, the largest number taken from one person at one time, previous to this being seven. These were taken from a lady of this city. Mr. Harkanon is a young man about twenty years of age, but appears much older, being wasted away to a shadow. Recently he has suffered much from headaches and excruciating pains in the bowels, these monsters having made life almost unbearable. It is needless to say that he is now a happy man, and owes his life to the merits of Professor Mulveney's World Famous Cure. This big colony of tapeworms is to be seen securely sealed in a large glass bottle at 167 Dundas Street, Toronto.

If you are suffering, call and secure medicine that has cured others and will cure all who use it. Do not delay, but come to 167 Dundas Street. Information free.

PROF. R. L. MULVENEY.

We draw attention to the descriptive advertisement of Professor Mulveney, on this page, and recommend our readers to a perusal of same. A call at the office and laboratory at 167 Dundas Street will convince the most sceptical that the wonderful claims of the Professor are substantiated by facts. Here we see in sealed certified bottles the deadly tapeworm which had found growth in various men, women and children. There also can be seen from all over the continent, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from the far North to the Gulf of Mexico, the original testimonials from patients whose malady had succumbed to the Professor's treatment. The results seem incredible until one has actually visited 167 Dundas Street; they are true nevertheless.

Largest Known Flower.

The largest known flower in the world grows in Sumatra. This flower is parasitic, and to science it is known as Rafflesia Arnoldi, so called in honor of Sir Stamford Raffles, one-time governor of Sumatra, and Dr Arnold, a naturalist, these two being the first white men to find one of the gigantic curiosities, while together on an exploration trip.

The flower is of five petals about a foot long, and of equal width, surrounding a depressed disk or cup of like diameter. The petals are very fleshy, a single blossom weighs about 15 pounds. The petals are of a brick-red color, covered with warty, irregular excrescences of yellowish white and, on the whole, rather attractive, for all of its coarseness. The central disk is covered with horn-like protuberances and when these are removed the cup will hold three gallons of water.

THE RAILWAYS AND CARTAGE CO'S

Railways of Canada have issued notice of cancellation of tariffs covering cartage points in Canada effective October 1, 1913. On and after that date shippers and consignees will be expected to make their own arrangements for cartage.

It is stated that this action on the part of the transportation companies is the result of the failure to renew existing contracts with the cartage companies at present prices, the latter claiming that owing to increased cost of supplies, labor and other matters entering into the performance of the service, they must have increased compensation. On the other hand, the railways contend that it is impossible to increase this burden of such extra expense for the very reason given by the cartage companies—namely, increased expenses.

The change in conditions at cartage points in Canada, it is pointed out is in line with practices which have long prevailed at American points with the cartage companies [illegible] cities, where the public are obliged to make their own arrangements for deliveries to or from the railway terminal.

MUST COVER THE FRUIT

Only One Dealer Has Conformed With By-law

Several of the merchants have not as yet made any move toward abiding with the by-law regarding the covering of fruit outside the store. Only one man has taken a step along this line, and he is Mr. Longo, on Hunter street. He has a very nice case outside his large window, and it adds improvement to his store, and also serves for the required purpose.

The general feeling among the business men is that "they can't throw that scare into me." Nevertheless, Mr. Spence the Sanitary Inspector, says that if they do not soon obey the law, that he will cease warning them and will have them prosecuted. He will allow only a few more days of grace, in which time they are expected to make the necessary improvements.

THE LOCAL MARKET

PETERBOROUGH, July 5.—The market this morning was rather small. Butter sold for 27 cents and 28 cents, while eggs went from 22 cents to 24 cents. Raspberries put in their appearance this morning for the first time and sold for 25 cents per quart. They are rather scarce but several farmers say that this rain will help. # NERVOUS TROUBLES ON THE INCREASE

They Are Due to an Impoverished Condition of the Blood

Nervous exhaustion—or neurasthenia, as medical men call it—is one of the greatest evils of the present day, for it is destroying the life and energy of thousands of men and women, or worse, driving them to insanity. The causes of this trouble include overwork, mental strain, worry, indiscretions, and sometimes it follows la grippe. The signs of this trouble are usually great weakness after any exertion, nervous headache, trembling hands, shakiness in the legs, irritability of temper, weak digestive power, insomnia. The life of the sufferer becomes full of miseries.

The true treatment for this trouble must consist of a building up process, for the above signs mean that the exhausted nerves are calling for more nourishment from the blood supply. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich blood that feeds the starved complaining nerves, and in this way they have cured thousands of times neurasthenia, neuralgia and other nervous disorders, and have restored strength and nerve-energy to despairing people. Mrs. Isaac Wilson, Calabogie, Ont., gives thanks for having been restored to health by the use of this medicine, she says: "When I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was a nervous wreck; I couldn't do my work, could not sleep at night, suffered from nervous headaches, and the least noise would completely upset me. Only those who have suffered from nervous trouble can tell what I endured. I doctored for a time, but did not get any benefit. Then I learned of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and sent for a half dozen boxes. By the time I had used these I was almost well and a couple more boxes completely restored my health, and I have had no return of the trouble. I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to those who suffered from any form of nervous trouble."

If you are weak, nervous or out of health begin to cure yourself today with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can get them from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

It is well to wash an embroidered pongee in gasoline. While the water might not injure the pongee, it might the embroidery.

And its better soap.
Do you still buy soap by the cake? Have your grocer weigh the different kinds for you, and this is what you will see.
1 Bar of N.P. SOAP at 15¢ weighs more than 4 cakes of any 5 cent brand and more than 5 cakes of some kinds. That means you can save 5 cents by using N.P. SOAP or 25¢ on every dollar's worth. 3

CADETS AT BARRIEFIELD

The 2nd annual cadet camp opened at Barriefield on Thursday, when some 600 cadets went under canvas for 5 days. Amongst the corps present are some 60 cadets from Peterborough.

Owing to the excessive heat on Thursday it was found necessary to allow the boys to rest on their march from Kingston to Barriefield, a distance of about two miles.

The refreshment booths along the road were much appreciated by the boys, and the proprietors were kept busy handing out ice cream and soft drinks.

The camp ground is very dry with the blazing sun. It makes one feel as if he were crossing a desert.

On their arrival at Barriefield on Thursday afternoon the first work of the cadets was to pitch their tents. The baggage also had to be looked after. After the work the cadets repaired to the cook house, where supper was served. One thing the boys feel thankful for is the "grub," which, although plain, is plentiful.

One of the features of the camp is a refreshment tent on the grounds at which soft drinks, pies and ice cream can be purchased. A post office is also close to the camp, while mail boxes are scattered throughout the camp.

Up to the present time the cadets are mostly from Peterborough, Lindsay, Millbrook, Port Hope, Stirling, Brighton, Napanee, Campbellford, Gananoque, Camden East, Tamworth, Vankleek Hill, Kingston and Ottawa.

The Literal Mind

All orders to native servants in India must be literally given, for in that manner they will be received. A missionary once took a country lad as a servants when going out on a boating journey. As there are no lavatories on board the country boats, one's ablutions have to be performed in a very simple manner, an ordinary bucket serving as a wash bowl. The boy was told to bring some water and in doing so happened to spill a little on the floor. "Why don't you throw it all over me?" asked the missionary jocosely. "Aha," said the lad, and immediately, to his master's astonishment, he took up the pail and emptied it over his employer's head.

SPRINGTIME in Paris! Where is there to be found anything like it to charm the eye and delight the senses?

Paris amuses itself in spring in a most picturesque setting. Whether it is at the elegant assemblage at the polo games at Bagatelle, the cosmopolitan throng of the shaded walks along the Allées des Acacias or the kaleidoscopic crowd in the pesage at Longchamps or Auteuil, there is always an effective background of broad avenues, towering trees or grassy lawns. Showing that red is in high style, that Russian green and sapphire blues enter into many costumes in whole or part, that yellows like jonquil and brass are fashionable and black and white lends a sobering note to the brighter hues, one can easily picture the lively coloring of the pretty tableaux accidentally caught by the camera and reproduced on this page.

At the Bagatelle polo meets, where one sees many English and Americans, some very elegant costumes are worn. Though often simple, they are impeccable in cut, material and detail. In one group of three pretty women one wears a simple tailored suit of blue moire enlivened by the filmy blouse collar that has been drawn over the coat. The correct sailor hat, with its [illegible] on the brim edge is tipped [illegible] on the head. On the centre figure a [illegible] Medici lace collar is [illegible] with a [illegible] [illegible] dress. A filmy dark tulle hat [illegible]. On the third figure the lace resolves itself into frills at the neck and wrists and the becoming tricorn shaped hat gives style to the short costume. The pretty patent leather shoes worn with these dresses, with their slender strapping across the instep, are all the more attractive because of the simplicity of the costumes.

A woman photographed while descending from [illegible] in the Bois wears a gown of white lace and satin. It is draped into the latest lines that give the effect of Turkish trousers because of the slash in front. The over [illegible] of [illegible] covers in part the skirt and mounts over the tulle corsage, leaving the shoulders in filmy transparency. No less conspicuous is the dark tulle hat made with the vertical layers of this material.

In another picture of the Bagatelle polo [illegible] ultra fashionable [illegible] a skirt fitted by vertical folds taken in the straight material. The brocaded [illegible] latest line has the lower part [illegible] to the top by a piped seam.

On one figure in a delightfully natural grouping taken at the Longchamps race meet is shown a bib panel that extends above and below the belt, disclosing the peculiar draped and curved slash seen in so many skirts. On another figure a satin dress has the upper part of the corsage of the same color chiffon, veiling transparently the shoulders and sleeves, and still another frock is of the new brightly printed [illegible] with a contrasting collar, vest and revers.

In the shaded walk of the Allées des Acacias one of the promenaders wears perhaps the most remarkable of the fashions shown, for the skirt is what is most expected for autumn wear. It is the tailored simplification of the draped skirt and is notable because it changes the straight up and down shape of the skirt that has been the fashion for several years in tailored suits. The few folds are held in place by the fold ends being stitched down, and the slashed front allows for ease in walking. The bolero, with drop shoulder and long sleeves, is very short, but reveals a contrasting longer vest without revers; this tiny coat has a simple border of a bias band of the material.

The three large figures are typical of the latest draperies. All, it will be noticed, change the silhouette considerably, widening the hips, in appearance.

In the third costume, of old blue charmeuse, the skirt opens in front and the pleated folds are caught underneath the diagonal folds. The girdle is twisted about the lower part of the filmy net corsage, which is of two layers of tulle, with wide blue ribbon showing transparently through the lower part. About the lapel and sleeve edges the narrow ruffling is fluted, also across the top of the under corsage, which shows in the opening in front. The picturesque hat worn with this costume is made of satin with wide white layers of tulle bordered with black and gathered with black velvet ribbon that also straps under the chin.

A FAMOUS JUDGE.

Lord Justice Williams Was Worst Dressed Man in London.

Lord Justice Vaughan Williams, at the recent dinner of the Union Society of London, was very appropriate in his speech, replying to the toast of "The Bench," as to justice being administered in open court before the public and that the judges were open to criticism. His promotion to the Court of Appeal has not changed him a whit from the simple and amiable barrister beloved by articled clerks of the 'eighties as "Butty" Williams, in playful, but by no means disrespectful, reference to his habit of butting his head towards the bench when pleading. At that time, says a legal correspondent of "The Evening Standard," he was the living presentiment of Dr. Samuel Johnson in modern attire. There was the correct rolling gait, and the same big, burly figure. He revelled in the character of being the worst-dressed man in the Temple, with the doubtful exception of his own clerk. He always was, and is now, as careless of his appearance as the immortal Dr. Johnson.

His robe was an old rusty one, and his wig quite in keeping. With regard to his wig, it caused him considerable worry in court as a practicing barrister. First he would commence shifting it a little, and scratch his temple when deep in argument. By degrees he moved it more and more, until it rested casually on the let ear. Then he appeared satisfied, and showed fine forensic form. His leisure moments are occupied by farming operations at his country retreat at the foot of Leith Hill. Some time ago the butchers of Guildford, to whom he was accustomed to sell the sheep he reared on his farm, agreed to reduce the price they had been paying him. Within a few days of this combination coming to his knowledge, Sir Roland Williams took a shop in the town, had his honored name put over the window, and undersold the butchers, who were only too glad to resume their relations with him on the old terms. When at home he always drives to the station in the village milkcart, in order, as he says, "that he may have the benefit of the man's conversation as to cows."

His departure from the traditional habit of judges to travel in first-class compartments on their railway journeys from one circuit to another once occasioned an amusing mistake at an assize town. The high sheriff, in full court costume, with white wand in hand, and his full retinue, was waiting to receive his lordship. Sir Roland detested nothing quite so much as the pomp and ceremonial of assize, and had a scarcely diguised contempt for a sheriff's equipage and the puerile anachronisms of javelinmen and trumpters. As the train drew up at the platform, a distinguished-looking man stepped out of a first-class carriage. "This must be the judge," concluded the high sheriff, who hastened to greet him with the reverence to which judges are accustomed on circuit. The man was a fur-coated, pompous commercial traveler, who was driven away in state. Meanwhile Justice Vaughan Williams (as he then was), in his sober traveling guise, was getting out of a third-class compartment in the rear of the train, and devoting his attention to his luggage. Lighting a big cigar, he quietly strolled to the judge's lodgings with little regard to dignity.

SAVED FROM CAVE-IN.

Toronto Laborer Is Dug Out With His Team.

TORONTO, July 5.—Forty men, shoveling with all their strength, succeeded in rescuing Robert Rolph, 1,423 Dufferin street, from suffocation under a landslide which buried him and his team, at Norway yesterday. Rolph was at work drawing away sand from the lower end of St. John's Cemetery, when the sand shifted and 60 tons of it crashed down upon him.

Clarence Foley, who had just left the pit with a load, looked back, and, not seeing Rolph, called out to the foreman of a gang of men laying a sewer nearby. The workmen responded instantly, and by dint of hurculean effort both man and team were saved. Rolph was taken in the police ambulance to the General Hospital, but was well enough to go home before evening.

Incident Is Closed.

MONTREAL, July 5.—The incident arising over the intimation of Archbishop Brucesi, which resulted in the non-appearance of Gonsalve Desaulniers, K.C., at the recent Soiree de la Pensee Francaise, held in Laval University Convocation Hall, has now been closed, correspondence between his grace the archbishop and Mr. Desaulniers having brought out the fact that the whole affair arose over a misunderstanding. Mutual regrets are expressed, and both the archbishop and Mr. Desaulniers intimate that they hope the incident will be considered as closed.

ALL LOST THEIR MONEY

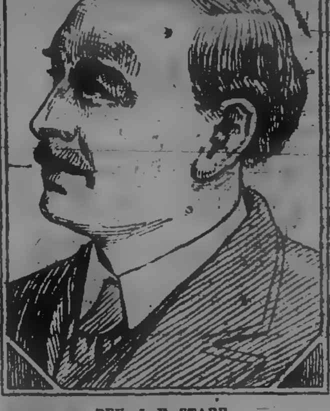
VICTORIA SPORTS BET ON REV. J. E. STARR MAKING RETORT.

Methodist Minister Not Only Caused the Gambling Fraternity of Pacific Coast City to Lose Their Money But He Also Had the Last Word When He Delivered the Benediction.

Once upon a time a fearless judge of the Supreme Court sitting in Victoria was brave enough to manhandle the Rev. J. E. Starr, who was appearing as a witness in a case. The Rev. J. E. was fearless himself. If there was anything he was noted for in the fair coast city it was for the dauntless way in which he denounced things of which he disapproved. Busy young reporters let the citizens in on the court incident and speculation was keen as to the nature of the revenge the firebrand young Methodist preacher would take.



REV. J. E. STARR.

Victoria is the Monte Carlo of Canada; from which it may be inferred that gambling is a favorite pastime in that place. Bets were made freely in large numbers and for large sums as to whether or not the parson would flay the judge on Sunday night. Other bets, and these were more numerous, were as to the nature of the scourging.

Mr. Starr's church was packed on Sunday night. They turned most of the people away. The reverend gentleman preached a noble sermon that night, but his lordship did not figure in a line, not even by inference. By and bye the closing hymn was sung and the people prepared to file out after the benediction, disappointed that nothing had happened.

But the minister was not through. The benediction was not quite finished.

"—And may the Lord have mercy on those who lost their money tonight. Amen," it concluded.

Antarctic Coal.

The Shackleton and Scott expeditions in search of the South Pole have shown that large quantities of coal exist in the Antarctic continent. The deposits are very extensive, and Australian experts who have examined the coal pronounce it of good quality.

It is hard to grasp the climatic changes indicated by this discovery. Coal is a vegetable deposit. It is the preserved and buried carbon of growing plants. Yet here it is found in vast amounts in a land covered with ice that seems eternal; a country compared to which southern Greenland is hospitable and mild.

Long before this supply will be needed other things than coal will probably be turning the wheels of our factories. Men now living may see the tides of the Bay of Fundy harnessed and put to work and the sunshine falling on our southwestern deserts, perform more labor than even our output of coal.

But it piles tragedy on tragedy to think of Capt. Scott and his men freezing and starving, with food only 11 miles away, and coal almost under their feet.

You'll Sleep More Soundly

If You Keep Healthy With Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

The man or woman with a good appetite, sound digestion, and bowels and kidneys working right, is never troubled much with sleeplessness. It is when the bowels become constipated and the liver and kidneys sluggish that the trouble begins.

Lazy liver and constipated bowels quickly bring on biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, making a sound, refreshing night's sleep impossible. Or the inactive kidneys allow the blood to becomes loaded with uric acid, which causes rheumatism, with all its sleep-destroying tortures.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, taken regularly, induce sweet and dreamless sleep by keeping all these organs active and regular. The headaches disappear, the digestion becomes good again, the blood is purified and perfect health returns.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been a favorite household remedy in Canada for over half a century, and they are in daily use throughout the world. Being purely vegetable they are safe for young and old. Made by W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., Brockville, Ont., and sold by all dealers at 25c. a box. 9

150 Cavalry Horses & 50 Artillery Horses

100 Cavalry Horses & 50 Artillery Horses
From Petawawa Camp, on Wednesday, July 9th

These horses were specially bought for the purposes of the Government, for the annual training at these Military Camps. They were purchased at prices as high as $600 per team, and from that figure to $400 per team. They are a very fine lot of horses through and through, every single one having gone through a severe examination by the Government Veterinary Inspectors, and no defective horse having been purchased. They are therefore the best of horses. They were well cared for at camp, and are in good shape after a trying month's work.

The majority of them are 5 to 7 years old, and sound. The gunners weigh 1,350 to 1,550 lbs., and are grand general purpose or draught horses. The cavalry horses are a very fine lot, that will make the best of wagon and delivery horses or drivers. When purchased these horses were bought with the view of being resold for general working purposes, and buyers will get a splendid lot of thoroughly good horses at their own bids. Remember, every single horse will be sold, and the opportunity is far too good to lose.

Got Pork Monopoly.

Rather a curious piece of news comes from Shivegyin in Burma, India. A Mahomedan bid at an auction at Shwegyin for the right to vend pork in the bazaar, and, the Chinese having agreed not to go beyond a certain figure, the pork monopoly was knocked down to a Mohammedan. His co-religionists are very indignant over the matter, and have held a meeting to consider what step should be taken. Apparently, it is not known in Burma that Mohammedan servants in European houses in Calcutta have not the slightest objection to handling pork, and that there are Mohammedan pork butchers as well in the city.

No Female Suffrage Yet.

Female suffrage will be carried, and it will only be carried, when it has obtained so large a measure of public support that a Government can be formed all of whom members believe in the enfranchisement of women, and which is strong enough to defend itself against attack in Parliament and in the constituencies. Very few of us, in my humble judgment, will live to see the formation of such a government, still fewer the successful execution of its difficult undertaking—F. E. Smith, M.P., in The British Review.

RESCUED FROM THE LIGHTHOUSE

Two Men Were Left Stranded When Canoe Drifted Away

From Jubilee Point comes a tale of a "thrilling" rescue of two lighthouse keepers, who had the misfortune to be marooned on a lighthouse, because their canoe became unruly and left without saying good-bye.

Messrs. Albert and Nelson Nurse were the rescued ones, and Harry Peters was the helping hand. The two men paddled out Monday night to the lighthouse and in some manner, the canoe drifted away. This was about nine o'clock and it was not till two long hours had come and gone that their cries for assistance reached the ear of Harry Peters at the Point, and he paddled to the lighthouse and brought them ashore.

FOURTH OF JULY

Americans Had Big Time at On-A-Wanna Camp

The celebration of Independence Day by some Americans residing in Peterboro and employed at the C.G.E., was not prevented by the inclement weather of yesterday evening.

On-a-wauna Camp, on the Otonabee, at which the celebration took place last night, was decorated for the purpose with Japanese lanterns, and right in front was a large Union Jack with the Stars and Stripes on either side. Fireworks and American yells kept a large audience interested on the other shore.

The happy crowd brought their Fourth of July celebration to a close about 11.30.

HEAVY TRAFFIC TO THE LAKES

The passenger traffic to Stoney Lake points is very large this season, and Mr. F. G. Young, manager of the Stoney Lake Navigation Co. is authority for the statement that traffic during the week has been larger than the first part of August in previous years.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Although the temptation to spend the evening out-of-doors was very great, a large number of delegates from the local unions affiliated with the Trades and Labor Council were present at the Labor Hall on Wednesday evening when President Moore called the meeting to order.

The business was mostly of the routine order. A communication was received from Toronto District Labor Council asking the local Council to send a letter of protest to the Minister of Public Works, with reference to "the high-handed manner in which the union carpenters of Toronto have been treated by their misrepresentatives in Queen's Park." Toronto carpenters have recently been on strike, abd after about 150 employers had signed agreements to pay 45 cents per hour, the Dept. of Public Works issued an order that the same be paid on all government jobs, and the men returned to work, but after a deputation from the Builders' Exchange, representing about 10 employers that waited upon the department the order was withdrawn and the foreman instructed to pay the Builders' Exchange rate of wages—42 cents per hour. The secretary was instructed to comply with the request.

International President McNulty, of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, addressed the delegates and gave some interesting information regarding the work of that organization.

Several local matters came up for discussion and committees appointed to investigate and report at the next meeting of Council.

The Labor Day celebration promises to eclipse all previous demonstrations in Peterborough. The year 1913 promises to be a banner year for trade unionism in this city. There are 15 local unions affiliated with the central body, representing a membership of nearly 1,000. Five new organisations have been born since the beginning of the year, and they are headed by youngsters. The Trades and Labor Council is the mouthpiece of organized labor, and its politics "the betterment of the working classes."

WOMAN HAS LONG RIDE.

Does 2,000 Miles on Motorcycle From Cape Town to Pretoria.

Miss E. E. C. Watson, who had the courage to undertake a lonely 2,000 miles motorcycle trip from Cape Town to Pretoria, has returned to London, England. She is none the worse for her journey, but she found when she arrived in South Africa that almost every motorist advised her not to proceed with her plan. "You will never do it," they said. "Even if nothing else stops you the sand and rough roads will." She accomplished the journey in spite of the sand and rough roads, which caused her to dismount many times and wheel her cycle, but the new outfit with which she started is scattered along the waste of country.

She wore riding breeches, a habit coat, high lace-up boots, a motorist's peaked cap, and rode a 2 1-2 horse-power motorcycle.

The journey was not accomplished without some hardships. At night Miss Watson slept in the huts belonging to the gangers, who are placed at five miles, or found refuge with lonely Boer families, where only the children understood English, and they acted as interpreters. Some of the roads were impossible for cycling, and the only non-stop run she had was one of 36 miles from Kimberley to Johannesburg. In one town a cyclist came up to her and told her that she would never complete her journey, for the sand would keep her.

The only occasion when she was tempted to use her revolver presented itself on Majuba Hill. A native approached her, and demanded money. She had none to give him, but mounted her cycle and felt for her revolver. To her amazement the cycle refused to "spark," but just as the Kaffir was putting his hand on the back wheel the cycle started forward, and she tore down the hill. Miss Watson had some trouble with the streams, and on several occasions she "rushed" them, and landed on the other side soaked. During the journey Miss Watson met the first woman in South Africa who ever used a motorcycle in that country. She was Mrs. Sutton, a daughter of Gen. Cronje.

Prince of Wales In Society.

Empire Day was especially notable in London this year as marking the coming out of the Prince of Wales. He came up from Oxford in the morning and later in the day escorted his sister, Princess Mary, to the League of Mercy concert in Albert Hall.

This may be said to be his first appearance as a man of family. Future appearances of the prince in society are looked forward to with keen interest, as it is fifty years since a bachelor Prince of Wales has been the central figure in the social world

AUTHENTIC REPORTS SHOW BULGARIANS ARE WINNING

After Ten Days of the Most Severe Fighting, in Which the Servians Have Lost More Men Than in the Whole Turkish War--King Ferdinand's Forces Have Gained Extensive Advantages.

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, July 7.—The Belgrade correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says both the Servian and Bulgarian losses are heart-breaking, but there is reason to believe that the Bulgarians lost more, because they hurled themselves on the Servian positions in close formation with the bayonet, disregarding the certainty of horrible butchery. Throughout the sixty mile frontier there has been for a whole week a series of desperate night attacks with bayonets resulting in great slaughter.

VIENNA, July 7.—Despatches from Sofia say, eleven thousand Servian officers and men of the Timok division, which was surrounded by the Bulgarian amry of four thousand, were taken prisoners.

LONDON, July 7.—After ten days of fighting, more severe and deadly in character than anything in the last Balkan war, a little light begins to break upon the hitherto obscure operations. In the first place, the Servians have lost more men than in the whole previous campaign, and semi-official statements issued at Belgrade have the appearance of an intention to prepare the public for news of a disaster.

Desperate fighting, with fluctuating fortunes, is proceeding along the Vardar and Bregalinitsa rivers, which seems to be in favor of the Bulgarians. Important news has been received of the Bulgarian invasion of Servia through Belogradchyk, about 15 miles northeast of Nish, Servia's most important fortified town. No indication is given of the strength of the Bulgarian column at this point, but the Bulgarians claim to have defeated the Servians and captured five guns and a quantity of other war material, and by the occupation of the passes, to have opened the road to Nish.

There is heavy fighting also between the Servians and Bulgarians to the south of Istip and in the neighborhood of Kotchana. About 200,000 men are engaged and the losses on both sides appear to be terrible.

Bulgaria's strategy appears to be to hold the Greeks in check, probably with comparatively small forces, while she deals with Servia. This assumption, if correct, would explain the victorious advance of the Greek army.

Unconfirmed reports credit the Bulgarians with victories near Koprili, giving them the key to Uskup and with an outflanking movement from the south of Tahyinos Lake, which would cut off the Greek retreat.

Saloniki despatches continue to report Greek victories. The Greeks are said to have captured sixteen guns at Doiran. Evidence of desperate fighting is found in the arrival of 8,000 wounded at Saloniki, taxing the town's accommodation and resources to the uttermost.

A conservative estimate of the killed or disabled in last week's fighting fixes the number at from 30,000 to 40,000. Thousands of destitute refugees from the scenes of the fighting are pouring into Saloniki.

The Greeks have made wholesale charges against the Bulgarians of burning and pillaging all the villages they abandon and of committing murder, mutilations and other horrors. More than 4,000 refugees are concentrated at Negrita and adjacent villages.

Servian Campaign Hopeless.

VIENNA, July 7.—Private reports from Belgrade indicate that even Servian official quarters are beginning to fear that the campaign against the Bulgarians is almost hopeless. For Bulgaria the attitude of Roumania constitutes the greatest menace. The Roumanian army has been provisionally mobilized, but the Government makes the future attitude dependent upon the course of the negotiations with Bulgaria.

It is hoped that Bulgarian statesmen will perceive the necessity of coming to a speedy and amicable settlement with their neighbor, whose friendship at the present moment is of such vital necessity to Bulgaria.

The Servian loss of the Timok division, in addition to the breaking up of the Drina division, is regarded in well-informed circles in Vienna as presaging a speedy conclusion of the war.

Turkish Army Excited.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 7.—A semi-official statement declares that the Government desires to maintain neutrality. It adds significantly that the conflict between the Balkan allies has aroused excitement in the Turkish army "which it will be difficult for the Government to check if Turkey does not obtain just and equitable recognition of her rights."

The opinion is general in influential Turkish quarters that Turkey should take prompt advantage of the present splendid opportunity to recover some of her lost territory.

Surrender Is Confirmed.

LONDON, July 7.—The Bulgarian legation received last night official confirmation of the surrender of the Servian Timok division, numbering 4,000. Six machine guns, 27 quick-firers and a complete commissariat train also were captured.

Two Servian regiments which crossed the frontier into Bulgaria, according to further advices, have been driven back to the north of Egri Palannka.

Greek Minister Leaves Sofia.

SOFIA, July 7.—The Greek Minister withdrew from here Friday after placing the Greek interests in the hands of the French legation.

King Constantine Inspires Troops.

SALONIKA, July 7.—King Constantine has sent the following message to all divisions: "To my valiant army, which has shown such heroism during the recent battles, crushing the enemy wherever it has met him, I express my admiration and pride at being at its head."

Powers Will Not Intervene.

BERLIN, July 7.—The official Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung's account of the recent conference at Kiel between the German and Italian statesmen emphasizes the perfect harmony displayed on all points. It concludes: "All the great powers agree in principle that there shall be no interference with the former Balkan allies. Europe's problem is to localize hostilities."

Camper Shot Marauder.

BROCKVILLE, July 7.—Reports reached town yesterday of a shooting affray at a summer camp near Westport. The story goes that an occupant of a tent awoke to find a man in the act of stealing and that he forthwith drew his revolver and shot the intruder through the arm.

It is not known whether action has been taken by the authorities in the matter.

Hog Cholera at Cobalt.

COBALT, July 7.—A serious outbreak of hog cholera which occurred early in the week on a farm at Mud Lake, reached a climax Friday, when 60 pigs were destroyed by order of the health authorities, in order to check the spread of the disease.

TOO MUCH RAIN FEARED

Saskatchewan Has a Splendid Crop if Moisture is Not Excessive

REGINA, Sask., July 7.—A splendid crop outlook in this particular district is in immediate danger of being seriously marred by a superabundance of rain. The heavy lands of the Regina district and in fact the land extending as far east as Indian Head, west to Moose Jaw and south to Weyburn, have now received enough moisture to warrant a successful crop in all kinds of grain. Friday the rain was falling in torrents, and people were shaking their heads and saying "We are getting too much."

During the past fortnight rain has fallen almost every day. Reports from the more northerly and westerly parts of the province and from the south, however, show a very satisfactory condition.

The Saskatchewan Co-operative Elevator Co., which receives every day weather bulletins from its one hundred and sixty agents scattered throughout the province, say that generally and practically, with the exception of the heavy black lands of this district, crop conditions were never better than at present. This opinion is corroborated by the very large staff of Government correspondents who are now filling fortnightly reports with the Provincial Department of Agriculture to be published early next week.

SCHOOL CHILDREN ARE FRIGHTENED BY "GHOST"

Lid is Removed From Stove and Boy Held Fast to the Wall.

UXBRIDGE, July 7.—Disturbances which seem to be the result of operations by some ventriloquist and sleight-of-hand artist have disturbed the residents of school section 13, Uxbridge Township, during the past few weeks. Ghostly appearances and voices have been manifest in and around the school house, and some of the children have been so badly frightened that they refused to go to school. Since the vacation set in nothing abnormal has taken place, a circumstance which seems to remove the case from the sphere of the supernatural.

The first agitation took place on May 17, when during school session the lid of the stove suddenly flew across the room and clanked on the floor under the children's feet. Another time the "spirit" is said to have held a boy fast to the wall so that it took two of his companions to release him. The side combs were removed from a little girl's coiffure.

The ghost is not silent, and it speaks the language of the country. It has said frequently that it intends to visit other localities, which prophecy is heard gladly by the residents thereabouts. An unfortunate feature of the situation, from a scientific viewpoint, is that the ghost will not perform when persons competent to judge of its nature take the seven-mile trip from the town of Uxbridge to investigate.

HOUSE TO PROBE.

Another Lobby Investigation By U. S Lower House Likely.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The House wrestled several hours on Saturday with a proposal for a lobby investigation on its own account, and finally deferred a vote until Wednesday. Although debate had been limited to one hour, it raged throughout the entire sitting, and ignoring warnings of Republican Leader Mann to "get down to business," the House was forced to adjourn on lack of a quorum. Apparently sentiment was almost unanimous for an investigation.

Before the House adjourned, all amendments accepted had been to broaden the scope. The House investigation will be distinct from that of the Senate.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH IS TOTALLY DESTROYED

Heroic Priest Rushes into Burning Building and Saved the Host Sunday Fire in Hamilton Also Causes Heavy Loss.

HAMILTON, July 7.—Fire broke out in the Terminal freight sheds, at Main and Catherine streets, at 5.45 Sunday morning, and at eight o'clock the building was almost completely demolished. Not in many years, has so fierce a fire raged in Hamilton. The loss is estimated at $75,000.

The fire was first discovered by the watchman, who immediately turned in the alarm, but, although the reels were on the scene about two minutes later, the building became a solid mass of flames, that belched forth large black clouds of smoke, laden with fire, that floated across the sky and momentarily threatened several other buildings in the vicinity. Just previous to the arrival of the fire reels, a rather serious explosion took place, when the gasoline tank was blown through the roof of the building, and in an immense cloud of smoke soared over the Temple Theatre, one piece of tank falling about 150 yards east of the building on Main street, while another piece was found on Emerald street south about six blocks away. This was followed in quick succession by several minor explosions, which caused the fire to spread to all parts of the building. In less than three minutes, so intense was the heat, that a person could not approach within a block of the fire. The firemen, however, with their rubber out-fits, soon had water from eight lines of hose playing on the burning sheds, and after a half hour's fighting in the blistering heat, the firemen had it practically under control, but not until the building had been completely gutted.

As the wind was blowing from the west, only a few minutes had elapsed before the doors and windows of the Temple Theatre began to burn. A line of hose trained on this building soon had it out of danger

St. Charles Church Gone.

MONTREAL.—July 7.—A disastrous outbreak of fire, which occurred here Saturday afternoon, completely destroyed the magnificent parish Church of St. Charles, situated on Centre street, Point St. Charles, and wrecked the roof of the St. Gabriele Presbytery, and St. Charles' Presbytery.

Three firemen were injured in fighting the roaring flames, one of them, Eli Albert, falling 60 feet from the roof of the Christian Brothers' School will run over $200,000.

The flames are still roaring away, destroying the big church thoroughly.

For the second time in two weeks, a general fire alarm called every piece of fire-fighting apparatus in the city to the scene of the blaze. Flames were already leaping through the towering roof of the big church. Its great belfry, with its $15,000 set of bells, was wrapped in lurid flames. The main tower crashed through the roof of the presbytery, setting it on fire.

Father Plante was the hero of the blaze. Rushing into the burning structure, he seized the host and bore it to safety. Then he made a second trip to the place and saved the image of the Virgin Mary.

The church was a magnificent stone structure, one of the finest in the city. This is the worst fire Montreal has had, as far as financial loss is concerned, in the terrible baptism of fire it has received within the last month.

Fire Fiend In St. John.

ST. JOHN, N.B., July 7.—Fire after fire, evidently incendiary, has been worrying the police and fire departments, and Friday night one of the worst outbreaks occurred, causing some $25,000 loss to J. Harvey Brown's cornmeal mill in City road.

A woman living nearby saw a man with an electric flashlight breaking into the place. She sent for the police, but before they arrived the fire had broken out. Two arrests have been made during the firebug reign. One was sent to the asylum for the insane and the other is held on remand, but the work with the torch goes on.

Mill Partly Burned.

CHATHAM, July 7.—The plant of the Hawken Milling Co. of Wallaceburg was partly destroyed by fire of unknown origin about ten o'clock on Saturday morning. The place is just outside the town limits and the hose would not reach it, so the bucket brigade fought the flames.

WAS CARRIED OUT TO SEA

Young Aeronaut Has Harrowing Trip in Crippled Dirigible

NEW YORK, July 7.—A dirigible balloon, carrying George M. Gay, a youthful Norwalk, Ohio, aeronaut, that was swept away from the New Jersey shore of the Hudson early on Saturday night, and was for six hours unheard of from here, fell on the waters of Long Island Sound at 7.30 o'clock Saturday night, according to definite word received yesterday.

Gay was saved by the crew of the steamer Sagamore, which, passing Sands Point, on the north shore of Long Island, sighted the balloon before it reached the water's surface, a mile and a half off shore. The dirigible sank, and Gay was picked up after swimming about for five minutes.

The balloon covered a distance of about 25 miles in the uncontrolled flight from the Hudson river. It was without motor or rudder, and Gay, a novice, was unable to release the gas.

Man Drowned at Kingston.

KINGSTON, July 7.—The coroner's jury at the inquest into the drowning of Thomas Brown of Toronto, night watchman on the steamer Kingston, at this port, on Saturday morning, decided it was accidental, but made a recommendation that the council pass a bylaw requiring life-saving apparatus to be kept on all public wharves. Brown was an Englishman.

DREW COLOR LINE IN JAIL

MONTREAL, July 7.—"Tom" Martin, who claims the honor of having been in jail more times than any other man of his age in Canada, refused on Saturday to be chained to a negro, and asked the guard if he could not wait for a second load of prisoners going to the jail. In spite of the fact, he declared that he had been convicted many times himself, he drew the color line, and would never, under any circumstances, consent to be chained to a "black" man.

ONE HUNDRED DEAD FROM JOHANNESBURG RIOTS

Hurried Negotiations Result in Pacification of Striking South African Gold Miners But Not Until After Sanguinary Fights in the City Streets—Troops Rake Streets With Volleys From Rifles.

JOHANNESBURG, July 7.—The strike which involved practically all the gold mines on the Rand ended Saturday night. During its brief existence anarchy reigned in the city; there was much bloodshed and the casualties are estimated at more than one hundred. The authorities were finally compelled to declare martial law, and during several hours Saturday the troops raked the streets with rifle fire.

The negotiations which brought about a settlement of one of the most serious situations that the mining district has ever encountered, were opened Saturday afternoon and brought to a successful conclusion after several hours discussion, the strike leaders agreeing to the terms proposed. Gen. Louis Botha, Premier of the Union of South Africa, Sir George A. Farrar, chairman of the East Rand Proprietory Mines, and Gen. Smith, took part in the negotiations.

Before a settlement was reached there occurred the fiercest and most sanguinary conflicts between the police and the troops and the mobs that had yet taken place. Early in the afternoon crowds gathered in front of the Rand Club and began to stone it. They disregarded orders to disperse, and the troops fired with deadly effect. Near the Union Club another mob was scattered by the dragoons, who charged fiercely.

Some of the principal streets were the scene of sharp engagements. Ambulances were kept busy, for the soldiers aimed to kill. Within a comparatively small area about sixty rioters were killed on wounded. The fighting in other quarters swelled the casualty list, it is believed, to considerably over a hundred.

The terms of the settlement failed to stipulate when the men should go to work, thus leaving matters in a chaotic condition.

The strike leaders were apparently trying last night to get the men to accept the terms, but on all sides dissatisfaction is expressed. A spirit of anarchy has been roused which it is difficult to control.

Except at the time of the Jameson Raid in 1895, and the outbreak of the war in 1899, this city has not experienced such a day of terrorism as Saturday. The chief difference was that the public displayed a greater degree of bitterness. The mobs in the business section of the town caused less fear than the desperadoes who were threatening to dynamite the homes of the wealthy on the outskirts. All places of business were closed and the troops are expected to protect them. Every male resident capable of bearing arms was on duty.

The rioting began when a body of strikers forced their way into the Rand Club, which particularly excited their enmity because its members are the mine owners. They completely demolished every thing on the ground floor. Three times a detachment of dragoons rode through the mob to the accompaniment of jeers, broken bricks and stones. Three times the mob was scattered, but it quickly reformed. The troops fired a volley over the heads of the rioters, and then two volleys directly into their ranks. The rioters fled to the side streets yelling derisively, but leaving behind a large number of killed and wounded.

The dragoons at length withdrew, and local troops took command of four principal streets, which they swept with their rifles.

MANY STRIKERS ARE STILL OUT

Canadian Press Despatch.

JOHANNESBURG, July 7.—The largest number of the striking gold miners have returned to work, but many still remain out, dissatisfied with the terms, and demanding that the government should provide for those dependent on the killed and wounded men.

WOMAN IS WOUNDED

TORONTO, July 7.—Stopped in the middle of the sidewalk while she was walking along Beaver avenue with her baby in her arms, Maria Ceccacci, an Italian woman who lives at 4 Beaver avenue had to defend herself against two Italian ruffians, one of whom was armed with a knife. Shielding her baby with one arm the little woman defended herself with the other for some time, but her assailant's attacks at last became so furious that she was compelled to turn and flee. Just as she was about to turn the man made another lunge at her and drew his knife across her forehead. The names of the Italians are Giovenni Roberto and Rincenjo Di Tomaso. They were captured later by mounted police after a hard chase.

Mrs. Ceccacci, was taken to the Western Hospital in the police ambulance. Sixteen stitches were put in her head; she will recover.

Roberto, her assailant, alleges that last week her children stole some things from his home. A quarrel was the result at that time, but the curtain was not dropped until yesterday.

HE RACED WITH DEATH

Ottawa Father on His Way Home to Boy's Bedside

TORONTO, July 7.—Flying from here Sunday afternoon, in a 300-mile race in a motor to Ottawa, A. G. Marshall, a contractor, hoped to reach the side of his dying son, before death called. The frantic father, impatient for a moment's delay, would not wait for the 11 p.m. night-express of the C.P.R., but chose to risk rough roads and darkness, in the hope that he'd reach home a few minutes ahead of the train. With loss in time, he might also lose his only chance of gazing upon his boy while yet alive. Nothing has yet arrived regarding the success of Mr. Marshall's trip.

While it was pointed out to him that the most he could expect would be to arrive at Ottawa two or three hours ahead of the train, Mr. Marshall was willing to face the dangers to be met with in a racing automobile rushing over pitch black roads rather than arrive too late to see his son alive.

BIG ELEVATOR IS DESTROYED

Canadian Press Despatch.

SARNIA, July 7.—Fire from an unknown cause destroyed the big elevator at Point Edward this morning, starting at five o'clock. Long before noon not even the walls were standing. The loss on building and grain contents is estimated at four hundred thousand dollars, and is partly covered by insurance.

BOY LIVED ON BERRIES

Gravenhurst Lad Wandered in Wilds for Four Days

GRAVENHURST, July 7.—A most remarkable incident has occurred in the vicinity of Gravenhurst. On Monday morning, June 30, a little lad, scarcely four years old, wandered into the woods and had been wandering about for four days and four nights.

Search parties were organized and the neighborhood thoroughly inspected. For the last two days it was expected that he had perished in the swamps or drowned in the lakes, and that probably even his body would never be recovered.

Friday morning a large party was organized and search was made in the vicinity of Leg Lake.

The boy, Meyers by name, was found along the shore of the lake, his clothing off and carried on a stick. He was wandering about quite unconcerned, and stated upon inquiry that he had berries to eat.

The town is quite joyous over his recovery, none the worse for his experience—four fall days and nights in the wilderness with most intense heat in the daytime and a couple of rain storms.

His body was scratched quite badly by the briers and other undergrowth.

GYPSIES ARE IN TROUBLE

Brazilian Band Come on Evil Days at Quebec

QUEBEC, July 7.—A band of Brazilian gypsies, who made their way from Calgary, where they say they went twenty years ago, arrived in Quebec a week ago and encamped on Levis Heights.

Three of the women were arrested Friday for telling fortunes and sent to jail under the vagrant act in default of paying a fine of $20 each. They not only paid the fine in the jail but deposited an extra $100 as bail to appear again in police court Saturday morning. Later two of the women were arrested for theft.

Saturday morning a dozen citizens appeared in the police court and declared they had been robbed by the first three arrested. The police will now round up the whole gang.

Prince Takehito Ill.

TOKIO, July 7.—Prince Takehito of the house of Arisugaga-no-Miya, who is afflicted with tuberculosis, is critically ill. He is head of a collateral branch of the Imperial family.

Prince Takehito was born in 1862 and served with distinction in the Japo-China war.

[illegible] Youth Drowned.

CHATHAM, July 7.—While bathing in Lake Erie at Erieau Saturday, Maxwell Chartiers, eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Chartiers of this city, was seized with a cramp and sank before his young companions could go to his assistance. His body was recovered ten minutes afterwards, and his companions worked over him for two hours in an attempt to resuscitate him.

A REDOUTABLE CHANCELLOR

Mr Lloyd-George is evidently not going to take his recent Marconi licking lying down. Like the proverbial worm he has turned upon the traders. It would seem that his friends begged him not to hit back, but at a luncheon the other day he slashed right and left at his traducers in magnificent style.

Mr Lloyd-George is a past master of political invective, in this he follows in the direct line of Joseph Chamberlain who could wither up an opponent, not only with his monacle, but with fierce, epigramatic sarcasm.

All this pother over Marconi shares is after all a petty business, and reflects credit upon neither political parties in Great Britain.

It is to be feared that were the heads of either parties exposed to a public inquisition as to their private business transactions, none of them would come out of the ordeal unscathed.

No nation has been absolutely free from "graft." But England has ever been jealous of the integrity of her statesmen, and always liked to feel that her ministers were above reproach in these things. But we learn from this enquiry that even these are human and do err now and then.

But "open confession is good for the soul," and the frank admission of Rufus Isaacs and Lloyd-George of, at least "indiscretion," will go far to redeem their characters in the eyes of the people of England.

If the object of this inquiry was to silence the redoubtable Welshman it has signally failed, and indeed looks like rousing the lion to fiercer fury.

THE RETURN OF THE DUKE

Every loyal Canadian will be gratified to learn that His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught has been asked, and has consented, to extend his term of office as Governor-General for another year.

The unfortunate circumstance which made it necessary for him to return to England early in the year, seemed for a while to point to the impossibility of his finishing his original term; but with the recovery of the Duchess he now intends sailing for the Dominion in the Fall.

At a Dominion Day dinner held in London, attended by five hundred Canadians, His Royal Highness said: "I feel most flattered at having been asked to accept the extension of my term for another year. I have now had the honor of being Governor-General for two years. During that time I have learned more and more to take the deepest interest in everything regarding Canada. No one rejoices more than I do at what we have listened to regarding Canada's prosperity. Canada has no wish or intention of breaking away from the grand flag floating over us. I am sure she will always prove true to the great position she holds in the British Empire."

There is a ring of sincere enthusiasm about this speech, and Canada ought to be proud to have won the heart of this distinguished son of the "Great White Queen."

It is a common experience among emigrants who go back to England home-sick, that they are completely cured after a few months' stay in the Old Country, they are eager to return to the land of clear skies, smiling fields and pleasant lakes.

The return of the Duke and Duchess will cheer those home-sick ones who naturally have a sense of exile among strange people. It will bring them nearer to the home-land and make them feel that if Canada can tempt a Duke back again it is good enough for me.

SAVE THE BOYS

Every summer claims a heavy death toll in cases of drowning throughout Ontario's lakes and rivers. The chief victims seem to be boys who venture beyond their depth whilst bathing.

Boys will be boys, and we men sometimes feel, during this hot weather, like taking a header into every pool we come across. But it behoves all parents to be more strict with their boys in this matter. They ought not to be allowed to bathe in any place where they are likely to get beyond their depth without being accompanied by parents, or someone old and able enough to look after them and help them in case of difficulties.

It is nothing short of criminal for parents to be neglectful or careless in this way. Many a bright and precious life might have been saved to our homes and to our land if parents fathers in particular, had done their duty to their boys and entered more into this pleasure with them.

The two Toronto boys who paid the penalty of parental indifferance the other day were aged eleven and fifteen years respectively. In both cases the boys were unaccompanied by responsible persons. Had there been someone with them to help or to check them from venturing too far, those boys might have been living to-day, and two homes might have been saved the sorrow of the sudden loss of two promising sons.

The bathing season is only just begun, and it is sad to contemplate that many of our boys may find a watery grave ere this summer is over. It is for parents and guardians to reduce these fatalities to a minimum by firmly impressing upon the boys the danger of going beyond their depth; or, better still, not to allow them to bathe in deep water without being accompanied by able and responsible persons.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The "Globe" in an editorial practically incites Great Britain, Germany and the United States to intervene in the Mexican Revolution. What! use those awful battle-ships? Would it not be better for the editor to go down and make a speech on Universal Brotherhood?

All honor to the memory of Rev. W. A. McKune, of Utica, N.Y., who sacrificed his life in an attempt to save a drowning child while on a visit to Lodi, Cal. "Inasmuch as ye did it to the least of these—" could any man die nobler?

No one doubts the capacity of Miss Bebb, who recently fought for the right to become a lawyer. One only need quote the testimony of "Father William" on this point:

"In my youth," said his father,
"I took to the law,
And argued each case with my wife,
And the muscular strength that it gave to my jaw
Has lasted the rest of my life."

Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, caused the authorities of Montreal some anxiety by his prolonged stay in that city. But it appears he produced a through ticket to Havre, purchased in Chicago, and so they had to endure the company of the dusky champion till his ship came in.

Dr. Friedman is making a terrible secret of his precious vaccine. Surely if he has a sovereign remedy for consumption he ought not to be afraid of putting it to every possible test. No one wants to steal it from him, and the sooner his discovery is proven to be all that he claims for it, the sooner he will go up in the estimation of the world.

SIGHING AND SINGING.

Little by little the time goes by,
Short if you sing, long if you sigh.

There's many a trouble
Would break like a bubble,
And into the water of Lethe depart;
Did we not rehearse it,
And tenderly nurse it,
And give it a permanent place
In the heart.

There's many a sorrow
Would vanish to-morrow,
Were we but willing to furnish the wings.
So sadly intruding,
And quietly brooding,
It hatches all sorts of things.

When you feel like sighing, sing.

MONTREAL MARKET.

MONTREAL, July 5.—There was some demand from European sources for Manitoba oats and barley and a few loads of the latter were worked, but as the prices bid for the former showed no advance, being still flat on the market, no sales were made. The local trade in oats is fair, but the demand for other lines of coarse grains is limited. Flour and millfeed fairly active at firm prices. The undertone to the market for baled hay is strong and prices have an upward tendency on account of the poor prospects for the growing crop. An easier feeling prevails in the market for butter and prices in the country have declined ⅛c per lb. Receipts for the week were 21,850 packages, against 24,265 a year ago. The tone of the cheese market is strong and much higher prices will have to be realized on spot next week in order that exporters may make any money. Dewey's view of the little craft was blocked until he came upon it too late to stop. The women and children were thrown into the water, but were quickly rescued by persons standing on the dock. All escaped injury.

Splendid Prize List for Ottawa's 1913 Fair

The prize list for the Central Canada Exhibition of 1913, which is now being distributed, is an attractive and interesting booket. The Ottawa Fair dates are from September 5th to 13th, affording six full days and six full nights of complete program. Exhibitors are advised that entries close August 29th. A new and special entry form for live stock, calling for various details of information, is sent out in order to expedite the compiling of the catalogue of exhibits before the Fair opens.

The big feature of the 1913 Fair, in Ottawa, so far as farmers are concerned, is the Free Freight proposition. The exact conditions are set out thus "Freight charges (not express) on exhibits of live stock, from points in Ontario and Quebec, will be refunded to the exhibitor by the Exhibition Association. This arrangement covers charges from last shipping point to Ottawa. The regular one-way rate must be prepaid by the exhibitor and refund will be made by the Secretary upon production of the original bill of lading. Exhibits remaining intact will be returned free to original shipping point."

Upwards of $20,000 in prize money is provided for. The classification has been carefully revised with changes made to meet the wishes of exhibitors. A class of aged Percherons was added in the horse department with $105 prizes. The sum of $100 was transferred to the Agricultural class of horses. Three new prizes were established for grade dairy cattle. An addition of $250 appears in the poultry premiums, all the 2nd prizes being raised from $1 to $1.50 and third, from 50 to 75 cents. There are several other changes.

Persons interested may obtain copies of the prize list by writing E. McMahon, Manager, 26 Sparks street Ottawa. 3d

CONCEITED MURDERERS.

Vanity on the Scaffold Notorious Among Criminals.

It was reported that Callemin, the motor bandit, who was executed in Paris recently, raised objection to being denuded of his locks by a barber, as is customary with criminals before they are brought to the guillotine. This grotesque desire to appear neat and smart on the scaffold is a common trait amongst notorious criminals

On the morning of his execution Wainwright, who murdered his unfortunate dupe, Harriet Lane, refused to dress because his clean linen had not arrived. His obstinacy was increased by the fact that he was not allowed to walk to the scaffold in a new silk hat that had been given to him during his trial.

Lefroy, who murdered Mr. Gold in a railway carriage, displayed similar sentiments on his way to the gallows. Throughout his imprisonment he had insisted on dressing in evening clothes, and his last night on earth he spent smoking cigars. Despite his wishes, however, he was not allowed to walk to the scaffold in evening dress.

The murderer of Miss Gilchrist, the Glasgow lady, Oscar Slater by name, insisted on the warders calling him Mr. Slater during his sojourn in the condemned cell. He remonstrated with the chaplain for dropping this prefix to his name when addressing him.

Eliza Fenning, the prisoner, insisted on walking to the scaffold in a magnificent white bridal dress of satin and lace.

By a tragic coincidence she was hanged on the day on which she would have been married had not the arm of the law intervened.

When on the scaffold, Robert Bamford, who was hanged at Nottingham some years back, politely asked the hangman if he could have more rope. On his request being granted, he endeavored to shake hands with the hangman, but being unable to do so with his pinioned arms he gave him a courtly bow and smile of thanks.

But one of the most extraordinary cases of sang froid on the scaffold occurred some time back when Macdonald, who murdered a Miss Holt, paid the penalty of his crime. The hangman had forgotten the white cap to place over the prisoner's eyes, and Macdonald, noticing what had happened, remarked to his executioner, "Put your hand in my breast pocket and you will find a silk handkerchief. That will do to bind my eyes, won't it?" Berry, who was the executioner at the time, did not remove the immaculate handkerchief from the prisoner's pocket, however, but utilised his own for the purpose of binding the eyes of the doomed man.

Australia Is Good To Aged.

As an inducement to possible emigrants, Australia might with some justice be advertised as a health resort. The death rate througout the continent only averages about ten per thousand. The number of deaths last year, for instance, was 47,869, against 122,193 births.

The Government of the Commonwealth offers various inducements favorable to longevity. Old-age pensions of ten shillings a week are paid to every persons over sixty-five who has resided there for twenty years In addition to this, there are invalid pensions, payable to anyone incapacitated who has resided there for at least five years.

Lately, however, the young men of Australia are being asked to make some sacrifices for their country, which may go somewhat as a set off against these benefits. A system of compulsory training has been set in vogue.

RENTING ROOMS
The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

ar you but I'm afraid it ain't true. You say I amount to somethin'. Well, what? I come back home here with some money in my pocket, thinkin' that was all that was necessary to make me a good deal of a feller. The old Cy Whittaker place, I said to myself, was goin' to be a real Cy Whittaker place again. And I'd be a real Whittaker, a man who should stand for somethin', as my dad and granddad did afore me. The town should respect me, and I'd do things to help it along. And what's it all come to? Why, every young one on the street is told to be good for fear he'll grow up like me. Ain't that so? Course it's so! I'm"—

"You shall not speak so! Do you imagine that you're not respected by every one whose respect counts for anything? Yes, and by others too. Don't you suppose Mr. Atkins respects you down in his heart—if he has one? Doesn't your housekeeper, who sees you every day, respect and like you? And little Emily—doesn't she love you more than she does all the rest of us together?"

"Well, I guess Bos'n does care for the old man some, that's a fact. She says she likes you next best, though. Did you know that?"

But Miss Dawes was indignant.

"Captain Whittaker," she declared, "one would think you were a hundred years old to hear you. You are always calling yourself an old man. Does Mr. Atkins call himself old? And he is older than you."

"Well, I'm over fifty, Phoebe." In spite of the habit for which he had just been reproached, the captain found this a difficult statement to make.

"I know. But you're younger than most of us at thirty-five. You see, I'm confessing, too," she added, with a laugh and a little blush.

Captain Cy made a mental calculation.

"Twenty years," he said musingly. "Twenty years is a long time. No; I'm old. And, worse than that, I'm an old fool, I guess. If I hadn't been I'd have stayed in South America instead of comin' here to be hooted out of the town I was born in."

The teacher stamped her foot.

"Oh, what shall I do with you!" she exclaimed. "It is wicked for you to say such things. Do you suppose that Mr. Atkins would find it necessary to work as he is doing to beat a fool? And, besides, you're not complimentary to me. Should I, do you think, take such an interest in one who was an imbecile?"

"Well, 'tis mighty good of you. Your comin' here so to help Bos'n's fight along is"—

"How do you know it is Bos'n altogether? I"— She stopped suddenly, and the color rushed to her face. She rose from the rocker. "I—really I don't see how we came to be discussing such nonsense," she said—"our ages and that sort of thing! Captain Cyrus, I wish you would go to Washington. I think you ought to go."

But the captain's thoughts were far from Washington at that moment. His own face was alight, and his eyes shone.

"Phoebe," he faltered unbelievingly, "what was you goin' to say? Do you mean that—that"—

The side door of the house opened. The next instant Mr. Tiddit, a dripping umbrella in his hand, entered the sitting room.

"Hello, Whit!" he hailed. "Just run in for a minute to say howdy." Then he noticed the schoolmistress, and his expression changed. "Oh! How be you, Miss Dawes?" he said. "I didn't see you fust off. Don't run away on my account."

"I was just going," said Phoebe, buttoning her jacket. Captain Cy accompanied her to the door.

"Goodby," she said. "There was something else I meant to say, but I think it is best to wait. I hope to have some good news for you soon, something that will send you to Washington with a light heart. Perhaps I shall hear tomorrow. If so I will call after school and tell you."

"Yes, do," urged the captain eagerly. "You'll find me here waitin'. Good news or not, do come. I—I ain't said all I wanted to myself."

He returned to the sitting room. The town clerk was standing by the stove. He looked troubled.

"What's the row, Ase?" asked Cy cheerily. He was overflowing with good nature.

"Oh, nothin' special," replied Mr. Tiddit. "You look joyful enough for two of us. Had good company, ain't you?"

"Why, yes; 'bout as good as there is. What makes you look so glum?"

Asaph hesitated.

"Phoebe was here yesterday, too, wan't she?" he asked.

"Yup. What of it?"

"And the day afore that?"

"No, not for three days afore that. But what of it, I ask you?"

"Well, now, Cy, you mustn't get mad. I'm a friend of yours, and friends ought to be able to say most anything to each other. If—if I was you I wouldn't let Phoebe come so often—not here, you know, at your house. Course I know she comes with Bos'n and all, but"—

"Out with it!" The captain's tone was ominous. "What are you drivin' at?"

The caller fidgeted.

"Well, Whit," he stammered, "there's consider'ble talkin' goin' on, that's all."

"Talkin'? What kind of talkin'?"

"Well, you know the kind. This town does a good deal of it, specially after church and prayer meetin'. Seem's if they thought 'twas a sort of proper place. I don't myself. I kind of like to keep my charity and brotherly love spread out through the week, but"—

"Ase, are the folks in this town sayin' a word against Phoebe Dawes because she comes here to see—Bos'n?"

"Don't—don't get mad, Whit. Don't look at me like that. I ain't said nothin'. Why, a spell ago at the boardin' house I"—

He told of the meal at the perfect boarding house, where Miss Dawes championed his friend's cause; also of the conversation which followed and his own part in it. Captain Cy paced the floor.

"I wouldn't have her come so often, Cy," pleaded Asaph, "honest I wouldn't. Course you and me know they're mean, miser'ble liars, but it's her I'm thinkin' of. She's a young woman and single, and you're a good many years older'n she is. And so, of course, you and she ain't ever goin' to get married. And have you thought what effect it might have on her keepin' her teacher's place? The committee's a majority against her as 'tis. And—you know I don't think so, but a good many folks do—you ain't got the best name just now. Darn it all, I ain't puttin' this the way I'd ought to, but you know what I mean, don't you, Cy?"

Captain Cy was leaning against the window frame, his head upon his arm. He was not looking out, because the shade was drawn. Tidditt waited anxiously for him to answer. At last he turned.

"Ase," he said, "I'm much obliged to you. You've pounded it in pretty hard, but I cal'late I'd ought to have had it done to me. I'm a fool—an old fool, just as I said awhile back—and nothin' nor nobody ought to have made me forget it. For a minute or so I— But there; don't you fret. That young woman shan't risk her job nor her reputation on account of me—nor of Bos'n, either. I'll see to that. And, see here," he added fiercely, "I can't stop women's tongues, even when they're as bad as some of the tongues in this town, but if you hear a man say one word against Phoebe Dawes, only one word, you tell me his name. You hear, Ase? You tell me his name. Now run along, will you? I ain't safe company just now."

Asaph, frightened at the effect of his words, hurriedly departed. Captain Cy paced the room for the next fifteen minutes; then he opened the kitchen door.

"Bos'n," he called, "come in and set in my lap awhile. Don't you want to? I'm—I'm sort of lonesome, little girl."

The next afternoon, when the schoolmistress, who had been delayed by the inevitable examination papers, stopped at the Cy Whittaker place she was met by Georgianna. Emily, who stood behind the housekeeper in the doorway, was crying.

"Cap'n Cy has gone away, to Washin'ton," declared Georgianna, "though what he's gone there for's more'n I know. He said he'd send his hotel address soon's he got there. He went on the 3 o'clock train."

Phoebe was astonished.

"Gone?" she repeated. "So soon! Why, he told me he should certainly be here to hear some news I expected today. Didn't he leave any message for me?"

The housekeeper turned red.

"Miss Phoebe," she said, "he told me to tell you somethin', and it's so dreadful I don't hardly dast to say it. I think his troubles have driven him crazy. He said to tell you that you'd better not come to this house any more."

CHAPTER XVIII.

IN the old days, the great days of sailing ships and merchant fleets, Bayport was a community of travelers. Every ambitious man went to sea and eventually, if he lived, became a captain. Then he took his wife and, in most cases, his children with him on long voyages. To the stay at homes came letters with odd foreign stamps and postmarks. Our whatnots and parlor mantels were filled with carved bits of ivory, gorgeous shells, alabaster candlesticks and plaster miniatures of the leaning tower at Pisa or the Coliseum at Rome. We usually began a conversation with, "When my husband and I were at Hongkong the last time"—or, "I remember at Mauritius they always"— New Orleans and Frisco were the nearest domestic ports the mention of which was considered worth while.

But this is so no longer. A trip to Boston is, of course, no novelty to the most of us, but when we visit New York we take care to advertise it beforehand. And the few who avail themselves of the spring "cut rates" and go on excursions to Washington plan definite programmes for each day at the capital and discuss them with envious friends for weeks in advance. And if the prearranged program is not scrupulously carried out we feel that we have been defrauded. It was the regret of Aunt Sophronia Hallett's life that on her Washington excursion she had not seen the "diplomatic corpse." She saw the president and the monument and congress and "the relics in the Smithsonian institution," but the "corpse" was not on view. Aunt Sophronia never quite got over the disappointment.

Probably no other Bayporter in recent years has started for Washington on such short notice or with so ill defined a program as Captain Cy. He went because he felt that he must go somewhere. After the conversation with Asaph he simply could not remain at home. If Phoebe Dawes called he knew that he must see her, and if he saw her what should he say to her? He could not tell her that she must not visit the Cy Whittaker place again. If he did she would insist upon the reason. If he told her of the "town talk" he felt sure, knowing her, that she would indignantly refuse to heed the malicious gossip. And he was firmly resolved not to permit her to compromise her life and her future by friendship with a social outcast like himself. As for anything deeper and more sacred than friendship, that was ridiculous. If for a moment a remark of hers had led him to dream of such a thing it was because he was, as he had so often declared, an "old fool."

So Captain Cy had resolved upon flight, and he fled to Washington because the business of the "committee of one" offered a legitimate excuse for going there. The blunt message he had intrusted to Georgianna would, he believed, arouse Phoebe's indignation. She would not call again. And when he returned to Bos'n it would be to take up the child's fight alone. If he lost that fight, or when he lost it, he would close the Cy Whittaker place and leave Bayport for good.

He had been in Washington once before, years ago, when he was first mate of a ship and had a few weeks' shore leave. Then he went there on a pleasure trip with some seagoing friends and had a jolly time. But there was precious little jollity in the present visit. He had never felt so thoroughly miserable. In order to forget he made up his mind to work his hardest to discover why the harbor appropriation was not to be given to Bayport.

The city had changed greatly. He would scarcely have known it. He went to the hotel where he had stayed before and found a big modern building in its place. The clerk was inclined to be rather curt and perfunctory at first, but when he learned that the captain was not anxious concerning the price of accommodations, but merely wanted a "comf'table berth somewheres on the saloon deck" and appeared to have plenty of money he grew polite. Captain Cy was shown to his room, where he left his valise. Then he went down to dinner.

After the meal was over he seated himself in one of the big leather chairs in the hotel lobby, smoked and thought. In the summer, before Bos'n came and before her father had arisen to upset every calculation and wreck all his plans, the captain had given serious thought to what he should do if Congressman Atkins failed, as even then he seemed likely to do, in securing that appropriation. The obvious thing, of course, would have been to hunt up Mr. Atkins and question him. But this was altogether too obvious. In the first place the strained relations between them would make the interview uncomfortable, and in the second if there was anything underhand in Heman's backsliding on the appropriation Atkins was too wary a bird to be snared with questions.

TWO ARE DROWNED.

Six Lives Have Now Been Lost Near St. Catharines in a Week.

ST. CATHARINES, July 5.—Two drowning accidents occurred in the Twelve-Mile Creek yesterday afternoon, making four who have lost their lives in this immediate vicinity this week, and six who have been drowned within that time in the Welland Creek and adjoining streams.

Josaf Given, a Russian-Polish section hand of the G.T.R., working near the trestle across the creek, feeling the heat of the hottest day of the season, took a plunge after eating his lunch in the noon-hour, intending to resume work at one o'clock. He failed to reach the surface of the swift-moving water, the current from the Decew Falls power house being very strong at this point.

Searching parties are also looking for the body of the ten-year-old son of Joseph Herbert, who was drowned at 3.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, some little distance farther up the Twelve-Mile Creek. He was bathing with three little companions, who heard his distressing cry but were unable to assist him before he was whirled out of sight.

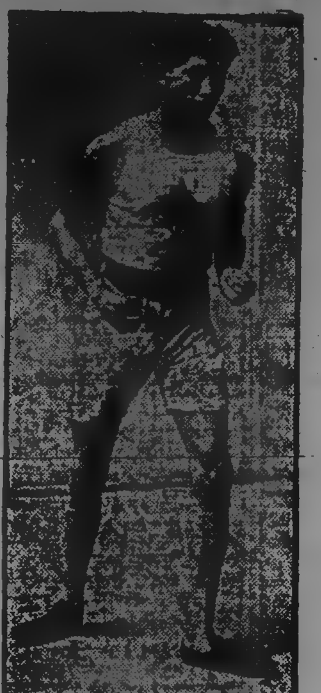
TED WOOD WON EASILY FROM LONGBOAT AND SHRUBB

Wood Shook Off the Indian on the Last Lap—Time Was 26.35



TOM LONGBOAT.

Ted Wood bested Tommy Longboat and Alf. Shrubb in the five mile race at Riverside Park, Saturday afternoon, his time being 26 minutes 35 secs., and he had no trouble in pulling away from the Indian when the time arrived for the final spurt.

Wood and Longboat went alone after the first two miles as the Britisher's legs gave him trouble. At the last lap Shrubb was a lap in the rear. On the last circuit Wood gradually broke away from Longboat and was in good shape at the finish, while the redskin was showing distress.

Shrubb was a big favorite with the crowd and was applauded time and again as he continued in the race, when it was plain to be seen that he was running on his nerve.

MACHINISTS TIED QUAKERS BANKERS WON FROM TYPOS

Drafting Room Defeated Brintons and Canoe Builders Lost to M.A.P.

The best games that have as yet been played in the Mercantile Baseball League were staged Saturday afternoon with the big race.

To the utmost surprise of the many fans present the Quakers had a little on the Machinists and only luck in its usual cruel and agitating form kept them from handing the C.G.E. representatives their first defeat of the season. The final score was a tie 5-5. The Quaker Oats men were strengthened and Kirk and Hagerman pitched magnificent ball. Wilson did the receiving. Mahaney started the twirling for the machine shop and pitched good ball, but errors coupled with a few scratch hits kept him in the hole. In the seventh innings, he was replaced by "Yebbie" Flaherty who was there in his old time form allowing no hits, signing no passes to first, and striking out all six men men in the eighth and ninth. O'Hern did the receiving and was a big asset to the Machinists.

One feature of the game was Breckenridge's home run in the sixth innings with none on. This is the second home run this season.

The teams: Machinists—O'Hern c, Kenneally ob, Breckenridge 1b, Callaghan 2b, Barrie ss., Dwyer rf, Heenan cf, Fishing lf, Mahaney p, Flaherty p.

Quakers—Hagerman ss and p, Butcher 2b, Wilson c, Morphet 1b, Finnen rf, Collins gt, Butcher 3b, Legrow cf, Kirk p and ss.

Umpire—Art Hall.

TYPOS BLEW AGAIN

After the big race the Typos and Bankers clashed in a very fast and exciting game. From the start the Bankers didn't have a look in and everything was Typos. In the sixth innings after holding the Bankers scoreless, Moore, the neat little pitcher of the Typos, was hurt at third base and as a result he could not continue pitching. The seventh passed without more than one run by the moneymen, but in the eighth the old balloon went up and a bunch of hits accompanied by a few errors enabled the Bankers to get nine runs making the score 10-7 in their favor. No at all discouraged the Typos came back with two in their half making it 10-9. Then umpire Hall acting on the free advice handed out by some of the Bankers called the game.

The game was fast up to the sixth and though Carson was hit freely his team played fairly good ball. Phelan, who tried to do most of the umpiring as well as catching, had an off day and several runs were the result of his errors. Minorgan at short had a good day and showed lots of speed. Swanson's base-throwing was again very prominent.

The teams:

Typos—Miler 1b, Fineen lf and c, Moore p and lf, Swanson c and p, Curtis 2b, Milloy cf, Maynard 3b, Cook ss, Manion rf.

Bankers—Minogan ss, Mulhern of, Bradshaw 1b, Bartlett lf, McRosti 3b, Neil 2b, Moran rf, Phelan c, Carson p.

Umpire—Art Hall.

DRAFTING ROOM WON.

In the first fixture at Brinton Park, the Drafting Room won another game at the expense of the Brintons, while in the second contest M.A.P. easily defeated the Canoe Builders.

Smith, a new face among the Draftsmen, pitched winning ball and allowed the Brintons only six runs. The score was 16-6.

Batteries:

Drafting room—Smith and Turner.
Brinton—Halyman and Taylor.

"TWO RUNS OFF" CLEMENTS

In the second game it was all M.A.P. and Clements had little trouble in holding the score to 15-2.

M.A.P.—Clements and Fitzgerald.
Canoe Builders—Ferguson and Andrews.

THREE GAMES THIS WEEK

Transfer of the St. Thomas Series Not Made

The Petes are home again to play a three game series with Brantford. The proposed arrangement for the transfer of the St. Thomas series to Peterborough was not made, and the Petes will spend the week-end in the railroad town.

A report in the Lindsay Warder says that Herb Worsmith, who is a second baseman, has been offered a tryout by the local club.

BASEBALL

Because the Bankers played Percy Neil on Saturday and he does not reside here, the Typos are going to protest the game on Saturday. Another cause of their protest is that the umpire called the game in the eighth innings. The protest will be decided on at the meeting of the league this week.

MAKING A CHAIN.

The Big Ones and the Heavy Cables Are of Wrought Iron.

SOFT STEEL FOR SMALL ONES.

The Larger Sizes Are All Hand Forged, and In This Work the Metal Must Be of Precisely the Right Heat and the Blows Quick and Sure.

The great bulk of chains, including all cable and mooring chains, are sold by the pound. The price ranges from 3½ to 12 cents a pound, according to the size, material and quality.

All cables and other very heavy chains are made of wrought iron, and there are made wrought iron chains of all sizes down to and including chains of material a quarter of an inch in diameter, but nowadays most of the chain used in comparatively smaller sizes is made of soft steel, such chain being made in sizes ranging by sixteenths from three-sixteenths of an inch to an inch and a quarter.

When the size of a chain is referred to by those familiar with chains, it always means not the link, but the material used in it. Thus a one inch chain would be made of one inch steel or iron. The completed link would be about five or six times as long and about three and a half times as wide across as the thickness of the material of which it was made.

In other days all chains was handmade, but the modern chain is of soft steel and machine made. There is taken a long bar of steel, which is bent cold around a mandril that is oval in shape. The bar is thus bent into what looks like a spiral spring with its coils not round, but oblong. This spiral is cut up cold in a cutting machine, which cuts it into as many parts as there are coils, each of these being the material for a link, and at the same time the machine spreads each of these sections apart a little at the opening and cuts on each of the two free ends a long scarf or bevel and bends the ends over within the opening.

This bent piece of steel is now in shape, roughly speaking, like a letter U with rather long arms and with its two ends bent over inward. It needs only to have those scarved ends welded together to make it a link of chain. The chainmaker sits at a foot operated power hammer, with a forge beside him, in which he heats the open links.

He takes from the fire a link suitably heated and hooks it into the chain as far as completed and then pinches the open ends of the new link together under the hammer, and with three or four quick blows he welds the link together. When he takes a hot link from the fire he puts a cold one in, and so he continues to work. It is altogether a quick and more economical process of manufacture than hand forging, but it has not yet been adapted to chains of the larger sizes.

There are wrought iron chains of some sizes that are machine made, but all wrought chains of material above an inch and a quarter in diameter are hand forged.

Of whatever size the hand chain is to be the workmen cut up the iron bars into straight lengths, each suitable to be made into a link. This length of iron is heated, one end at a time, and one after the other the ends are hammered down by hand on an anvil to shape the scarves or bevels. Then this straight piece of heavy wrought iron with scarved ends is swaged into link form, and if it is to be a stud or bar chain there is placed within the link before it is welded together the stud or bar. This is a stout little bar of cast iron, with its ends rounded in, concaved to fit the rounding surface of the link iron, the stud being placed across the link inside of it and midway of its length.

Once in place and the link pinched together on its ends the stud could not be got out except by breaking it out with a sledge. Its purpose is to prevent the links from drawing together at their sides and wedging under heavy strains. In a stud chain there is a stud in every link.

With this stud in place and the link bent to shape with the scarves overlapping, the link is again put in the fire to be finally heated for the welding, which is done by hand. It takes a blacksmith to handle it and on big chains two or three helpers striking with sledges to do the welding. The iron must be of precisely the right heat, and the blows must be quick and sure to complete the work perfectly before the iron cools.

Stud chain is sometimes made of iron as small as five-eighths of an inch in diameter. From that the iron used runs through various diameters up to three inches and more. A three inch chain makes a tremendous cable, suitable for a five ton anchor.—Harper's Weekly.

Would Trade Teachers.

Exchange of schoolmasters is favored by the governing body of Christ's College, Christchurch, New Zealand. The governors have approved of a system of exchange of masters submitted to them by the headmaster. The system is already in operation. The first master to go out from England is Mr. Lutton Carter, M.A., who will arrive in New Zealand this month. Mr. Carter has been assistant-master at Clifton for the past fourteen years. He is a scholar of Pembroke College, Cambridge, and a famous old Cambridge "blue." The system is reciprocal, and one of the New Zealand members of Christ's College staff will be sent to England to join the staff of either Clifton or Rugby.

THE RAILWAYS AND CARTAGE CO'S

Railways of Canada have issued notice of cancellation of tariffs covering cartage points in Canada, effective October 1, 1913. On and after that date shippers and consignees will be expected to make their own arrangements for cartage.

It is stated that this action on the part of the transportation companies is the result of the failure to renew existing contracts with the cartage companies at present prices, the latter claiming that owing to increased cost of supplies, labor and other matters entering into the performance of the service, they must have increased compensation. On the other hand, the railways contend that it is impossible to increase the burden of such extra expense for the very reason given by the cartage companies—namely, increased expenses.

The change in conditions at cartage points in Canada, it is pointed out, is in line with practices which which have long prevailed at American cities, where the public are obliged to make their own arrangements with the cartage companies for deliveries to or from the railway terminal.

REV. P. G. PEEEVER THE NEW PASTOR AT GEORGE ST.

By our special Reporter.

The wind was blowing riotiously as I made my way to George street Methodist church on Sunday morning to hear the Rev. R. G. Peever preach his first sermon as minister of that historic church. But I did not mind the wind, it was a delightful change after a hot week, and its cool breath saved the trouble of fanning.

I was late for church, but this is fashionable in some places, the first hymn was being sung.

George street church is one of the land-marks of Peterborough, its beautiful tower standing out amid the surrounding mundane structures. It is cathedral-like in build and proportions, the architecture is gothic, and it is built of grey brick.

The interior is laid out comfortably from a congregational point of view. The choir sitting in a circle in front of the large pipe organ, and behind the pulpit.

Mr. Peever led the congregation in an earnest and comprehensive prayer for the church and for the city.

The choir rendered an anthem without organ accompaniment which was none the less sweet and effective.

A psalm was read alternately by pastor and congregation, after which Mr. Peever read the lesson. The hymn before the sermon was well chosen and is a splendid manifesto for a new pastor.:

"A charge to keep I have,
A God to glorify,
To the serve the present age."

Wesley wrote that for all time and for all men; preachers, journalists, politician, or real estate man.

Mr. Peever began his discourse by saying that he was a stranger among strangers, and that his first duty was to establish some point of contact between pastor and people. He followed many worthy and noble men and he appealed for the sympathy of his people. He wanted to get in close touch with the boys and he hoped they would greet him when they met him on the street. He claimed the confidence of the young men and the whole-hearted support of the elders. He was glad to have the choir at the back of him, and he was sure they would be behind him in everything that made for true worship.

Mr. Peever preached from a text in Exodus 17-12; "And his hands were steady till the going down of the sun."

He said the hill top must not be neglected, when men have triumphed it had been through the power of prayer.

The three essentials to a successful church were; Leadership, co-operation, and the gracious Spirit of God.

"Your thought is; Will the new minister make good? Will he rally and lead the people forward? He will be contrasted with the previous minister, and he will be found different in many ways. These are right questions, but whatever gifts I may possess, I wish to tell you that the essentials do not lie with these things, they lie with the hill-top."

He went on to say that while we needed leadership we needed co-operation. The church was like a departmental store and should be worked by chosen men, with each man in his right place.

But above all we needed consecration, then shall the victory be not only on the hill-top but on the plain.

Mr. Peever, who is a steady and fluent speaker, gave a foretaste of his eloquence in the conclusion of his discourse, which was a modest sign of more to follow.

The service concluded with the hymn "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Proceeding homeward I overheard one party call to another on the street. "Well, how does that suit you?" To which one lady replied "I think he will be nice, we're going to like him."

This is the first of a series of articles on Peterborough churches.

A Novel Industry.

If you decide to make a journey to one of the poles, you know that Eskimo dogs are absolutely essential. You can get good Eskimo dogs in Greenland or in Alaska. But the good dogs in Greenland may not be exported, except by special permission of the Danish Government, and the dogs in Alaska are not so good. One trouble with ordinary Eskimo dogs is that they have no breeding and no discipline.

They will obey the master with whom they have been brought up, but when they start after fish or other game even their master can control them only by the exercise of brute force. For the purposes of your exploration you need dogs that will obey orders given by a white man, dogs that are broken to the harness and are not afraid of work, dogs that have learned teamwork.

To meet this need an Englishwoman, Mrs. Scott, conducts a very interesting dog farm, outside London, where she breeds and trains for the market. The market is not very large, but it is sufficient to make it worth her while to raise and train the best possible Eskimo dogs. It is not the ordinary dog market. It is the market for Eskimo dogs which are trained for Arctic exploration.

It is this kind of dog that Mrs. Scott raises for the market. Her kennels have only pure-blooded animals of carefully selected stock, and from earliest puppyhood she trains them in how to eat and how to work. When she gets through with an Eskimo dog the animal is not nearly so ferocious as one that just "growed up" in the surroundings of an Eskimo village.

Woman's World

Mrs. James Speyer to Help Fight Cancer.

MRS. JAMES SPEYER.

A number of prominent women are active in the campaign that is being organized to make a national fight against that dread disease, cancer. Experts claim that, while tuberculosis is decreasing, cancer is increasing.

At a recent meeting in New York prominent men and women discussed ways and means of carrying on the work.

It is hoped to establish headquarters and carry on the work through an organization as in the case of the National Association For the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

The campaign of education by the new organization will include the publication of articles in newspapers and magazines, distribution of pamphlets and seeking of co-operation by women's clubs, special instruction in nurses' training schools and lectures before mothers' clubs and groups of nurses and physicians.

Among the prominent women who have taken up this work is Mrs. James Speyer, wife of the New York banker. She has long been noted for her splendid humanitarianism and for her intelligent and enthusiastic work in behalf of those reforms in which she is interested. Mrs. Speyer is perhaps the most distinguished woman advocate of a more enlightened and humane attitude in our treatment of dumb animals.

Mrs. Speyer is said to have a wonderful head for figures. At least so one might judge from the fact that she always has accurate statistics at her tongue's end about any one of the different organizations in which she is interested and that she is treasurer of St. Mary's Free Hospital For Children, of the Girls' Athletic league, of the Women's Auxiliary of the Saturday and Sunday Hospital association and has been treasurer for twenty-nine years of the Irene club, an organization of working girls established in New York by Miss Grace Dodge, which has become the mother club of innumerable working girls' "friendly associations," settlement classes and claims to be part sponsor of the Manhattan Trade school.

Mrs. Speyer's personality bespeaks intense activity. She is of slight, wiry build, has quick, sharp eyes and a very mobile face, with which she enlivens her conversation.

Philosophy of Life.

Determine once for all that you are never going to pity yourself. You are to take things as they come. You will not whine because you have no chance, but will make the best of whatever happens. You will adjust yourself to events and not complain because you cannot have things as you would like them.

Decide that you will be uniformly cheerful. You will put away all sulking, gloom and morbidness as being poison. You will steadily cultivate brightness and cheer as a habit, says Dr. Frank Crane in Woman's World. You can do this. What happens to you has nothing to do with the case. It all depends upon you.

Resolve to cultivate courage. Say to yourself that you will not be afraid, whatever comes along. The coward never did amount to anything. It is by being afraid that people become low, vile weaklings. All goodness is a form of moral courage.

Resolve also to be honest with yourself and with the world, that you will never seek to have any merit you do not possess nor take any money you have not earned nor desire praise when you do not deserve it.

To Bleach Faded Frocks.

The colored frock or blouse that has become faded with frequent launderings and from wear in the sun may be bleached to a clear white by boiling in cream of tartar water. The correct quantity to be used to make the garment a pure white is a teaspoonful of the powder to a quart of water.

PRESIDENT POINCARE

He Is a Brilliant Man and Thorough Democrat.

Concentration and simplicity of life and manners are the most marked characteristics of M. Raymond Poincare, the President of France.

"I like to feel that people know me," he says, "but I don't like them to think it necessary to take off their hats to me."

M. Poincare had not been President half an hour before he announced that the traffic must not be stopped when his carriage drove by. All that he would accept was that his carriage should be given precedence over other vehicles at the moment it passed, and the Paris police have instructions to allow no more favor than that to the President's equipage. Furthermore, he has suppressed the outrider who preceded the carriage on state occasions, and reduced a stable of twelve horses to four.

And he astounded the permanent officials at the Elysee Palace by strongly objecting to the trooper of the Municipal Guard who is supposed to sleep outside the President's bedroom.

"It has always been the rule," said the officials, when Poincare objected to the sentry. The President allowed it for one night, and then quietly sent the soldier back to the barracks.

M. Poincare's simplicity of life is well illustrated by a remark made by his cook when she heard that he would probably be the next French President.

"I hope he will not be elected," she said. "Both he and madame will be very unhappy at the Elysee; of that I am sure. Just think—all that they ordered yesterday was beefsteak and fried potatoes."

And M. Poincare certainly loves his own fireside—and his pets.

As a boy at Dame's school of Mlle. Mare, of Lorraine, he delighted in the society of his dog Pompon, a parrot, a squirrel, and several cats and canaries. To-day his favorite companions are Scott, his collie, his faithful watchdog Brave, who guards his country house at Sampigny, and his Siamese cat Gris-gris; and there is nothing which M. Poincare delights in more than to spend a quiet evening with his books and four-footed companions.

"I owe limitless satisfaction to these creatures," he says, "that we sometimes call our inferior brothers. In what are they inferior? I discover in animals a sense of logic more profound than that of many human beings, and a refined sensitiveness of which numbers of us seem incapable."

Poincare's first pet was a parrot. "I loved the bird," he says, "because teaching my lessons to Raymond"—the parrot was named like his master—"taught them to me at the same time."

A short time ago it was believed that European peace was seriously endangered, for the President was observed to leave the Ministry of Foreign Affairs looking depressed and preoccupied. "The situation must be bad indeed," whispered onlookers to one another, regarding the Premier's furrowed brow. But they were wrong. One of M. Poincare's pets was seriously ill.

Agreed w[illegible]

"Why is she so angry with him?"

"Because he agreed with her."

"You mean disagreed."

"I mean what I said. She remarked that of course she was not perfect, and he agreed with her."

Obeyed the Call.

Wife—Mercy! Look at your face! What's happened?

Hub—A truck driver nearly ran over me, and I called him down.

Wife—But your black eye?

Hub—Oh, he obeyed my call.

As Usual.

"Did you hire that plumber I recommended to you?"

"Yes."

"How did he turn out?"

"Oh, he filled the bill, all right."

A Test.

The man who can truthfully say that he has never been jealous has never been in love.

Remarkable Carpet.

Several remarkable examples of Persian handicraft are to be on view at the exhibition of the famous collection made by Mr. J. R. Preece, while consul-general at Ispahan, now open in London. One of the exhibits is a garden carpet, made for the Shah Ahhas (1587-1628). It exactly reproduces the features of the monarch's elaborate pleasure gardens.

REV. P. G. PEEEVER THE NEW PASTOR AT GEORGE ST.

By our special Reporter.

The wind was blowing riotiously as I made my way to George street Methodist church on Sunday morning to hear the Rev. R. G. Peever preach his first sermon as minister of that historic church. But I did not mind the wind, it was a delightful change after a hot week, and its cool breath saved the trouble of fanning.

I was late for church, but this is fashionable in some places, the first hymn was being sung.

George street church is one of the land-marks of Peterborough, its beautiful tower standing out amid the surrounding mundane structures. It is cathedral-like in build and proportions, the architecture is gothic, and it is built of grey brick.

The interior is laid out comfortably from a congregational point of view. The choir sitting in a circle in front of the large pipe organ, and behind the pulpit.

Mr. Peever led the congregation in an earnest and comprehensive prayer for the church and for the city.

The choir rendered an anthem without organ accompaniment which was none the less sweet and effective.

A psalm was read alternately by pastor and congregation, after which Mr. Peever read the lesson. The hymn before the sermon was well chosen and is a splendid manifesto for a new pastor.:

"A charge to keep I have,
A God to glorify,
To the serve the present age."

Wesley wrote that for all time and for all men; preachers, journalists, politician, or real estate man.

Mr. Peever began his discourse by saying that he was a stranger among strangers, and that his first duty was to establish some point of contact between pastor and people. He followed many worthy and noble men and he appealed for the sympathy of his people. He wanted to get in close touch with the boys and he hoped they would greet him when they met him on the street. He claimed the confidence of the young men and the whole-hearted support of the elders. He was glad to have the choir at the back of him, and he was sure they would be behind him in everything that made for true worship.

Mr. Peever preached from a text in Exodus 17-12; "And his hands were steady till the going down of the sun."

He said the hill top must not be neglected when men have triumphed it had been through the power of prayer.

The three essentials to a successful church were; Leadership, co-operation, and the gracious Spirit of God.

"Your thought is; Will the new minister make good? Will he rally and lead the people forward? He will be contrasted with the previous minister, and he will be found different in many ways. These are right questions, but whatever gifts I may possess, I wish to tell you that the essentials do not lie with these things, they lie with the hill-top."

He went on to say that while we needed leadership we needed co-operation. The church was like a departmental store and should be worked by chosen men, with each man in his right place.

But above all we needed consecration, then shall the victory be not only on the hill-top but on the plain.

Mr. Peever, who is a steady and fluent speaker, gave a foretaste of his eloquence in the conclusion of his discourse, which was a modest sign of more to follow.

The service concluded with the hymn "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Proceeding homeward I overheard one party call to another on the street, "Well, how does that suit you?" To which one lady replied "I think he will be nice, we're going to like him."

This is the first of a series of articles on Peterborough churches.

For the purposes of your exploration you need dogs that will obey orders given by a white man, dogs that are broken to the harness and are not afraid of work, dogs that have learned teamwork.

To meet this need an Englishwoman, Mrs. Scott, conducts a very interesting dog farm, outside London, where she breeds and trains for the market. The market is not very large, but it is sufficient to make it worth her while to raise and train the best possible Eskimo dogs. It is not the ordinary dog market. It is the market for Eskimo dogs which are trained for Arctic exploration.

It is this kind of dog that Mrs. Scott raises for the market. Her kennels have only pure-blooded animals of carefully selected stock, and from earliest puppyhood she trains them in how to eat and how to work. When she gets through with an Eskimo dog the animal is not nearly so ferocious as one that just "growed up" in the surroundings of an Eskimo village.

Mrs. James Speyer to Help Fight Cancer.

MRS. JAMES SPEYER.

A number of prominent women are active in the campaign that is being organized to make a national fight against that dread disease, cancer. Experts claim that, while tuberculosis is decreasing, cancer is increasing.

At a recent meeting in New York prominent men and women discussed ways and means of carrying on the work.

It is hoped to establish headquarters and carry on the work through an organization as in the case of the National Association For the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

The campaign of education by the new organization will include the publication of articles in newspapers and magazines, distribution of pamphlets and seeking of co-operation by women's clubs, special instruction in nurses' training schools and lectures before mothers' clubs and groups of nurses and physicians.

Among the prominent women who have taken up this work is Mrs. James Speyer, wife of the New York banker. She has long been noted for her splendid humanitarianism and for her intelligent and enthusiastic work in behalf of those reforms in which she is interested. Mrs. Speyer is perhaps the most distinguished woman advocate of a more enlightened and humane attitude in our treatment of dumb animals.

Mrs. Speyer is said to have a wonderful head for figures. At least so one might judge from the fact that she always has accurate statistics at her tongue's end about any one of the different organizations in which she is interested and that she is treasurer of St. Mary's Free Hospital For Children, of the Girls' Athletic league, of the Women's Auxiliary of the Saturday and Sunday Hospital association and has been treasurer for twenty-nine years of the Irene club, an organization of working girls established in New York by Miss Grace Dodge, which has become the mother club of innumerable working girls' "friendly associations," settlement classes and claims to be part sponsor of the Manhattan Trade school.

Mrs. Speyer's personality bespeaks intense activity. She is of slight, wiry build, has quick, sharp eyes and a very mobile face, with which she enlivens her conversation.

Philosophy of Life.

Determine once for all that you are never going to pity yourself. You are to take things as they come. You will not whine because you have no chance, but will make the best of whatever happens. You will adjust yourself to events and not complain because you cannot have things as you would like them.

Decide that you will be uniformly cheerful. You will put away all sulking, gloom and morbidness as being poison. You will steadily cultivate brightness and cheer as a habit, says Dr. Frank Crane in Woman's World. You can do this. What happens to you has nothing to do with the case. It all depends upon you.

Resolve to cultivate courage. Say to yourself that you will not be afraid, whatever comes along. The coward never did amount to anything. It is by being afraid that people become low, vile weaklings. All goodness is a form of moral courage.

Resolve also to be honest with yourself and with the world, that you will never seek to have any merit you do not possess nor take any money you have not earned nor desire praise when you do not deserve it.

To Bleach Faded Frocks.

The colored frock or blouse that has become faded with frequent launderings and from wear in the sun may be bleached to a clear white by boiling in cream of tartar water. The correct quantity to be used to make the garment a pure white is a teaspoonful of the powder to a quart of water.

PRESIDENT POINCARE

He Is a Brilliant Man and Thorough Democrat.

Concentration and simplicity of life and manners are the most marked characteristics of M. Raymond Poincare, the President of France.

"I like to feel that people know me," he says, "but I don't like them to think it necessary to take off their hats to me."

M. Poincare had not been President half an hour before he announced that the traffic must not be stopped when his carriage drove by. All that he would accept was that his carriage should be given precedence over other vehicles at the moment it passed, and the Paris police have instructions to allow no more favor than that to the President's equipage. Furthermore, he has suppressed the outrider who preceded the carriage on state occasions, and reduced a stable of twelve horses to four.

And he astounded the permanent officials at the Elysee Palace by strongly objecting to the trooper of the Municipal Guard who is supposed to sleep outside the President's bedroom.

"It has always been the rule," said the officials, when Poincare objected to the sentry. The President allowed it for one night, and then quietly sent the soldier back to the barracks.

M. Poincare's simplicity of life is well illustrated by a remark made by his cook when she heard that he would probably be the next French President.

"I hope he will not be elected," she said. "Both he and madame will be very unhappy at the Elysee; of that I am sure. Just think—all that they ordered yesterday was beefsteak and fried potatoes."

And M. Poincare certainly loves his own fireside—and his pets.

As a boy at Dame's school of Mlle. Marc, of Lorraine, he delighted in the society of his dog Pompon, a parrot, a squirrel, and several cats and canaries. To-day his favorite companions are Scott, his collie, his faithful watchdog Brave, who guards his country house at Sampigny, and his Siamese cat Gris-gris; and there is nothing which M. Poincare delights in more than to spend a quiet evening with his books and four-footed companions.

"I owe limitless satisfaction to these creatures," he says, "that we sometimes call our inferior brothers. In what are they inferior? I discover in animals a sense of logic more profound than that of many human beings, and a refined sensitiveness of which numbers of us seem incapable."

Poincare's first pet was a parrot. "I loved the bird," he says, "because teaching my lessons to Raymond"—the parrot was named like his master—"taught them to me at the same time."

A short time ago it was believed that European peace was seriously endangered, for the President was observed to leave the Ministry of Foreign Affairs looking depressed and preoccupied. "The situation must be bad indeed," whispered onlookers to one another, regarding the Premier's furrowed brow. But they were wrong. One of M. Poincare's pets was seriously ill.

Agreed with Her.

"Why is she so angry with him?"
"Because he agreed with her."
"You mean disagreed."
"I mean what I said. She remarked that of course she was not perfect, and he agreed with her."

Obeyed the Call.

Wife—Mercy! Look at your face! What's happened?
Hub—A truck driver nearly ran over me, and I called him down.
Wife—But your black eye?
Hub—Oh, he obeyed my call.

As Usual.

"Did you hire that plumber I recommended to you?"
"Yes."
"How did he turn out?"
"Oh, he filled the bill, all right."

A Test.

The man who can truthfully say that he has never been jealous has never been in love.

Remarkable Carpet.

Several remarkable examples of Persian handicraft are to be on view at the exhibition of the famous collection made by Mr. J. R. Preece, while consul-general at Ispahan, now open in London. One of the exhibits is a garden carpet, made for the Shah Abbas (1587-1628). It exactly reproduces the features of the monarch's elaborate pleasure gardens.

UNCONSCIOUS BICYCLIST PICKED UP ON ROADWAY

Lindsay Man Was Thrown From Machine as He Decended Steep Hill Near Fowlers Corners—Local Autoist as Good Samaritan

While descending a steep hill in his car near Fowler's Corners, Saturday evening, Mr. Arthur Johnston, of the Little Windsor hotel, noticed the prostrate body of a man lying in the middle of the roadway.

He was stretched out at full length and had been thrown over the handlebars of his bicycle, after the front wheel had been turned by a stone or some other obstruction. He was apparently lifeless and the flesh on his face and arms was terribly torn up. Water was obtained from a nearby farmhouse and the man recovered sufficiently to murmur "Lindsay."

Mr Johnston proceeded to that town and placed the injured man in the care of Dr. White and it was learned that his name was Harry Carr. He said he had ridden from Belleville and had not had his dinner.

Lack of food and the heat had no doubt weakened him to such an extent, that he was not able to guide the machine down the steep hill and the accident followed.

The front wheel of the bicycle is a total wreck and the machine is awaiting it's owner or notification to express it to Lindsay, at the Little Windsor hotel.

It is very fortunate that Mr. Johnston happened along, as the lights on the car made discovery of the body possible. Had a farmers team and wagon travelled the road, the man might have been killed as darkness was approaching and trees further shaded the spot.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES AT S. LUKE'S CHURCH

Large Congregations Present for the Re-opening of the Church on Sunday.

Large congregations and services of added interest at St. Luke's church on Sunday, marked the 37th anniversary of the church.

During the past two weeks renovation of the interior of the edifice had been in progress, and the results must have been most pleasing to the rector and his parishioners. A new bell had also been installed, and altogether the changes have brought about a vast improvement. The special preacher was Venerable Archdeacon Warren, whom the rector stated had been in charge of the services at St. Luke's for some months of the year 1888, and it was appropriate, he remarked, that the Archdeacon was present for this anniversary. The rector also expressed his pleasure at the improvements to the church, and took occasion to express his appreciation of the congregation's action in increasing his stipend by $100.

A new Bible and new Prayer Book for the use of the clergy, and new matting on the aisles, were included in the changes. The meeting was given by the Men's Club.

The rector asked for a large attendance for Holy Communion, and a large number of the congregation responded.

A ROYAL PRIESTHOOD.

The words, "A royal priesthood," taken from Peter 1, 2, 9, was the text used by Archdeacon Warren at the morning service, as he sought to impress the congregation, that to have the true conception of what priesthood meant, was to believe that the church was a priesthood and every member of the church a priest of God. In the ancient world, the preacher explained, a priest was born of a priestly family and priesthood constituted a caste. It was considered necessary for every one to secure the mediatorship of a priest, and, according to the conception, the people could not approach God without the priest.

The preacher told of the changes in religion which terminated in the one great religion of Jesus Christ. Then there arose a small body of men called the elect, They were pious and and tried to keep the laws of God. These were an elect people, and, as the apostles pointed out, were a priesthood and ministers of God.

To be a Christian, a true member of God's church, meant that we must embody in our life, the elements of a priest. In the first place, a priest was a mediator, and although there were people who said we don't want a mediator, yet no good came to any one unless through somebody else.

Priesthood also meant sacrifice, something that embodies personal loss and suffering. "Have you accepted this conception of a priest in regard to your life?" asked the preacher.

Archdeacon Warren proceeded to show, that while me might minister to the bodily needs of men, the Church of God had a higher function. This was to bring about regeneration, and it was towards this aim, we, having the true conception of priesthood, should exert our influence.

Before the sermon Archdeacon Warren expressed his pleasure at being ing present, and to remember the pleasant relationship of 25 years ago. It was relationship, he said, that had left its impression on his whole mind, and doubtless it was in the minds of some of the surviving members also present. It was also a pleasure to him to know that there still prevailed the spirit of fellowship and unity and of progress which characterized the congregation of 25 years ago.

AUTOISTS HAD FINE TRIP TO THE LAKES

Executive of Ontario Motor League, Were Guests of Local Association

The Peterborough Automobile Association held one of the most enjoyable outings of the season, when on Saturday they had a trip through the Kawartha lakes.

The trip was held in honor of the executive of the Ontario Motor League, who were in the city on business pertaining to the Peterborough Automobile Association.

On arrival here in the morning some fifteen members of the Ontario Motor League boarded the steamer Stoney Lake at the George street wharf, along with a large number of the local members of the association and friends.

After the trip over the Lift Lock luncheon was served on board the boat. At the close of the luncheon the general business of the executive was attended too.

On nearing Young's Point the party were pleased to find a large number of local motorists who had motored up to the "Point" to join the gathering.

After a delightful trip through Clear and Stoney Lakes they arrived at Burleigh Falls, where every one journeyed to the "Darcy House," where Mine Host Darcy had prepared a excellent repast for the event.

After everybody's appetitte was appeased the party returned by boat to the Point where they left the water for the cushioned seats of autos that soon brought them to Peterborough.

The members and their friends numbering about eighty, declared that the outing was the most enjoyable one of the season.

Great credit is due to the entertaining committee of the local Automobile Association who were composed of the following gentlemen:—Dr. Amys, Messrs. W. R. Travers, A. H. Stratton and R. Dobie.

A BROWNING LETTER.

The Poet Writes In Admiration of Miss Barrett's Work.

The advertised auction sale of the love letters that passed between Robert Browning, the poet, and Elizabeth Barrett, who later became his wife, took place a few days ago in London. Joseph S. Sabin, a collector, bought the lot for $2,750. In the collection was this first letter, which was written by Browning:

"I love your verses with all my heart, dear Miss Barrett — and this is no off-hand complimentary letter that I shall write, whatever else, no prompt matter-of-course recognition of your genius and there a graceful and natural end of the thing, since the day last week when I first read your poems, I quite laugh how I have been twisting and turning again in my mind what I should be able to tell you of their effect upon me, for in the first flush of delight I thought I would this once get out of my habit of purely passive enjoyment, when I do really enjoy and thoroughly justify my admiration—perhaps even as a loyal fellow-craftsman should, try and find fault and do you some little good to be proud of hereafter; but nothing comes of it all—so into me has it gone and part of me has it become, this great living poetry of yours, not a flower of which but took root and grew in oh, how different that is from lying to be dried and pressed flat and prized highly and put in a book with a proper account at top and bottom, and shut up and put away — and the book called a 'Flora' besides!

"After all, I need not give up the thought of doing that, too, in time; because even now, talking with whoever is worthy, I can give a reason for my faith in one and another excellence, the fresh strange music, the affluent language, the exquisite pathos and true new brave thought—but in this addressing myself to you, your own self, and for the first time my feeling rises altogether—I do, as I say, love these books with all my heart — and I love you, too? Do you know I was once not very far from seeing—really seeing you?

"Mr. Kenyon said to me one morning: 'Would you like to see Miss Barrett?'—then, he went to announce me —then he returned. You were too unwell—and now it is years ago—and I feel as at some untoward passage in my travels—as if I had been close, so close, to some world's wonder in chapel or crypt—only a screen—but there was some Right — so it now seems—Right and just—sufficient bar to admission, and the half-opened door shut, and I went home my thousands of miles, and the sight was never to be!

"Well, these poems were to be and this true, thankful joy pride with which I feel myself.

"Yours ever faithfully,
Robert Browning."

Dances of 200 Years Ago.

Quite recently was celebrated in France the Fete of Felibrige, kept up by the mothers of old Provencal dialect at Aix, which comes only once in seven years.

The 280 local poets have been publicly reciting their verses there recently in the old speech of the south of France, and the one who is adjudged the laureate has the privilege of choosing the queen of the festival. In the warm spring sunshine they dance all the quaint, half-forgotten dances of the peasantry of 200 years ago. Then suddenly starts the farendole.—More and more join hands—the dancers in their quaint costumes, the poets, the spectators, even the policemen—and the rollicking, excited crowd dances away out into the street, along the boulevards, here, there, and everywhere, until they are too tired to keep the dance going any longer.

BRIGHT SERVICE AT MARK STREET

Flowers Were Placed in Form of a Cross

Flower service was held last evening, in the Mark Street Methodist Church and seldom was this form of service showed in greater beauty. The body of the church was filled with Sunday School Scholars, who had carried flowers and placed them above the altar, in the form of a cross. George Street Methodist Church Orchestra assisted the choir in rendering several selections. Mrs. Middleton sang a solo in a very pleasing manner.

The pastor, Rev. C. D. Cragg, preached on flowers and showed how the wisdom of God is manifested in every little petal. He was assisted during the service by his brother from the west.

SERVIAN LINE OF RETREAT THREATENED BY BULGARS

War Office Is Issuing Only the Most Meagre News From the Front and Attitude of Officials Indicate Heavy Reverses—Inhuman Fighting

LONDON, July 8.—The most important news from the seat of war yesterday is the report, confirmed from Sofia, of the appearance of a large Bulgarian force at Vranja, threatening the Servian line of retreat.

Still more significant as tending to confirm the belief that the Servians are suffering defeat, is the announcement from Belgrade that only meagre reports are being received from the Servian army headquarters, and that the Government has decided to publish reports only on alternate days. In addition, a rigorous censorship on the newspapers is being enforced, and the publication of special war editions has been stopped.

The Servian wounded describe the battles as almost inhuman in their ferocity, the men throwing away their firearms and using their bayonets as daggers. This accords with the information from many sources of the sanguinary character of the fighting and the wholesale slaughter witnessed in the present struggle.

Whatever the policy of the European powers may be, little is now heard of attempts to stop the war. The ambassadorial conference met in London again yesterday, but apparently did little else than discuss the boundaries of Albania. Meanwhile, Roumania and Turkey give signs that they will not long be idle spectators if the Balkan states continue the struggle, which will paralyze them for years to come.

News of the fighting continues to be of a contradictory character. It is almost invariably from official sources in the respective capitals, no independent testimony being available. This applies equally to the struggle between the Greeks and the Bulgarians and between the Servians and Bulgarians.

A despatch from Saloniki reports that the Greeks have occupied Demirhiccir and Strumitso, and, according to the most likely information, the Bulgarian general, Ivanoff, has been slowly retiring before the superior Greek forces northward since his army was weakened by the departure of his right wing to attack Krivolak.

It should be noted that another despatch asserts that Gen. Ivanoff, by an unexpected attack, shattered the Greek army of 80,000, commanded by King Constantine, and occupied Nigrita and other points on the Greek line.

It is possible that both reports are correct and that crediting victory to Gen. Ivanoff has reference to a later date, after the Bulgarian commander was reinforced.

An interesting detailed report from Greek official sources of last week's operations describes how the Bulgarians, by incessant labor had transformed Kilkish into another Plevna, with a surprising extent of trenches, guns and defences, and asserts that the Greeks, by their successful advance, prevented the execution of a plan for a Bulgarian attack on Saloniki.

Turk Sees a Chance.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 8.—The Sublime Porte has sent a telegraphic message to the Bulgarian Premier, Dr. Daneff, requesting the evacuation by the Bulgarians of the territory comprised within the Enos-Midia line as soon as possible. The necessary preparations for the advance of the Ottoman troops are proceeding.

HAD TO TAKE TRAIN.

After 45 Minutes of Speeding Grief-Stricken Father Collapsed.

TORONTO, July 8.—After leaving Toronto in an auto on Sunday in the hope of reaching his dying son's bedside in Ottawa earlier than the C.P.R. could get him there, A. G. Marshall was forced to take a train at Oshawa

After leaving Toronto a speed of 60 miles per hour was attained and 32 miles of the distance between Toronto and Oshawa were made in 45 minutes. On arrival at Oshawa, Mr. Marshall was in a state of collapse, and his condition such as to render it impossible for him to continue the trip in a speeding car. Mr. Marshall was put aboard the G.T.R. Brockville train at Oshawa, and at Brockville another G.T.R. train to Smith's Falls was secured. By making close connections Mr. Marshall was thus enabled to catch the Toronto-Ottawa train as it passed through Smith's Falls, and on his arrival at Ottawa found his son still alive. The little boy had been kicked in the head by a horse, but now has a better chance of recovery.

SYLVIA IS ARRESTED

She Failed to Appear in Police Court

LONDON, July 8.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst was arrested, together with several other suffragettes, at a meeting at Bromley last night.

A warrant had been issued for her arrest because she had failed to appear at Bow Street Police Court last Saturday morning to answer a summons charging her with inciting a crowd to raid the residences of the Ministers in Downing street, on June 29th.

Miss Zelie Emerson, the American suffragette, who was released from Holloway jail last April after her case had aroused an international agitation, was among those arrested, according to the report. But if she was taken into custody by the police there is reason to believe that she was liberated. The police say Miss Pankhurst was the only suffragette detained.

FIRE CHIEF AS FIRE BUG

St. John Man Arrested on Accusation of Negress

ST. JOHN, N.B., July 8.—A new sensation in the matter of the string of incendiary fires in St. John was sprung yesterday when John P. McAndrews, district fire chief of West St. John, was arrested on suspicion of seting fire to a shed in that part of the city.

He was arrested on the evidence of a colored woman, who says she has known him for years and that she saw him set fire to the shed in two or three places. He was taken before her yesterday and she identified him. He denied the charge.

McAndrews is a longshoreman and married. The fire chief speaks highly of him as a fireman and he bears an excellent reputation.

MODERN INTERIOR OF A LOCAL STORE

The many friends and patrons of Oak Hall will be pleased to learn that the renovation of their handsome store on George street has been completed. With the new alterations made in the show windows and entire change in the interior the store certainly presents a very handsome and up-to-date appearance. A modern and handsome hat case has been installed at the right hand side of the entrance, while the south side of the store consists of 6 handsome glass silent salesmen cases, each 6 feet in length, thereby giving some 36 feet of a show window. Instead of having the clothing piled on tables as it is in most of our modern stores, the management of Oak Hall have their clothing hung on iron racks, thereby giving the purchaser an excellent chance to see what they are buying without turning the entire stock upside down. The tweeds and worsteds are hung on these racks, while the darker clothes are confined to several handsome cases at the rear of the store.

The office, which formerly was situated near the main entrance has been shifted back a considerable distance and adds greatly to the appearance of the store.

The walls and ceiling have also been repapered and painted and presents a clean and wholesome appearance.

The local branch of Oak Hall is the tenth store in Canada. The stores of Oak Hall are owned by the W. E. Sandford & company, of Hamilton. Mr. M. J. Maher is the manager for the local branch. During the summer months Mr. Maher intends introducing some new features in the clothing line, which will be very interesting to the public.

One of the features of Oak Hall is that the owners, W. E. Sanford & Co. make all their own clothing are the largest clothing manufacturers in Canada.

HEAT KILLS MANY CHILDREN

MONRTEAL, July 8.—The heat wave which marked the close of the week in Montreal wrought terrible havoc among the children of the city. According to official figures given out to-day, 171 children under five years of age died during the week. The week before there were 115 deaths among children, while three weeks before there were only 59.

The members of the expedition are all heart and soul in the work, and no doubt the reports and data they will bring back will be of great use to the scientists. The above photograph shows the Diana as she started on her long journey, the members of the party and Dr. MacMillan, head of the expedition.

TORONTO UNIVERSITY GRADUATES CAUGHT IN HEAVY SEA AT NIAGARA AND DROWN

Five Others Escaped By Swimming To Shore—Waves Were 10 Feet High.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 8.—When five canoes in which they intended to make a trip from Crystal Beach down through the Welland Canal to Lake Ontario were swamped by the heavy sea on Sunday night, five young men were drowned, and five others saved their lives by swimming to shore. The dead are:

Reginald McMahon, 19 years, Niagara Falls, Ont.

Thomas Brophy, 20 years old, attended Toronto University; employed by the Toronto-Niagara Power Co., Niagara Falls.

Edward Reichert, aged 18, attended Toronto University; employed at Niagara Falls.

Carl Goodrich, La Salle, attended McGill University.

The five rescued are:

G. C. Grey, 23 years, Niagara Falls, Ont.

Walter Frantz, aged 22, graduate of Toronto University, Niagara Falls, Ont.

Douglass McMahon, 21 years old, Niagara Falls, Ont.

William Cannon, aged 20, Niagara Falls, Ont.

Joseph Cannon, aged 21, Niagara Falls, Ont.

Two of the overturned canoes were washed ashore at Strawberry Island, near Fort Erie, two more were found at Crescent Beach, and the other has not been found. The five men drowned, probably were carried away by the swift current of the Niagara river. The young men, all of whom are graduates of the University of Toronto, were all members of the Niagara Canoe Club, and they all had covered the same waters before.

The party left Crystal Beach on Friday morning, and were to have returned on Saturday. The high winds, however, prevented them from leaving on scheduled time, and they did not start on their homeward trip until six o'clock Sunday night.

Until they rounded Windmill Point, the party of ten encountered very little wind, with scarcely any sea. The lake was sheltered by the point.

No sooner had the canoes rounded the protruding neck of land at the point, however, when they all were overturned by a strong wind. So sudden was the wind, that the leaders had no opportunity of warning those who were following. One after another, the canoes were overturned and the occupants thrown into the water. The waves, according to the five survivors, were at least ten feet high.

George Gray, who came recently from Toronto to accept a position with the Toronto & Niagara Power Co. at Niagara Falls, Ont., was the first to reach shore. While swimming against the high waves, he tore off all his clothing except his undershirt, and was almost exhausted when he reached the shore.

He at once spread the alarm among the campers at Crystal Beach. Campers and residents of the summer colony lost no time in setting out in boats in an effort to save the young men.

The Cannon brothers, William and Joseph, were found a short distance out, bravely swimming and cheering each other. They were hauled into the boats and taken to Rosehill, where their mother met them.

Several hours after they had been picked up, the Cannon brothers were informed for the first time that they were not the only ones saved. In the meantime, Gray and Douglas McMahon had been rescued and cared for by the cottagers and campers. They were given every attention, but upon learning that there were others of their party who had not been found, they insisted on joining the campers in an effort to locate their chums. Bonfires were lighted at different points along the beach and an all night search was kept up for the five missing men.

Carl Goodrich of La Salle was seen by his companions to topple from his overturned canoe and disappear beneath the great waves.

Relatives of the young men were notified and at once hurried to Crystal Beach. Some of them, hoping against hope that the five who had not been located had been picked up by some passing steamer, sent messages all along the lake and to all lake steamers in port at Buffalo to watch for the missing men.

It was late yesterday morning before news of the accident reached Niagara Falls, and Buffalo had not heard of it till nearly noon.

Heroic Priest Drowned.

ST. HYACINTHE, Que., July 8.—Diving to the assistance of a student named Gaston Richer, Rev. Omer Gagnon, one of the professors of St. Vincent de Paul College here, Sunday managed to save the boy by pushing him into the shallow water, but lost his own life, the swift current of the Yamaska river in which the boy was bathing, sweeping him down stream. The priest was a poor swimmer and his efforts to save the boy exhausted him.

New Camp Site Wanted.

OTTAWA, July 8.—The Minister of Militia is looking over the country but has made no selection of location of the training ground to replace the Niagara and London camps. An area of about thirty or forty square miles is required in order that military operations on an advanced scale may be carried out. The camps at Sewell, Manitoba, and Petewawa have an area of 100 square miles.

PROBABILITIES

Moderate winds fine and cool Wednesday, southwesterly winds, mostly fair and warmer with local thunderstorms.

EQUAL TO OLD ONTARIO.

Expert Valuation Made of the Northern Clay Belt.

WINNIPEG, July 8.—Making the trip by "speeder," under conditions that at times were distinctly hazardous, two experts of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Messrs. J. H. Grisdale, director of experimental farms, and George H. Clark, seeds commissioner, arrived in Winnipeg after a long journey covering ten days along the line of the National Transcontinental Railway between Abittibi and Winnipeg, studying the agricultural possibilities of this new territory that is being made available for settlement by the Grand Trunk Pacific.

The "clay belt" along the railway line commences about 150 miles west of Cochrane and extends westward as far as English River, near Grant, a divisional point on the G.T.P., a distance of over 400 miles. The general character of the land throughout this belt is fairly uniform. West of the clay belt between Grant and Superior Junction, the country is characterized by rocky and gravelly hills, interspersed with sandy intervals, occasional outcrops of clay and an abundance of small lakes and streams. A very small percentage of this country is suitable for agriculture.

The average of the 275 miles of the clay belt traversed showed 21 per cent. to be excellent, 39 per cent. good and 26 per cent. fair, leaving a balance of 24 per cent. that could scarcely be considered as suitable for agriculture. Messrs. Clark and Grisdale agreed in the opinion that apart from limitations as to kinds of crops because of the more northerly climate, the clay belt as a whole is not inferior for agriculture to the clay districts of Old Ontario.

REPRIEVE FOR GIBSON

Was to Have Been Executed To-morrow for Murder

OTTAWA, July 8.—Intimation that a reprieve until Oct. 9, had been granted Charles Gibson was conveyed in a wire sent by the acting Under Secretary of State to the sheriff of Toronto yesterday. Gibson was to have been executed to-morrow.

Friends of Gibson are somewhat disappointed over the results of their efforts, not so much to secure clemency as to obtain a new trial. It was urged that new evidence would be adduced to establish the innocence of the condemned man.

ATTEMPT TO BREAK ART COLLECTOR'S WILL FAILS; SACKVILLES WIN BIG SUIT

Lady Sackville and Her Husband Will Receive Their Legacy of Two and a Half Million Dollars In Spite of Allegations of Other Heirs That Undue Influence Was Used

LONDON, July 8.—The great estate which the late Sir John Murray Scott, the eccentric millionaire and art connoisseur, inherited from Lady Richard Wallace, will be disposed of in accordance with the terms of his will, made in 1901, and of the five codicils giving more than half of his property to Lord and Lady Sackville, who succeeded the Sackville-Wests as tenants of the famous country seat, Knole Park, Seven Oaks, Kent.

The jury of the Probate Court, where the suit has been in progress for eight days, pronounced a verdict yesterday upholding the will. After only ten minutes' consideration they decided that Lady Sackville was guileless of the charges of fraud and undue influence brought against her by members of the Scott family, and cast the burden of the suit, which will be extremely heavy, owing to the array of eminent counsel engaged, upon the late baronet's relatives, who contested the will.

Lord and Lady Sackville will obtain about $2,500,000 of the $5,900,000 of the testator's property, including some of his magnificent art collections.

Many of their friends among the aristocratic audience assembled in the court offered their congratulations to Lord Sackville and his daughter, "the kidlet." Lady Sackville was not present yesterday, as she was resting after the severe strain of the cross examination she underwent last week.

The verdict of the jury seemed to be a foregone conclusion after Sir Samuel Thomas Evans, the presiding judge, had delivered his charge to them before they retired. He expressed strongly the opinion that Lady Sackville was guiltless of fraud, and said that Sir John Murray Scott apparently had felt he had found a custodian for the art treasures which he desired the Sackvilles to keep at Knole Park, and had realized that he must leave money to enable them to be kept. For undue influence, he said, there must be something like coercion, and for fraud there must be something like misrepresentation to the testator of facts which did not exist.

With the return of the jury into court and its pronouncement of a verdict exonerating Lady Sackville from any charge of fraud or undue influence, the "fight for the millions," which had held the interest of the public for over a week, owing to the prominence of the parties concerned, and the amount involved, came to an end.

BIG ELEVATOR BURNED.

Point Edward Fire Results In Loss of $350,000.

SARNIA, July 8.—The immense plant of the Point Edward Elevator Co. at the point was totally destroyed by fire, along with its contents at an early hour yesterday. The watchman saw flames coming through the roof of the tower on the river bank, and a few minutes later that section of the building was in flames from top to bottom. Several engineers on the G.T.R. noticed the flames shooting from the building and sounded a fire alarm on their whistles, which soon brought the residents of the point to the scene.

It was not long until the flames had eaten their way into the main storage bins at the rear of the tower. From here they spread to the elevator engine room and the office, both of which were destroyed. Fanned by a steady north wind off the lake, the flames rapidly worked their way through the walls of the tanks, letting the grain run out on the ground. About 60,000 bushels of wheat and 22,000 bushels of oats went up in smoke.

The plant was owned by a number of local men, among whom are the Mackenzies, the Milnes, Thomas Cook and Thomas Kenny, and a number of small shareholders, having only small interests in the concern. The G.T.R. also was interested financially. The plant was built in the fall of 1903 and has been in operation ever since.

The loss will be felt here by the town, as it has given a considerable amount of work during the winter, besides making Sarnia the home port of many vessels during the closed season, as cargoes of grain were held until they could be taken off the elevator. The loss will be about $350,000, with about half the amount covered by insurance. The cause of the blaze has not yet been determined.

Millers who were supplied with grain by the elevator here will have to get their supplies shipped in from Port Colborne and Goderich.

THE PETERBORO PEOPLE'S PICNIC

Under Auspices of the Retail Merchants' Association.

The Retail Merchants' Association picnic will be held at T.A.S. Park on Thursday, July 17th, and promises to be the biggest event of the season. Two boats have been chartered, the Rainbow and Geneva, which will leave the Street Railway wharf at 9 a.m., and will run every half hour during the day to and from the grounds. Many useful and appropriate prizes have been donated by the merchants and others for the extensive program of sports in connection with their program at the grounds. Two first-class bands have been secured to furnish music during the day, also orchestra for dancing at the pavilion.

The public are reminded the picnic is wide open for everybody. The manufacturers, wholesalers, Board of Trade and City Council are invited to take part and will be a people's picnic in every respect.

The committee have left nothing undone for the convenience and comfort of those who attend. Hot water and milk will be supplied, also first-class ice cream and refreshment booths on the grounds. All that is requested is to bring your baskets. Come early and enjoy the first people's popular picnic. Remember the date, Thursday, July 17th. Tickets, 30 cents to all.

When some men feel like communing with the spirits they interview the man behind the white apron.

SANG THE "RED FLAG" AFTER THE FUNERAL

Twelve Thousand Men At Funeral of Riot Victims

JOHANNESBURG, July 8.—Many of the gold miners refuse to return to work. At a meeting held in Union Park yesterday afternoon, militant leaders delivered fiery speeches to the 3,000 assembled, and a resolution declaring that the strike is still on, and condemning the strike leaders, was carried.

One of the chief speakers announced the organization of a new union of South African workers, which, he said, would be a revolutionary party.

Efforts are now being made at Braamfontein to bring out the railway workers. A dispute is on over the actual terms of settlement, which Gen. Botha, the ex-Premier, and Gen. Smuts, Minister of Mines, made with the unions.

An attempt to destroy the railroad between Johannesburg and Germiston was made during the night, but failed. The only newspaper published yesterday was a four-page sheet issued by the Printers' Union.

Twelve thousand members of the trade unions marched yesterday at the funeral of the victims of the riots. Immense crowds lined the route. The Rt. Rev. Michael Bolton Purse, Lord Bishop of Pretoria, officiated. He begged the multitude to return to their homes peacefully, out of respect for the dead.

The spokesman of the trades federation made a similar appeal. "Disperse quietly," he said. "Let no one say that we are a disorganized rabble."

Among the wreaths was one from the Socialist party inscribed: "In memory of our martyrs, foully murdered in cold blood by the capitalist class."

At the end of the ceremony the Socialists assembled outside the cemetery and sang "The Red Flag."

OUTLOOK CHEERFUL.

Sir William Mackenzie Returns From a Trip In the West.

TORONTO, July 8.—This winter should see cars of wheat from the Canadian west passing through Toronto over the Canadian Northern Railway, on to the grain elevators at Montreal. Sir William Mackenzie, just returned from the west, was highly hopeful of this when seen last night. The line is already laid from Port Arthur to more than 200 miles beyond Edmonton, and the remaining portions of the line between Port Arthur and Toronto, and between Toronto and Montreal will be finished in a few months.

Sir William declared he saw no indications in the west but those which pointed to this year's crop being a bumper one. While prophecying that last year's harvest would be broken, he considered it a little too early to form an estimate as to the total yield.

Schooner Founders; Crew Saved.

HALIFAX, July 8.—While running under bare poles before a heavy gale, the schooner Maud Carter, 92 tons, coal laden, bound from Louisburg, N.S., to Charlottetown, foundered about four miles off Cape George, Antigonish County, yesterday morning. The captain and crew launched a dory and reached shore safely.

HOME RULE BILL PASSES THE HOUSE

LONDON, July 8.—In the House of Commons last night the motion of Andrew Bonar Law, the Opposition leader, to reject the home rule bill was defeated by a vote of [illegible] to 248. The bill also passed its third reading without division.

HOW WILL IT END?

What will be the end of the present state of anarchy in Balkans it would be almost impossible to forecast at the present juncture.

News comes from Sofia that the Bulgarian Commander-in-Chief has sent a despatch to King Ferdinand, announcing the annihilation of eleven thousand Servians and the flight of the balance of the western wing of the entire Servian army.

On the other hand a telegram comes from Constantinople to the effect that Turkey has informed the Powers that it considers the treaty of peace recently drawn up with the Balkan "allies" in London as null and void.

There never was such a mix-up in modern warfare before, and if the whole business was not so bloodbesmirched and horrible it might be laughed at as farcical.

One thing is certain, that Servia must take a back seat in the settlement, unless the Greeks supply them with effective aid from the south; but this is not very likely, for we are told that ten thousand wounded Greeks have been sent back to Salonika hospital.

All this time the wily Turk is whitting his sword and is preparing to get some of his own back.

GIVE IT THE POWER

The executive of the Ontario Motor League has held sessions in Peterborough and transacted business in connection with the interests it represents. The league is doing a good and needful work, and there remains much yet to be come. As the ownership and use of power driven vehicles increases a larger number of irresponsible people will get their hands on steering wheels, and the more need there is for supervision.

The league has reached the point and the usage of vehicles the same position, where the league should be given larger powers. At present membership is voluntary, and there is no power to discipline.

Take the case of the Medical Council in its relation to that profession, Its powers are large, and in the main, wisely exercised. No man or woman may practise medicine without its consent and approval. This consent implies—nay it says—that the applicant has had an extended period of preliminary training and education in the principles of the profession, and agrees to abide by rules and regulations. Hence there is the opportunity for a rigid discipline.

The Ontario Motor League should apply to the Provincial Government for powers about the same as exercised by the Medical Council or Law Society. All owners and drivers of power vehicles, of every kind, should be compelled to become members. The fee may be nominal. Licenses to be issued by and under the Motor League. All inspection done by the League or its officers. There would be the very best discipline, for a license could be revoked, when necessary, and revoked on the strength of information from those who know. An applicant might pass an examination technically, before an inspector of the government, yet his driving might be a crime. Those who come in contact with him would know.

Another thing. The method of numbering cars is a travesty. The owner of a car does not want a number. He knows it is a disfigurement. That is any sort of number that can be read at a glance when a car is in motion. The figures are slim, and too tall—"condensed," the printer names them. The whole thing needs revision. The number should be lettered, or painted, directly on the back of the car in figures at least eight inches square. Then the man, who has been overturned in the road, can get some idea of the number of the car as it flies away from the scene, to avoid explanation or attack for damages. The protest of the car owner, as to the size of figures, etc., need not have any attention. What the public are after is a measure of safety and identification.

"I GO A' FISHING"

The Terra Nova which bore Captain Scott and his brave party on their last and fatal expedition to the South Pole, has returned to its old haunts around the Coast of Newfoundland, to follow its former occupation of sealing.

This may seem a rather tame and inglorious end to so famous an adventure; and, if a boat could feel, this one surely must be very sad at not being shown around the coasts of England, and given an easy job or a pension.

Such is fame. The soldier, the sailor, the venturous airman, or swimmer who crosses the channel, the hungry Suffragette, and even ex-Premiers were but the darlings of a day, and like the disconsolate Terra Nova have come to this; "I go a fishing."

EDITORIAL NOTES

In Massachusetts they are teaching school children to dodge motor cars they will have to be artful dodgers.

The fourth of July still demands a large toll. Eight deaths and three hundred and sixty-five injured, is the price our neighbors paid for demonstrating the fact that they were independent.

The police cat is still playing with the militant mouse. But the mouse is in such a mauled condition that the cat will either have to eat it or let it go.

"It means death," says Sylvia Pankhurst, "a slow, lingering death, the only alternative is for the government to give way, the women will never give way." Sweet Sylvia!

Stefansson denies that the chief object of his expedition is the fifty gallons of brandy left sixty years ago by another Arctic expedition. There is no need to go so far, there is plenty of the ardent spirit in Ontario—and to spare.

Old English Liverpudlians resident in Peterborough will be interested to learn that King George will visit the famous city on the Mersey on July the 11th, and that the manager of the cotton exchange have voted to suspend business on that day. Won't they have a royal time!

INCONSTANT LOVERS.

Sigh no more ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever,
One foot on sea and one on shore,
To one thing constant never.
Then sigh not so, but let them go
And be you blithe and bonny,
Converting all your sounds of woe
Into hey nonny, nonny.

Sing no more ditties, sing no moe,
Of dumps so dull and heavy,
The fraud of men was ever so,
Since summer first was leafy,
Then sigh not so, but let them go,
And be you blithe and bonny,
Converting all your sounds of woe
Into Hey nonny, nonny.

—Shakespeare.

Artificial Eggs.

Dr. Paul Walden, the famous Russian chemist who is to be president of the next international congress of applied chemistry, declares that the production of artificial eggs will be the next feat of chemistry. An egg is a complex compound of nitrogen, oxygen, calcium and hydrogen. Some of the simpler combinations of these elements have already been made, and there is steady progress toward the goal where even more intricate substances as that of the egg will be built up chemically, he says. The nitrogen, which is the main thing, will be taken out of the air.

Flag Trampling Stopped.

VANCOUVER, B.C., July 7.—Two citizens of the U.S. plucked a miniature Union Jack from a standing automobile and trampled it in the mud. In a few minutes a crowd of a thousand people gathered and the offenders were badly manhandled, being saved from serious injury only by the police.

The affair occurred in a congested district in the east end, where there is a large alien population, and a serious [illegible] narrowly averted.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotation in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc

CHICAGO, July 7.—Wheat prices sagged today under the weight of heavy marketing of the new crop. There was a nervous close, at a decline of ⅝c to 1⅛c net. ## CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, July 7.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending July 5 were 1675 cattle, 1110 sheep and lambs, 2259 hogs and 1200 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 1100 cattle, 1000 sheep and lambs, 850 hogs and 625 calves.

Owing to the increased receipts of cattle a weaker feeling developed in the market this morning, and prices showed a decline of 15c to 25c per 100 pounds, as compared with a week ago. The demand was good at the above reduction in prices, and an active trade was done. Really choice steers were not plentiful. The demand from packers was good for fair to choice stock, and sales of full loads of choice steers were made at $6.75 to $7; good at $6.25 to $6.50, and fair at $5.50.

The tone of the market for sheep and lambs continues easy, owing to the more liberal supplies coming forward, and prices were a shade lower than a week ago. The demand was good from both packers and butchers, and trade was active, with sales of ewe sheep at $4.25 to $4.50, and lambs at $7.50 per 100 pounds. The market for calves was stronger on account of the smaller receipts, and prices were fully $1 per head higher. The supply of hogs was smaller, but there was a good demand, as packers generally were short of stock, and the undertone to the market was stronger.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.75 to $7.25; do., medium, $5.40 to $6.50; do., common, $2.75 to $4; canners, $3.25 to $3.50; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5.50 to $5.75; do., medium, $5 to $5.25; do., bulls, $3.50 to $5.50; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80; do., common and medium, each, $45 to [illegible]; springers, $55 to $60.

Sheep, ewes, $4.25 to $4.50; bucks and culls, $3.50 to $3.75; lambs, $6.25 to $7.50.

Hogs, f.o.b., $10.40.

Calves, $3 to $11.

Looted Civic Stores.

MOOSE JAW, July 8.—That systematic stealing of lead pipe, copper wire and other metal goods from civic stores has been going on for three years is the statement made yesterday by Sidney Fourarees, assistant storekeeper, now under arrest.

"We are after a man higher up," said one civic official, "and startling developments may be looked for, as this man is in no way connected with the stores department.

Fourarees said that lead and brass belonging to the city were shipped away a carload at a time, much of it going to foundries in the east.

STAFFORD HOUSE PUBLIC

Beautiful Old Palace Will Be the Nation's Property.

Now that Stafford House is about to become the property of the British nation, some particulars of the beauty of the interior may be found interesting. The mere size of the rooms is in itself sufficient to give distinction to the building. The great hall measures 70 by 90 feet, and is between 80 and 90 feet high. The marble staircase is grand in proportion, and might have come straight out of the "Arabian Nights." Some dozen or so of immensely wide, shallow steps lead up to the first landing, and thence the stairs divide, a flight on either hand leading upwards to the gallery. The carpet that covers them is a dream of color in bright, soft red, with creamy design for relief. It is a perfect red, glowing, radiant. Within the glass doors are supposed to enclose for royalty only, or for the bride leaving her father's home.

Disraeli used a very characteristic word when describing, in "Lothair," how Crecy House (really Stafford House) came to be built. An heir-apparent to the throne, he says, raised the edifice among gardens which he had "deviated" from one of the royal parks. "Deviated" is a delicious way of expressing this triumph of might over right—a truly courtier-like phrase.

If the great hall could give us back the glorious voices that have sounded in song within it we should have a wonderful concert. Among the rest would be Malibran and Grisi, Lablanche and Tamburini.

Upstairs the rooms are of great height, and on the ceilings alone have been lavished sums that would suffice to furnish the whole house of a Park lane millionaire, and this apart from the masterpieces that form part of the decoration. The walls and ceilings of the largest (the picture gallery is 186 feet long) are decorated in cream and gold, the designs of the gilding being highly ornate, and showing a finish of detail that seems almost incredible in work of such an extent. Two of Murillo's masterpieces, never engraved, are among the pictures here.

Marshal Soult looted them in Spain and sold them for $250,000, together with Murillo's "Assumption," now in the Louvre. Another famous picture is "The Jesuit," by Normi. "Skied," in the roof of the lantern window, is placed in the centre of the room directly beneath it at such an angle that one can readily study the picture reflected in it.

At every step there are lovely inlaid tables, cabinets, chairs, and couches of beautiful shape, and covered with rich brocade, some of it in a design of wreaths of roses. In one room there are great blue and white china jardinieres, in the old willow pattern, measuring about half a yard in diameter, but only six inches or seven inches deep. The furniture in the red drawing-room was made by Siddons, who furnished Windsor Castle for George IV. There is a very beautiful chimney-piece in this room, white marble, with narrow panels in tones of orange and yellow marble. Under the mantel-piece is an exquisite scroll work representing shells and seaweed, all on a very large scale. The fireplace is tiled in pure white.

The green library is very home-like and comfortable looking. The carpet is Indian on a creamy ground, and the chairs are covered with chints in a design of large pink roses on a creamy ground. Two cosy chairs drawn up by the fire give the impression of a room that is lived and lived in.

CY WHITTAKER'S PLACE

By JOSEPH C. LINCOLN

Copyright, 1908, by D. Appleton & Co.

But Captain Cy had another acquaintance in the city, the son of a still older acquaintance, who had been a wealthy shipping merchant and mine owner in California. The son was also a congressman from a coast state, and the captain had read of him in the papers. A sketch of his life had been printed, and this made his identity absolutely certain. Captain Cy's original idea had been to write to this congressman. Now he determined to find and interview him.

He inquired concerning him of the hotel clerk, who, like all Washington clerks, was a walking edition of "Who's Who at the Capital."

"Congressman Everdean?" repeated the all knowing gentleman. "Yes, he's in town. Has rooms at the Gloria, second hotel on the right as you go up the avenue—only a short walk. What can I do for you, sir?"

The Gloria was an even bigger hotel than the one where the captain had his "berth." An inquiry at the desk of another important clerk was answered with a brisk:

"Mr. Everdean? Yes, he rooms here. Don't know whether he's in or not. Evening, judge. Nice winter weather we're having."

The judge, who was a ponderous person, vaguely suggesting the great Heman, admitted that the weather was fine, patronizing it as he did so. The clerk continued the conversation. Captain Cy waited. At length he spoke.

"Excuse me, commodore," he said. "I don't like to break in until you've settled whether you have it snow or not, but I'm here to see Congressman Everdean. Hadn't you better order one of your fo'mast hands to hunt him up?"

The judge condescended to smile, as did several other men who stood near. The clerk reddened.

"Do you want to see Mr. Everdean?" he snapped.

"Why, yes, I did. But I can't see him from here without strainin' my eyesight."

The clerk sharply demanded one of the captain's visiting cards. He didn't get one, for the very good reason that there was none in existence.

"Tell him an old friend of his dad's is here on the main deck waitin' for him," said Captain Cy. "That'll do first rate. Thank you, admiral."

Word came that the congressman would be down in a few moments. The captain beguiled the interval by leaning on the rail and regarding the clerk with an awed curiosity that annoyed its object exceedingly. The inspection was still on when a tall man of an age somewhere in the early thirties walked briskly up to the desk.

"Who is it that wants to see me?" he asked.

The clerk waved a deprecatory hand in Captain Cy's direction. The newcomer turned.

"My name is Everdean," he said. "Are you— Hey! Great Scott! Is it possible this is Captain Whittaker?"

The captain was immensely pleased.

"Well, I declare, Ed!" he exclaimed. "I didn't believe you'd remember me after all these years. You was nothin' but a boy when I saw you out in Frisco. Well, well! No wonder you're in congress. A man that can remember faces like that ought to be president."

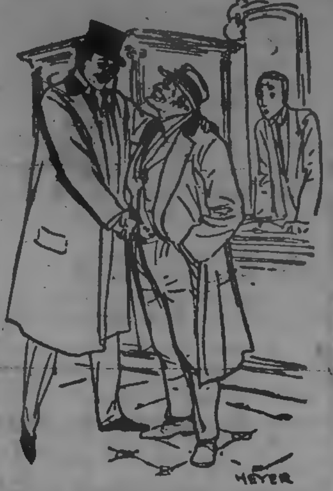
Everdean laughed as they shook hands.

"Don't suppose I'd forget the chap who used to dine with us and tell me those sea stories, do you?" he said. "I'm mighty glad to see you. What are you doing here? The last father and I heard of you you were in South America. Given up the sea, they said, and getting rich fast."

Captain Cy chuckled.

"It's a good thing I learned long ago not to believe all I hear," he answered, "else I'd have been so sure I was rich that I'd have spent all I had and been a permanent boarder at the poorhouse by now. No, thanks; I've had dinner. Why, yes, I'll smoke if you'll help along. How's your father? Smart, is he?"

The congressman insisted that they should adjourn to his rooms. An unmarried man, he kept bachelor's hall at the hotel during his stay in Washington. There in comfortable chairs they spoke of old times, when the captain was seafaring and the Everdean home had been his while his ship was in port at Frisco. He told of his return to Bayport and the renovation of the old house. Of Bos'n he said nothing. At last Everdean asked what had brought him to Washington.



"IS IT POSSIBLE THIS IS CAPTAIN WHITTAKER?"

"Well," said Captain Cy, "I'll tell you. I'm like the feller in court without a lawyer—he said he couldn't tell whether he was guilty or not 'count of havin' no professional advice. That's what I've come to you for, Ed—professional advice."

He told the harbor appropriation story. At the incident of the "committee of one" his friend laughed heartily.

"Rather put your foot in it that time, Captain, didn't you?" he said.

"Yup. Then I got t'other one stuck tryin' to get the first clear. How's it look to you? All straight, do you think, or is there a nigger in the wood pile?"

Mr. Everdean seemed to reflect.

"Well, Captain," he said, "I can't tell. You're asking delicate questions. Politicians are like doctors—they usually back up each other's opinions. Still, you're at least as good a friend of mine as Atkins is. Queer he should bob up in this matter. Why, he—but never mind that now. I tell you, Captain Whittaker, you come around and have dinner with me tomorrow night. In the meantime I'll see the chairman of the committee on that bill—one of the so called 'pork' bills it is. Possibly from him and some other acquaintances of mine I may learn something. At any rate, you come to dinner."

So the invitation was accepted, and Captain Cy went back to his own hotel and his room. He slept but little, although it was not worry over the appropriation question which kept him awake. Next morning he wrote a note to Georgianna giving his Washington address. With it he inclosed a long letter to Bos'n, telling her he should be home pretty soon and that she must be a good girl and "boss the ship" during his absence. He sent his regards to Asaph and Bailey, but Phoebe's name he did not mention. Then he put in a miserable day wandering about the city. At 8 that evening he and his western friend sat down at a corner table in the big dining room of the Gloria.

The captain began to ask questions as soon as the soup was served, but Everdean refused to answer.

"No, no," he said, "pleasure first and business afterward; that's a congressional motto. I can't talk Atkins with my dinner and enjoy it."

CHAPTER XIX.

"CAN'T, hey?" queried Cyrus of the congressman. "You wouldn't be popular at our perfect boarding house back home. There they serve Heman hot for breakfast and dinner and warm him over for supper. All right; I can wait."

The conversation wandered from Buenos Aires to Frisco and back again until the cigars and coffee were reached. Then the congressman blew a fragrant ring into the air and from behind it looked quizzically at his companion.

"Well," he observed, "so far as that appropriation of yours is concerned"—

He paused and blew a second ring. Captain Cy stroked his beard.

"Um—yes!" he drawled. "Now that you mention it seems to me there was some talk of an appropriation."

Mr. Everdean laughed.

"I've been making inquiries," he said. "I saw the chairman of the committee on the pork bill. I know him well. He's a good fellow, but"—

"Yes, I know. I've seen lots of politicians like that. They're all good fellers, but— If I was in politics I'd make a law to cut 'but' out of the dictionary."

"Well, this chap really is a good fellow. I asked about the $30,000 for your town. He asked me why I didn't go to the congressman from that district and not bother him about it. I said perhaps I would go to the congressman later, but I came to him first."

"Sartin. Same as the feller with a sick mother-in-law stopped in at the undertaker's on his way to call the doctor. All right; heave ahead."

"Well, we had a rather long conversation. I discovered that the Bayport item was originally included in the bill, but recently had been stricken out."

"Yes, I see. Uncle Sam had to economize, hey—save somethin' for a rainy day?"

"Well, possibly. Still, the bill is just as heavy. Now, Captain Whittaker, I don't know anything about this affair, and it's not my business, but I've been about today, and I asked questions, and—I'm going to tell you a fairy tale. It isn't as interesting as your sea yarns, but— Do you like fairy stories?"

"Land, yes! Tell a few myself when it's necessary. Sometimes I almost believe 'em. Well?"

"Of course you must remember this is a fairy story. Let's suppose that once on a time—that's the way they always begin—once on a time there was a great man, great in his own country, who was sent abroad by his people to represent them among the rulers of the land, so in order to typically represent them he dressed in glad and expensive raiment, went about in dignity and"—

"And whiskers. Don't leave out the whiskers."

"All right—and whiskers. And it came to pass that the people whom he represented wished to—er—bring about a certain needed improvement in their—their beautiful and enterprising community."

"Sho, sho! How natural that sounds! You must be a mind reader."

"No, but I have to make speeches in my own community occasionally. Well, the people asked their great man to get the money needed for this improvement from the rulers of the land aforementioned. And he was at first all enthusiasm, and upon the—the parchment scroll where such matters are inscribed were written the name of the beautiful and enterprising community and the sum of money it asked for, and the deal was as good as made. Excuse the modern phraseology. My fairy lingo got mixed there."

"Never mind. I can get the drift just as well—maybe better."

"And the deal was as good as made. But before the vote was taken another chap came to the great man and said: 'Look here! I want to get an appropriation of, say, $50,000 to deepen and improve a river down in my state'—a southern state we'll say—'I've been to the chairman of the pork bill committee, and he says it's impossible. The bill simply can't be loaded any further. But I find that you have an item in there for deepening and improving a harbor back in your own district. Why don't you cut that item out—shove it over until next year? You can easily find a satisfactory explanation for your constituents. And you want to remember this: The improvement of this river means that the—the—well, a certain sugar growing company can get their stuff to market at a figure which will send its stock up and up. And you are said to own a considerable amount of that stock. So why not drop the harbor item and substitute my river slice? Then'— Well, I guess that's the end of the tale."

He paused and relit his cigar. Captain Cy thoughtfully marked with his fork on the tablecloth.

"Hum!" he grunted. "That's a very interestin' yarn. Yes, yes; don't know's I ever heard a more interestin' one. I presume likely there ain't a mite of proof that it's true?"

"Not an atom. I told you it was a fairy tale. And I mustn't be quoted in the matter. Honestly, the most of it is guesswork at that. But perhaps a 'committee of one' dropping a hint at home might at least arouse some uncomfortable questioning of a certain great man. That's about all, though. Proof is quite another thing."

The captain pondered. He was fully aware that the unpopularity of the "committee" would nullify whatever good its hinting might do.

"Humph!" he grunted again. "It's one thing to smell a rat and another to nail its tail to the floor. But I'm mighty obliged to you, all the same. And I'll think it over hard. Say, I can see one thing—you don't take a very big shine to Heman yourself!"

"Not too big, no. Do you?"

"Well, I don't wake up nights and cry for him."

Everdean laughed.

"That's characteristic," he said. "You have your own way of putting things, captain, and it's hard to be improved on. Atkins has never done anything to me. I just—I just don't like him, that's all. Father never liked him either in the old days, and yet, and it's odd, too, he was the means of the old gentleman's making the most of his money."

"He? Who? Not Heman?"

"Yes, Heman Atkins. But so far as that goes father started him toward wealth, I suppose. At least he was poor enough before the mine was sold."

Loyal To the Last.

BERLIN, July 7.—Daniel Wicks, 135 Ontario street, Stratford, was found crushed beneath a G.T.R. freight train in the yards here Saturday morning. When found by the conductor he was still alive and was rushed to the hospital. To the surprise of the hospital staff he lived for three hours, although both legs and one arm were amputated.

He was conscious for a time, but absolutely refused to give any information as to how he got to Berlin, saying "I don't want to get the guy pinched." He claimed to have had $175 when he left Stratford.

Bamboos as Water Pitchers.

In the Hawaiian Islands the natives carry their supply of water about with them in long bamboo tubes, the joints of which have been knocked out. Girls may be seen making their way to nearby springs with the family "water jug." They patiently fill the long hollow in the bamboo with water, blocking up the end with a wooden plug. This is then carried to the hut and lasts the family for several days, keeping cool and sweet in this novel receptacle. The larger bamboo trunks are used in the same way as receptacles for storing various household commodities.—World Wide Magazine.

In Memory of His Lost Youth.

In the grounds of Sketty Hall, near Swansea, the residence of the late Mr. Glyn Vivian, is a large, grass-entwined gravestone which is probably unique. It was erected by Mr. Vivian himself to the memory of his lost youth, and on it are inscribed some pathetic lamentations in elegant verse.

BUSINESS TRANSACTED BY ## (ALD. JOHNSTON PRESIDED)
THE CIVIC LEGISLATORS

Mayor Bradburn was absent from Council meeting last night and on motion of Ald. Buller and Duncan, Ald. Johnston took the chair.

A communication from the Water Commissioners in regard to water service for the Vermont Marble Co. was referred to the F. W. and L. Committee, with power to act. The corner of James and Mark streets and the company's premises were suggested as sites.

It was decided that the City Clerk should attend the convention of Ontario Municipalities, in Toronto in August.

A NUISANCE.

Bennet & Goodwill on behalf of John Higgins, advised Council that a septic tank be installed, to prevent the nuisance arising from a cesspool at the Isolation Hospital and the drain therefrom. One week's grace was given the city.

The matter was referred to the Board of Health.

OTONABEE'S CLAIM.

The Township of Otonabee has entered a statement of claim in connection with the writ for damages entered against the city, because of the pollution of the river by sewage. The aldermen were of the opinion that it was understood, that the matter had been left in abeyance, pending progressive work on the part of the city.

The City Solicitor was instructed to have the statement of claim struck out and action stayed.

THE CITY'S OFFER.

A. B. Colville wrote that the offer of the city for the assets of the Light and Power Co. would be placed before the directors of the Electric Co. at a meeting on Friday. The price is $90,000.

GRANT OF $100.

David Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Council, headed a deputation from that organization, and asked for a grant towards the Labor Day celebration. Mr. J. J. Hartley also spoke.

"I think it's money well spent to give them $100 to keep the crowd in Peterborough," said Ald. Duncan. Ald. Anderson approved of the grant and the motion to that effect was carried.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

All the committee reports were read and adopted on motion of the respective chairmen.

Ald. Green inquired about an account of $243 from E. R. Watts & Son, and the information was that this amount was for instruments for the City Engineer's department.

SEWER CONSTRUCTION.

By-law No. 1,745, authorizing the construction of sewers under the Local Improvement Act, was passed. The sewers will be constructed on parts of the following streets:—Gilchrist, Driscoll Terrace, Mark, Park, Lafayette Ave., Lewis, Elias Ave., Prince, Princess, Bonacord, Dickson and Cross.

By-law No. 1,746, relating to the public health was also passed. The provisions of this bylaw will be found in another column.

THE CORNER GROCERY.

The "Corner Grocery," at St. Joseph and Charlotte streets, will not likely be erected.

On behalf of residence of that locality, Ald. Gordon informed the Council that arrangements were underway to buy the property of Mr. Braund, and he moved that the first and second readings of the by-law designating the area in which commercial building must not be erected, be proceeded with.

Wm. Pope, sr., again objected to the by-law, as he has property at the corner of Charlotte street and Foundry road.

C. S. Hetherington said that the residents had subscribed towards the purchase price of the property, now owned by Mr. Braund.

The Alderman discussed the question once again and it was finally decided that the by-law should stand over till the full Council could be present.

Ald. Green didn't think it wise on the part of Council to pass such a by-law and furthermore he believed the by-law would not hold water. The time to restrict property was when it was being broken up or before sold.

Alderman Duncan did not favor a store being erected to injure the property of the immediate vicinity, but he was not in favor of restricting the whole property.

MUST CLEAN UP.

"What about this machinery and brick around the market square," queried the chairman of the Board of Works. "It looks like a junk yard." The place should be cleaned up.

Ald. Duncan answered that Mr. Drummond, who owns the machinery, had been notified to clean up.

He will receive another notice.

LOWNIE STREET CREEK.

"I'm going to keep it up till something is done," said Ald. Langford in renewing the Lownie street creek question.

Ald Buller replied that the work would be proceeded with as soon as a feasible rout was secured.

OXFORD STREET, E.C.

Oxford street, east city, will receive attention at the hands of the Board of Works when the city engineer reports.

DALHOUSIE-ST. BRIDGE

Regarding the Dalhousie street bridge matter which Ald. Anderson re-introduced, Ald. Buller suggested that the Legal committee might take the question up with the C.P.R. and Railway Board, with a view to space being provided on the new C.P.R. bridge for a foot bridge.

JOB FOR THE POLICE.

The City Trust Commissioners will be asked to keep the public lavatory in the market arcade open on Sundays, and the police will be notified to stop the boys from congregating there.

FOOT-BRIDGE AT LONDON-ST.

On motion of Ald. Anderson, the City Engineer was instructed to report as to the most desirable location for a foot bridge from London street across the river and to prepare an estimate of the coast of such bridge.

SIDEWALK REPAIR.

Ald. Anderson also asked for repairs to the board sidewalk east of the Hunter street bridge to Burnham street. The walk is in bad repair. It cost the city $150 last year when a lady was injured. "And while you're down there," remarked Ald Green, "put some gravel at the west end of the bridge.

A. DOBBIN DID NOT MURDER MAN

A report to the effect that Andrew Dobbin, formerly of this vicinity, had murdered a man in Rochester is without foundation, as the following communication from the Police Chief of Rochester, states:

"Yours of the 20th ult., received, and in reply to same will state that Andrew Dobbin, a saloon keeper, residing at Bay St., this city, was arrested on April 29th, 1913, on charge off assault, third degree, and was fined $15.00 in police court, and he paid the fine. He was not locked up, being arrested on a notify warrant.

Ald. Duffus Wants City to Provide Sanitary Drinking Fountain

At Council meeting last night Ald. Duffus held that it was high time the city provide a proper drinking fountain in a central part of the city.

He objected to "the dirty old brass cup" now in use at the fountain, at the corner of Water and Simcoe streets, and remarked that as people used their own cups there must be a reason.

His motion that the Property Committee be authorized to get estimates on the cost of a sanitary drinking fountain was carried.

Ald. Duffus said that a sanitary fountain could be provided, and all that was necessary was to push a button. A cup was not needed.

DANGEROUS PETS.

Doctor Gives His Opinion About Cats and Dogs.

A lethal chamber for all household pets—that is the suggestion of a prominent physician, who considers that on account of their germ-breeding propensities pet dogs, cats, rabbits, and birds, such as parrots, are the cause of an amazing amount of ill-health in families. And although most of us will probably consider the proposed remedy far too drastic, there is much food for reflection in his remarks.

In his opinion cats and dogs are real dangers to children's health. He contends that they convey diphtheria for one thing, not by germs in their fur so much as in their throats, and others diseases as well.

"It makes me shudder," he says, "when I see babies cuddling cats, and perhaps inhaling their breath and holding them close to them. Many a case of disease that seems mysterious has been conveyed into a family by a pet dog or cat."

Pet animals, according to this physician, pick up all sorts of germs from the street or floor. They come into close contact with all sorts of filth and dirt, and no matter how often an animal may be washed the disease germs cling to it and are transmitted to any person who fondles it.

He is especially severe upon those women who, both at home and out of doors, are to be seen kissing and fondling pampered pets in a manner which is as much against good taste as it is against good health.

"No wonder," he says, "that so many of these women come to me complaining of throat troubles and eye afflictions, when they indulge in such habits."

With regards to birds, there is not so much danger if they are kept in cages or in their proper place and not allowed to come into close personal contact with their owners. "I know of one old lady, however," says this physician, "who thinks nothing of having her pet parrot walking about the dining table at meals, and this after the bird has probably been walking about the garden, for it is very tame, and follows its mistress wherever she goes. In such a case the bird is an absolute menace to health."

A City of Forty Mosques.

The city of Adrianople is very much scattered and contains somewhere about 80,000 inhabitants, half of whom are Turks and the others Armenians, Israelites and Greeks. The walls which formerly surrounded the city had been allowed to fall to ruins, and since the Russo-Turkish war the city has been in a state of decline. Much of its old splendor has disappeared, but many of its forty mosques are fine examples of eastern architecture. The city has had a very varied history since its foundation in the second century by the Roman Emperor Hadrian. A great victory was won there by the Goths in 378 and another by the Avar Huns in 586. Twice the Russians have occupied the city—first in 1829, when they forced Turkey to give independence to Greece, and again in 1878, when they occupied it without resistance.

Summer Coats.

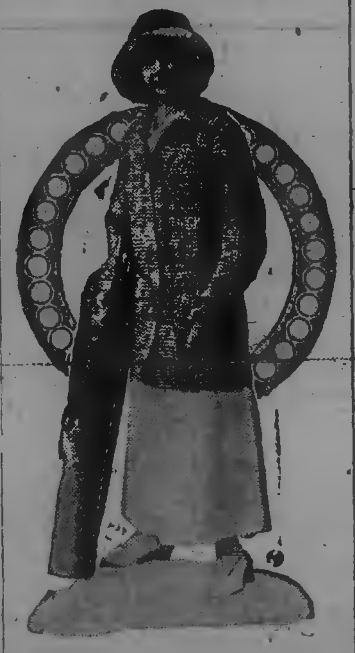
Cotton eponge coats will be worn during the summer, as their suppleness and noncrushing quality make them preferable to those of linen. Besides the severely tailored styles, the draped models will be much worn because eponge has been woven in much finer qualities this season. The fillet mesh weave is particularly good looking.

The mackinaw coats of last summer have been replaced by outing coats that have much more style, and they are in styles that will be more becoming to the majority of women. These new coats are generally of a fine worsted, serge or whipcord in a bright shade of green or red, a rich shade of tan, chamois or leather, or in a striped or checked black and white. A long hip length Norfolk style, with collar and cuffs of white kidskin, broadcloth or eponge, is the most popular.



NEW MACKINAW.

A smart mackinaw in checked black and white is illustrated here.

An Arabian Legend.

The Arabians had a tradition that when the devil started forth from his own place to the garden of Eden he was too lazy to walk and begged all the animals, one after another, to carry him. All refused except the serpent, which was then a quadruped and the most beautiful of all beasts. Yielding to the entreaties of Satan, the serpent took up the devil on its back and carried him the rest of the way, no one knows how far, and after the consequences of the devil's entry into the garden became apparent the angels were commanded to look up the serpent and punish it, so Michael cut off its legs, and it was doomed henceforth to travel about flat on the ground.

Great Change In Map.

An important change in the map of Asia has recently occurred. The vast region of Mongolia has ceased to be a part of China, and is now independent. The Mongols are chiefly famous in the world's history as invaders and conquerors in Asia and Eastern Europe. They were vassals of the late Manchu dynasty, but not of the Chinese Government, and their separation from China resulted automatically from the proclamation of a republic. Their secession from China was aided by Russia, which thus secures a "buffer state" on its Chinese frontier.

A FLIGHT FOR LIFE

The Story of a Rescue Trip in the Mountains of Alaska.

BRAVE MEN AND SPEEDY DOGS

An Act of Heroism That Saved a Woman and Her Sick Husband From Death When Stranded on a Winter Night Amid the Snow Clad Peaks.

The hardships to which people are exposed in the far north give frequent occasion for the display of heroism. In the pages of "Trailing and Camping in Alaska" Mr. Addison M. Powell tells of the rescue of a woman and her husband who were stranded on the mountains in an Alaskan winter.

A dog team galloped up and stopped in front of the only pretense of a hotel in Valdez. The night was dark, as the northern winter nights always are when the moon is not shining. The dogs immediately lay down, almost exhausted from their long trip, and the two men were soon surrounded by inquiring friends. One of the two said:

"What do you think, fellows? We passed a woman just this side of Sawmill Camp. She was pulling a sled, on which was her sick husband. We remonstrated against her crossing the glacier, but she replied that they might as well die up there as anywhere else, as it meant certain death to stop. Our dogs could pull only our [illegible] and there wasn't grub enough for all, so we were compelled to leave them. They will be at the last timber tonight, and if somebody doesn't go to their rescue they will be dead by this time tomorrow."

A man stepped out from the crowd and said:

"I'll go for one. Now, who else has a good dog team to splice in with mine?"

"I'm your man!" answered another.

It was 8 o'clock in the morning before they had made their selection of dogs and were ready to start on that hazardous trip.

"We'll be on the first bench by daylight and have them here before midnight," said one as he straightened out the team for the sixty mile run.

"Yes, boys! Stand in there, Leader! Mush, mush on, mush!" And with a yelp the dogs galloped away as if aware of the urgency of their mission.

"Haw, Leader!" we heard as they turned the corner, and then they were gone. "There goes the best dog team in Alaska and driven by two of the best men on earth!" exclaimed a man as he re-entered the house.

The trail was easily followed, and soon the nine miles of level bench were passed. The speed slackened only when they were ascending the ridge, which they crossed by 11 that morning, and there it was seen that the sharp peaks were curling fine snow high in the air.

"They are beginning to smoke!" exclaimed one of the men.

"Yes; we must get back before night or it's all off," replied the other.

Down, down, the steep descent they plunged, and by 1 o'clock they were off the glacier and skipping over level ground. In a short time they discovered the unfortunate couple whom they had started out to rescue, and when they came up to them it was a pitiable scene that presented itself.

The poor woman had become completely exhausted and had thrown herself down beside her helpless husband. She had evidently abandoned all hope and was weeping bitterly when she suddenly heard the yell of a driver and the barking of dogs. In a moment she passed from despair to hope as the team galloped in a circle and stopped beside her with the dogs' heads pointed back toward the glacier. She clapped her hands with joy.

The dogs lay down and with their lolling tongues lapped the snow, while the drivers ate some crackers and jokingly encouraged the sick man and the tired woman. They bade her seat herself comfortably while they fastened the two sleds together. Soon they were bounding away again at the dogs' first speed.

When they recrossed the summit the whole range was "smoking," and the wind was sending the fine snow along the crust. It whipped their faces with a warning of what was coming, but the driver said:

"Twenty miles to town, and it can never catch us!"

In Valdez every one was anxiously watching the trail. Many exclaimed, "They can't possibly be here before midnight!" but they were. As they rushed up to the crowd with a yell and a chorus of barks from the noble dogs they were met by eager, helping hands. The dogs acted as if they had understood why they were being petted, and again the woman wept for joy.

The Contingent Fee.

The following pointed note was written by Daniel Webster in answer to a request that he take a certain case for a contingent fee: "I do not desire employment in professional matters, although I do sometimes engage in them. But I never engage on contingencies merely, for that would make me a mere party to a lawsuit."

The Cost of Living

IS A PROBLEM that affects, in a greater or less degree, every member of the community. It presses hard on some, and on a few its effect is a negligible quantity

THE enterprising merchant is thoroughly alive to the fact that the high cost of living is in many ways an oppressive burden. He knows that the margin between income and expenditure is often a very narrow one. He buys newspaper space to let people know that he knows. In short, he advertises.

The merchant who advertises has something worth while to tell. That stands to reason, don't it, because newspaper space costs money? It will pay you, therefore, to watch carefully the announcements of the stores that advertise. You'll find all the good stores advertising in

The Daily Review

THE persistent reader of newspaper advertisements has discovered the best way to combat the high cost of living. His dollar has a greater buying power than that of the non-reader—or spasmodic reader—of ads because he employs it with more knowledge and more discrimination. It is an easy matter to cut down your living expenses by fifteen, twenty or twenty-five per cent.—and even more—by being a careful student of the daily store ads. In this way you will get "wise" to the values. You will ask for the advertised article at the advertised price and you will know before you go shopping what you are going to pay.

ONCOMING PETES MAKE GAIN AT EXPENSE OF THE LOWLY BRANTS

Rowanites Had Three Triples In a Row and Sterling Fanned 12 Men--Score 4-2

The lowly Brants dropped one to the Petes at the ball lot yesterday, the score being 4—2. All the counting was accomplished in the first four innings. As for the remainder of the game both box artists developed great form and there wasn't anything that looked like a home trip.

The feature of the play was three successive triples in second by Byrne, Thompson and Sterling, the result being two runs. A close second was the "strucking" of Bob Sterling, who fanned an even dozen. Sterling retired the side on strikes on two occasions and in the eighth the visitors trio failed to register even a foul.

Umpire Evans appeared on the scene and wasn't bad, outside of his nonsensical manner of calling "struck" when a strike was recorded.

FIRST INNNIGS.

Burrill flied out to Thompson, who also took a high liner from Wagner. Chap failed to hold the throw off Kane's grounder, and the runner made second when Chap got mixed up in another peg from Sterling. Ivers walked, but Thompson threw out Slemin.

For the Petes, Brant was hit. Ivers fielded a sacrifice by Chap and got him at first. On the attempted double play Cassavant failed to touch Brant and he was safe. He scored on Trout's single across second stealing. One run.

SECOND INNINGS.

Tesch fanned. Cassavant singled into left and Lamond was thrown out by Brant. Sterling made a nice stop and got Gero at first.

Swartz fanned; Kane took a fly from McNeal. Byrne got a triple when the ball was lost in the corner bush. Thompson dropped a second triple in right, scoring Byrne. Sterling tripled to centre, scoring Thompson. Ivers took Brant's fly. Two runs.

THIRD INNINGS.

Wagner doubled to left and scored on Kane's single to right. Ivers flied to Hilliard. Kane stole second in vain as Slemin flied out to Hilliard. One run.

Chap, who was hit, was sacrificed by Trout. Hilliard fanned, but Sawrtz singled to right, scoring Chap and taking second himself. Tesch pulled down a hard one and nipped McNeal at the bag. One run.

FOURTH INNINGS.

Tesch walked, Cassavant fanned and Lamond doubled to the barn, scoring Tesch. Gero fanned and Burrill flied to Trout.—One run.

Byrne grounded out; Thompson walked and stole second. An infield hit by Sterling sent him to third, but he was out at the plate on Brant's tap to the pitcher. Chap flew out.

FIFTH INNINGS.

Sterling fanned Wagner, Kane and Ivers.

Gero was also pitching, as he struck out Trout and Hilliard. Swartz grounded.

SIXTH INNINGS.

Brant made a running throw and got Slemin. Tesch struck out; Cassavant was passed and he stole second. Byrne threw out Lamond.

McNeal grounded out; Byrne doubled and Thompson fanned. The pitcher threw out Sterling.

SEVENTH INNINGS.

Gero drew a single; Burrill fanned and Byrne took Wagner's fly. Hilliard copped a fly from Kane.

Brant grounded; Chapdelaine fanned and Trout was thrown out by Tesch.

EIGHTH INNINGS.

Again, Sterling fanned the side. This time not even a foul was made. Hilliard grounded; Swartz flied to Lamond and McNeal was an easy out.

NINTH INNINGS.

Coose, batting for Cassavant, fanned like the others. Lamond flew to Trout, but he dropped another from Gero. Burrill flew to Hilliard.

GOOD LOOKING PETES

(Hamilton Spectator.)

The league president has been in the majority of the league towns already this season, and on each trip takes care to size up all likely material. He thinks a great deal of Hilliard, the Peterborough outfielder, and of Dunlop, the London shortstop. In addition to Heck and Donohue, Fitzgerald is also watching Cresswell, the Peterborough twirler, very closely. Cresswell is but seventeen years of age, and the league president is of the opinion that he will show great improvement before the end of the season.

OLD BRISTOL REVIVES.

Ancient Port, Whence Sailed Cabots, Coming Again Into Its Own.

To the old port of Bristol, Eng., whence sailed the discoverers of old, is turning the commerce of the new world which they found. For years since the application of steam to ocean navigation, the ancient port had fallen into disuse until its merchants and seafaring people awoke, built docks to accommodate the big liners and now this most handy port of all England is receiving its tribute of wheat from the Canadian northwest.

It was from the ancient port of Bristol that John and Sebastian Cabot sailed on those voyages of discovery that gave to Britain so great a claim on the newly-discovered continent of Columbus. It was to the port of Bristol that the eighteenth century sugar and rum and spices of the West Indies came.

For Bristol is passing old. It was old even when the Cabots sailed. It was there when the shepherds found the Babe in the manger at Bethlehem. It was Bristol's wealth of commerce that invited the Spanish armada, whose defeat started Britain's great prestige at sea. Bristol's greatest prosperity came in the century and a half following the defeat of the armada, when the trade of the known world centered at its ancient wharves.

Grown rich and fat with the trade of continents, the merchants of Bristol became contemptuous of the advances of navigation. Strange stories began to filter in of ports to the north, up to Clyde and Mersey and on the Thames that had begun to send out ships that were run by queer, black engines down in the holds. Bristol had grown wealthy beneath the spread of canvas of her proud ships, which nosed their way through the seven seas. The four winds of heaven brought power to this port on the Severn. The new ships were a passing fancy of a maddened brain; stick to your sailing vessels; they were good enough for our fathers; they are good enough for us, counsel the rich merchants of Bristol.

From that day old Bristol began to decay. The ports to the north built wharves suited to the steamships. They had comprehended the part the new ships were to play. When the modern steamship arrived it found Bristol's estuary too shallow, the docks inadequate. From Bristol's hand passed the sceptre of England's sea power. The Thames, the Clyde, the Mersey took from the Severn the iron ships of modern commerce; Bristol languished; along her wharves grew the grass.

Came a day when Bristol awoke. A new land, the wheat field of the world was breaking on the vision in the Canadian northwest. Wharves began to expand; the estuary of the Severn took new depth; Canadian steamers began to make the port. Bristol always had the advantage of being England's westernmost port. Hundreds of miles of sea are saved from this port to Montreal or Quebec. Its distance from the marts of London is but little more than 100 miles; Liverpool is more than 200. Four or five days suffice for the ocean voyage and one lands at the door of the most picturesque part of England. The streets one treads in Bristol have known the foot of Roman, Saxon, Norman and Dane. Past its time-marked buildings strode the navigators famed when the world was young. More than one King has been in this old sea town. St. Mary's, called by many the most beautiful church of all England, is there. Bristol's cathedral had its origin back in 1142 in the Monastery of St. Augustine, which was 300 years old when Columbus set sail. Hard by is Bath, famed in song and story as the health resort of old England's wealth and aristocracy.

Revivifying this old city is the commerce of to-day, putting new vigor into the arteries that once throbbed with the best English life blood.

Change For Cat.

Sometime ago an old man revisiting London after forty years in Australia was asked what appeared to him most strange in his walks about town. He said it was the change in the public attitude toward the cat. In his young days if a cat appeared in the street it was a signal to throw stones at it or shout at it or set a dog on it; in any case to rouse a hostile demonstration, and the cat had to gallop for its life. Now he saw them sitting undisturbed on doorsteps and corners all over the town.

The Green Hat

A Color Scheme

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Joyce Whittier looked very pale and severe as Morgan helped her out of his motorcar at the entrance to the fair grounds. Her white gloved hand barely touched his, and she withdrew it from his attempted clasp with a gentle insistency.

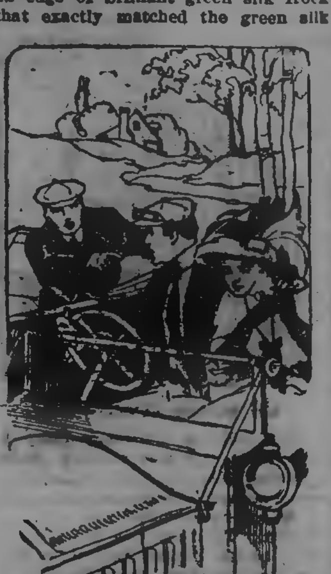
"I know you're angry, Joyce, darling," said Morgan as they walked into the grounds, "but you can't blame a fellow after all."

"It's the fashion," said Joyce haughtily.

"One needn't be a slave to the fashion, not when fashion decrees that girls shall wear purple hats and green sweaters and yellow shoes!"

"I'm not wearing that horrible combination of colors," was his sweetheart's reply.

Morgan Hall looked down at her white serge coat, below which peeped an edge of brilliant green silk frock that exactly matched the green silk stockings showing above the low white shoes, and then up at the brilliant green felt hat that topped Joyce's golden hair.



"TAKE YOUR ARM AWAY," COMMANDED MORGAN.

"It may be all right for some girls to wear, but I don't want you to look like a parrot, dear," he said clumsily.

"Oh, a parrot!" exclaimed Joyce, growing pinker. "Why not a cockatoo or something equally offensive?"

"You could never be offensive, Joyce," returned Morgan patiently, "but it's hardly in good taste, is it?"

"Why not?"

Joyce glanced at Morgan's attire from trim fitting gray clothes to pale lavender shirt, violet necktie and lavender silk socks. "I suppose a lavender color scheme would be in better taste," she observed dryly.

Morgan reddened slightly. "Lavender is not such a loud color, Joyce," he remonstrated. "I don't mind the other things so much, and the white coat is great, but that green hat is awful!"

"It's a dear!" retorted Joyce obstinately.

"It's a monstrosity," said Morgan contemptuously.

"Then, I will spare you the humiliation of being seen in its company," flared Joyce, and away she went across the open space of ground to where she saw her sister Agatha and a group of friends entering the stock inclosure.

"If it had been any other color save green," groaned Morgan as he wandered aimlessly around. Deprived of Joyce's company, even in the green hat, the day was spoiled for him. As a rule, the clothes of womankind played little part in his scheme of the importance of things, but always from a child he had hated the brilliant green that now was fashionable, and the color seemed to jar upon his senses and rendered him nervous and irritable in consequence. If he had been near Joyce now he might have heard his college chum, Jim Waite, discoursing to Miss Whittier upon that same subject.

"Funny thing about green, Miss Whittier," Waite was saying chattily; "my classmate, Morg Hall. You know him, don't you?"

Joyce nodded, and the big diamond on her left hand winked knowingly inside the white glove.

"Well, Morg's a chap that never had any nerves—so we always said—but there was one thing that could almost drive him crazy, and that was to flourish a bit of bright green in front of him. I used to wear a green necktie sometimes just to josh him, you know, but when I found it really made him irritable and cranky without his knowing exactly why I just dropped the matter."

Joyce said never a word, and from that moment she was very quiet.

Morgan Hall had become tired of wandering around alone, and he felt too irritable to seek Joyce after her desertion of him, yet he felt a vague jealousy of her. Occasionally he saw her green hat among the other blossoms of the millinery bouquet, and each time he glimpsed it his anger arose and his jealousy took actual form.

He was debating whether he should seek her out and demand an explanation of her desertion when he saw her crossing a distant space with a man. Morgan Hall followed them, noting every graceful curve of Joyce's form and the soft sweep of the white veil away from her green hat. The man was Jim Waite, and he was as handsome as a man ought to be, and he was looking down at Joyce Whittier with a manner that no other man should enjoy save Morgan Hall.

Morgan stared after them resentfully until they reached the entrance and climbed into Waite's big red automobile and shot away. He was after them in an instant, piling into his own car, sending the scared chauffeur out in a jiffy, and presently became but a dark blot on the white road while the astonished chauffeur swore bitterly.

The red car was out of sight by the time Morgan had reached the first turn in the road, and he did not see it until he had scorched the road for ten miles and had felt the patter of a constable's bullet on the body of his car. Then he slowed down and kept the red car in sight.

He could see Jim Waite's white felt hat side by side with Joyce's bright green one, and he could observe that the hats were in too close proximity for his own comfort.

Morgan felt a cold rage stealing over him. There was something malignant about that staring green hat of Joyce's, something that taunted him and scorned him at the same time. He would not permit it another instant, and he gave fair warning by sounding his horn defiantly and putting on all speed.

Jim Waite glanced around and then the red car leaped forward and led the chase.

The pursuer could see that Joyce, under the green hat, was frightened and that Jim Waite had one arm around her even as he managed his car with the other.

The dark car was a swift one, however, and little by little it overtook the red one until at last they were racing side by side along a lonely road, Morgan's white, strained face bent forward to peer into Waite's car.

"What do you want, Morg?" demanded Jim hoarsely. "Are you crazy?"

"I want you to stop!" shouted Morgan excitedly.

"What for?"

"I'll tell you later what for."

Jim Waite spoke to the girl, and she, with her face turned toward him and glancing at Morgan's pale, excited one, gave assent, and the red car stopped slowly until the two panted side by side.

"Well?" demanded Jim angrily.

"Take your arm away!" commanded Morgan.

"You go to the dickens!" was Waite's reply.

"Joyce," exclaimed Morgan, "I would like to speak to you, please!"

"'Joyce?'" repeated Jim Waite contemptuously. "What's the matter with you, Morg? Are you drunk or crazy?"

Morgan did not answer. He was staring aghast at the face of the girl under the green hat. It was not Joyce Whittier at all. It was her cousin, Belle Drake, and she was wearing a costume identical with that Joyce had worn—green gown, hat and all.

"I thought it was Joyce's green hat," said Morgan dully. "I am very sorry. I'm afraid I've acted like a fool."

Jim Waite thought rapidly. He whispered a word to the girl, and she tossed the green hat under the seat and smiled at Morgan with a charming pout.

"Morgan, you old goose, Joyce never had a green hat. She loathes green, and it's all my fault that she wore it today. The whole green color scheme is mine. Jimmy likes it, don't you, dear?" she asked of that happy young man.

Waite nodded blissfully.

"I went into Joyce's room this morning and saw her things all laid out—all white and too cute for anything—even a little white hat. So I just appropriated everything except the coat, for I have one of my own, and left my green clothes for her to wear, just for a joke, you know."

"It's a great joke on me," observed Morgan with a sickly smile.

"On me, too," admitted Belle pathetically, "for Joyce found me at the fair and scolded me dreadfully and made me go to the dressing room and change into my own garments, and she has now got her own. There!"

Morgan was turning his car carefully about.

"I suppose we may go on," remarked Jim Waite meekly.

"Yes, old man. I'm sorry it happened. If the blessing of a fool can do you any good you have it, my children!"

Morgan flashed a backward smile as he tore back along the road to the fair grounds.

Once more he entered the gate and looked for Joyce Whittier. "I don't know what to say to her," he muttered. "I might have known she wouldn't get herself up like that without a reason. In this lavender business I feel like an Italian villa. It's all a matter of comparison, I suppose."

Just then he saw Joyce, all in white, looking like a bride. Even her sweet face was quite pale. A color came into her cheeks when she saw him. They met in a secluded corner, and he took her unresisting hands in his.

"I have seen Belle and her green hat," he said rather unsteadily, "and I might have known, darling, that it wasn't you! You—you—look like a bride. Joyce, after all my criticism, beside your white costume I feel as gay as a mountebank."

"I don't know how you feel," whispered Joyce, "but you look perfectly dear!"

The Black Cat at Sea.

About twenty years ago, when I was living in north China, the British squadron, then in far eastern waters, was steaming out of the port of Chefoo when a little black cat fell overboard from H. M. S. Wanderer. At once the ship stopped, signaled to its consorts "Cat Overboard," and the entire squadron came to a standstill. A boat put off from the Wanderer and rescued puss, who was swimming for dear life after the ship. The officers who told me the story said the sailors would have been furious if the little cat had not been saved, for not only was she a great pet, but they firmly believed disaster would follow if a black cat was allowed to drown.—London Mail.

Quite Eligible.

Alfred Noyes, the English poet who, alone among the entire poet tribe, makes a living out of poetry, said at a dinner recently:

"I wish it to be understood that my poems are not putting me in the millionaire class.

"While my poems afford me a competence, I am still hit hard by the story of Mrs. Blanco.

"'Who is that young man who is paying you such marked attention?' Mrs. Blanco, a society leader, asked her daughter.

"'He is a poet, mother,' the young girl replied.

"'Gracious!' cried the mother. 'And can you, a millionaire's daughter, seriously contemplate throwing yourself away on a starving poet?'

"'Oh,' said the young girl, 'you don't understand. He isn't an ordinary poet. He writes poetical advertisements.'

"'My darling,' said the mother, 'call him up at once. I'll ask him to our week-end house party'."

BY-LAW TO SAFEGUARD THE PUBLIC HEALTH IS PASSED

But Ald. Green is Not Satisfied and Will Move at the Next Meeting That One Clause be Struck Out

A by-law with the object of safeguarding the public health was passed by Council last night.

THE BY-LAW.

The by-law provides that the owners of land on which privies, privy vaults, wells or cesspools are situated and are in the opinion of the Health Officer dangerous to health, shall within one month after notice close or fill up the same.

All water closets and sinks in any building abutting on a street on which a sewer is laid shall be drained into the sewer within one months notice.

Default on the part of the person required to carry out these provisions will result in the work being done by the city and the cost recovered by the municipality.

A conviction of a breach of the by-law, makes the defendant liable to a fine of $50 and costs or six months in jail.

THE DISCUSSION.

Ald Green objected to the first clause as he held that such a law should not become operative, when water or sewer service was not possible. Later when in order, Ald. Green gave notice that at the next Council meeting he would move that the first clause be struck out of the by-law.

It was pointed out, however, that the Medical Health Officer already had power from the Provincial Board of Health to close up such places, in his opinion, they menaced the public health.

Ald Buller believed that the M.H.O. would use good judgment in any movements he might make and other members were of the same opinion.

Ald, Langford thought it would be a hardship on the poor people, who would have to face increased rents due to the fact of the owners installing sewer connections.

Ald Buller answered that the trouble was not with the poor people, but with the rich.

It was suggested that the M.H.O. before taking final action, might ask for ratification of such action by the Board of Health.

INSPECTOR FINDS BEEF AFFECTED BY TUBERCULOSIS

He Saw Butcher Dressing Beef That Was Full of Tuberculosis Germs—Municipal Abattoir the Remedy Says Dr. McPherson.

At the Board of Health meeting this morning, a discussion was brought up by Sanitary Inspector Spence in regard to the condition of some of the meat that the local butchers are selling.

"One instance," said the Sanitary Inspector, "was the other day when I happened to come upon a butcher in the act of fixing up a beef that was absolutely full of tuberculosis germs. This butcher also has a reputation of being an unscrupulous man and has been known to have bought cattle suffering from tuberculosis."

Dr. Young—"Don't spare a man like that, but get after him."

But Sanitary Inspector Spence finds it rather difficult to seize the meat. The slaughter house is outside the city limits and he has not the authority to seize meat before it is placed on the market.

"Why can't we get the Provincial Health Officer to give the inspector authority to get after these unscrupulous men who are poisoning the public with rotten meat," remarked Dr. Young. "We are here to protect the health of the public."

"We don't want to seize their meat but we want to protect the people," continued the doctor.

Dr. McPherson—"We have no power to seize the meat, and that is where we are up against it. The only thing we can do is to get a municipal abattoir."

Mr. Spence—"I've known of several herds being sold that were suffering from tubercular trouble."

Dr. McPherson—"About 60 per cent. of the cattle are tubercular and we must try and secure a municipal abattoir."

The discussion will be continued at the next meeting of the Board.

WEDDING BELLS

VETERELLA—LOUSIE.

A very pretty Italian wedding was solemnized this morning at the Church of the Sacred Heart, when Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., united in the holy bonds of matrimony, Guiseppe Veterella and Giovanna Louise.

The bride was charmingly gowned in white silk and wore a bridal veil. She was assisted by Miss Carmella Louise, and Mr. Domenica Memmo attended the groom.

After the ceremony the happy couple and a few friends assembled in the home of the groom and partook of luncheon.

Mr. and Mrs. Veterella will reside in North Monaghan.

WITH THE BOYS AT SANDY POINT

Good Times Continue—Mosquitoes Are Scarce

With ideal weather the "Y" camp at Sandy Point still continues to be a huge success. With something new every day, the boys are enjoying themselves better than they have at any time in the history of "Y" camps. Each day brings forth a new feature from the wise old head of the camp known as J. J. Thompson. The ball series are pulled off every day and the race for the pennant is waxing hot. Hykes to Burleigh Falls and other places of note are also a daily pastime; One of the interesting features of last week's doings was the St. James Sunday school excursion to Sandy Point, when among the excursionists the boys found a number of their friends, who took the opportunity to visit the camp.

On Saturday night the boys were treated to a motor boat ride around the lake by Mr. Stubbs. A few of the senior boys also came up for the week end.

Mosquitoes are scarce and there is much joy.

COMPLAINT TO RECEIVE ATTENTION

Cesspool at Isolation Hospital, a Menace to Health

"I think a tile drain pipe from the cesspool will be satisfactory," said Dr. Young, chairman of the Board, of Health, this morning in connection a letter received from Bennet and Goodwill on behalf of their client, Mr. Higgins, 1043 Water street, who claims that the cesspool at the Isolation Hospital is a nuisance and a grave menace to the health of the family. The cesspool is also a breeding place for flies. The Board were given a week to attend to the matter. Unless the affair is fixed up, Mr. Higgins will claim damages.

Dr. McPherson—"I saw the city engineer about the matter some time ago, and he thought it would have been better to run the pipes and cesspool to the south-west."

Dr. Young thought if a drain pipe from the cesspool was built for this season, under the supervision of the city engineer, the matter would be found satisfactory.

Dr. Young's suggestion was accepted and Bennet and Goodwill will be advised.

Dr. McPherson said a septic tank would be far more satisfactory and give better service if it could be built.

PAVILION AT THE NEW WHARF

New Structure Will be 40 feet by 22 feet.

The erection of a pavilion has commenced on the new wharf on George street. Up to the present there has been no protection against the rain or sun, and this has proven a great inconvenience. This new building will be adapted particularly for a waiting room. The pavilion will be 40 feet x 22 feet, and will be one story high with a cottage roof. The sides will be closed and the building will be lighted by several large windows.

This building is erected directly in front of the cement steps that lead from the road to the wharf, and as it is to be a handsome structure it will no doubt be a big asset to the wharf and to the city in general.

MRS. WILLIAM CUMMING STORY.

Mrs. William Cumming Story of New York city was recently elected president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution on the third ballot after a turbulent and prolonged contest. The vote was 600 for Mrs. Story to 440 for Mrs. John Miller Horton, the administration candidate. The result, which was reached after three days' balloting in a triangular fight, was received with tremendous applause by the delegates and visitors.

The election resulted in a partial victory for the old administration, as more than half of the general officers and all of the new vice presidents general are known as supporters of Mrs. Scott, the retiring president. The latter was elected honorary president general, an honor only held by five former presiding officers of the society.

The new president has taken a prominent part in the affairs of the Daughters of the American Revolution for ten years. She was elected regent of the New York state chapter on April 22, 1908, after a factional struggle. In 1909 and again in 1911 she made an unsuccessful run for the president general. Mrs. Story formerly was president of the Federation of Women's Clubs. She will live at the national capital.

NEW SASHES.

Those For Little Girls Designed Like Those For Their Elders.

Looped over sashes or girdles such as have been placed on women's gowns are appearing on childish models.

A coral pink satin frock for a little girl's wear as bridesmaid has one of these sashes with a looped over end falling at one side of the front, the sash end being weighted with crystal fringe.

There are crystal buttons down one side of the bodice, and the costume is finished with a deep collar and cuffs of shadow lace.

Another new sash arrangement has two bows of short loops set at either side of the back. These bows are exactly alike, and the arrangement is called the twin sash. It is especially liked with frocks of sheer lawn and embroidery or voile and embroidery, for fine cotton voile is much used for little girls' dresses now in combination with handsome machine embroidered banding or narrow insertions of cluny lace or Irish crochet lace.

Portrait Party.

Get common wrapping paper, a light brown or white, and cut into squares a foot and a half each way. Put up a sheet across a door and have the light from a lamp arranged so that the shadow of a person's head will be reflected on the square of paper.

A guest is to be placed sideways so that the outline of the face will show on the paper. With a heavy pencil or a crayon draw the outline or profile. One guest at a time is brought into the gallery, and the name is put on the back of the portrait.

When all have been taken an assistant helps cut out the silhouettes, which are pasted on black paper and pinned up like a portrait exhibition. The guests are provided with pencils and paper and write down who they think is who. A prize is provided for the one who guesses the most correctly, and, if the hostess wishes, a consolation prize may be awarded.

WATER SERVICE $1200 FOR G.T.R.

Commissioners Increase the Rate From $800

At the Water Commissioners' meeting yesterday afternoon, the Board were awaited upon by Mr. Donnelly, of the G.T.R. in regard to the supply of water for the locomotives and station purposes. At present, and since 1894, the Water Commissioners have been supplying the G.T.R. with water at $800 per year, and the above contract expires at the end of August.

The Board have reached a conclusion that $800 per annum is not sufficient, so therefore they increased the amount to $1,200.

Mr. Donnelly was present at the meeting for the purpose of getting a report of the matter. A reply will be forwarded as soon as possible.

The new notice for the watering of lawns, etc., reads as follows:

"Water for outside purposes must not be used except from 5 to 9 o' a.m., and 4 to 9 p.m. Prosecution will follow upon the enforcement of the above law.

FORMAL DECLARATION OF WAR MADE IN THE BALKANS

Official Greek Despatches Claim an Important Victory in the Destruction of of an Entire Bulgarian Divison

LONDON, July 9.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Balkan war having now been regularized by formal declarations, it is understood that the powers will make no attempt to mediate. The official Gazette at Belgrade published last night notice of a formal declaration of war against Bulgaria.

Military news was lacking yesterday. Servian despatches admit that a strong Bulgarian column has invaded Servia at Konagevatz, which town they occupied after setting fire to the adjacent villages. Cholera has been brought to Belgrade by the wounded.

Official Greek despatches claim a great victory at Doiran, where the Bulgarians, recently reinforced, were in superior strength to the Greeks. The latter assert that a whole division of Bulgarians were completely destroyed, and that the Bulgarians fled in such a precipitate manner that they even left loaded guns behind.

This victory is considered of great importance because Doiran was the Bulgarian victualling centre, and all the provisions fell into the hands of the Greeks. It is reported from Sofia that the tenth Bulgarian division which reinforced Gen. Icanoff, was brought from the Tchatalja district. This seems to indicate compliance with the Turkish demand that the Bulgarians evacuate Turkish territory.

The Bulgarians are taking the offensive against Nish, according to announcement from Sofia.

Servians Retake Guns.

BELGRADE, July 9.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Servians have recaptured Istip after routing the Bulgarians, says an official despatch received last night. A desperate battle was fought with heavy losses, but the Servian guns previously lost were retaken.

Wives Witness Massacre.

SALONIKI, July 9.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Father Michel, superior of the French Catholic Mission at Kilkish, confirms the reports of massacres committed in that district by Bulgarian irregulars. In one instance they burned to death 700 men belonging to Kurkut by imprisoning them in a mosque, under which they exploded bombs, setting the building on fire. They had previously assembled the victims' wives and daughers around he mosque to witness the spectacle.

Even more terrible scenes were enacted at Kilkish, Planitza and Raynovo, women also being burned to death.

Father Michel asserts that in the ranks of the irregulars responsible for these atrocities were business and professional men and students from Sofia.

IN FAVOR OF STRIKE

Seventy-Five Thousand Eastern Trainmen Affected By Ballot.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Speaking for more than 75,000 employes of the eastern railroads, President A. B. Garretson of the Order of Railway Conductors, and President W. G. Lee of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, went yesterday to the engineering building, and there reported to the committee representing forty-two of the railroads that their men had voted to strike should the managers persist in the refusal to grant increased wages.

That the trainmen and conductors would vote to strike was foreseen, and that they would vote by a considerable majority was also foreseen, but when the total was announced formally it was seen that the men had voted for a strike by the overwhelming majority of 94 per cent. The railroads' answer to this announcement was a reiteration of their previous position—a positive refusal.

The conference between the railroad managers and the conductors and trainmen was stormy. It ended in the abrupt discontinuance of negotiations. Garretson and Lee finally withdrew, and issued orders for an immediate gathering in this city of all the members of all the eastern railroads. This means that 1,000 committeemen will assemble in this city on Saturday to take final action on the question to strike or not to strike. Seventy-five thousand trainmen will be involved if a strike is called.

Says Police Caused Attack.

MONTREAL, July 9.—John H. Turkey's Intended Coup.

LONDON, July 9.—The Turkish Government yesterday decided to occupy with its armed forces all the territory within the Enos-Midia line, running from the Aegean Sea to the Black Sea, which had been virtually decided upon as the future boundary line between Bulgaria and Turkey, according to a Constantinople telegram to the Exchange Telegraph Co.

IMPORTANT CONTRACTS AWARDED BY HYDRO

Generating Plant is to be Built at Once at Wardell's Falls and to the Stations at Dundas, London, St. Thomas and Prescott—Work Being Rushed on the Windsor Line

TORONTO, July 9.—Immediate development and expansion of the Hydro-electric system on a scale which will furnish a world record in electrical achievement was determined upon at an important meeting of the provincial commission yesterday. Hon Col. J. S. Hendrie and Mr. W. K. McNaught, M.P.P., were present and took definite action upon the various enterprises which have been engaging the attention of the public ownership enterprise for some months past.

Contracts were let for the work of construction and equipment at Wardell's Falls, where the Commission will undertake its initial project in the generating of its own power. Contracts were also let for the extension of the Dundas, London and St. Thomas stations, and for the construction of the Prescott transformer station. The work on all the contracts is to commence immediately.

The work of building the Windsor line is being rapidly pushed, and large gangs are now working west of Chatham, where the right-of-way has been secured. This extension will be put through as rapidly as possible and will make the Hydro service possible throughout the whole of the southwestern peninsula. A resolution was also passed by the commission declaring that "every effort should be put forth to safeguard the position taken by the commission in the public interest in regard to Chats Falls." This affects the Ottawa and extreme eastern part of the province, and evidences the determination of the commission to make its service province-wide.

The early necessity of securing a permanent home for the commission and the staff at head offices was also dealt with, and the commission recommended to the Provincial Government that the new buildings for the use of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission be located immediately to the north of the east wing of the Parliament buildings.

SYLVIA PANKHURST GOES TO PRISON FOR THREE MONTHS

Daughter of Militant Suffragette Leader Who Incited London Mobs to March on Downing Street is Offered Liberty on Finding Bonds for Good Behavior, But Refuses — Another Hunger-Striker Released

LONDON, July 9.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, daughter of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the suffragette leader, was brought up at Bow Street Police Court yesterday and found guilty of inciting people to commit disorders on June 29, when she led a mob to Downing Street to raid the official residences of the Premier and the Chancellor of the Exchequer. She was ordered by the magistrate to find sureties in $12,000 to be of good behavior for a year, or as an alternative, to go to prison for three months. Miss Pankhurst refused to find bonds and elected to go to Holloway jail, declaring that she would at once start a hunger strike, and also go without water.

Archibald Bodkin, prosecuting for the Treasury, said the authorities did not desire to punish her, but merely to prevent her making inflammatory speeches.

Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, who defended herself, harangued the people crowding the court room. She said:

"Revolt is the only way left to us. I wish what happened had been more serious, because it will have to come to something more serious. There will be rebellion, and the east will march toward the west with sticks and stones. If you drag me back to prison under the infamous 'cat and mouse act,' I shall continue to protest as long as life lasts. Very probably some of us will die, but all say it is worth it."

Militant suffragettes set fire to and caused the destruction of the country residence of Sir Wm. H. Lever, the founder of Port Sunlight and the chairman of the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine early yesterday morning, at a loss of $100,000. The mansion, called "The Bungalow," was situated at Rivington, near Horwich, Lancashire. It was not occupied by the family, but contained valuable paintings and other precious objects, all of which were consumed.

A message was left by the incendiaries stating that if Sir William had been as loyal to the suffragettes as Lancashire was to the King, who is now paying a visit to the industrial centres of the county, the fire would not have happened.

Miss Kitty Marion, a suffragette who was sentenced on July 3 to three years' penal servitude for setting fire to the stands of the Hurst Park racecourse, was released from prison last night on license. She was in a very weak condition.

When sentence was pronounced after her trial at the assizes Miss Marion said: "I shall hunger-strike and I shall refuse to leave prison under the 'cat and mouse' act. I shall insist upon staying there until dead or released a free woman."

DETECTED RETURNING LOOT.

Pickpocket, Alarmed When Theft Was Discovered—Put Money Back.

LONDON, Ont., July 9.—Ancil Dubon, convicted of picking the pocket of a man on a train was sentenced to six months. Dubon was detected by the loser of the money when he slipped the money back to the pocket again after the loss had been made known. He also offered the robbed man $15 to keep quiet about it.

Dubon's companion, C. W. Crowley, a Chicago man, was found not guilty, and after paying $75 fine for violation of the Immigration Act, is to be deported to the States.

A women in the case, a Canadian-born, who at first gave her name as Mrs. Foley, adopted a neat plan to foil the immigration officers, who had already refused to allow her to return to Chicago. Monday night in the jail here she was married to Crowley, in the expectation that he would be deported. She left yesterday with him for Chicago.

Shot Rival Four Times.

WINNIPEG, July 9.—Wm. Courtney shot and probably fatally injured Wm. Moore in a dispute over the possession of the former's children Monday night.

The trouble started when Courtney visited his wife, who, it is stated, was living with her paramour. Courtney demanded his children, aged 12 and 8, and when ejected from the premises by Moore shot Moore four times.

Ate Diseased Sheep.

AVILA, Spain, July 9.—Practically the whole population of Flores is abed, while a dozen are dead, the result of eating mutton from sheep which had anthrax. The local doctors were unable to account for the epidemic and merely advised the inhabitants as they became sick to take frequent draughts of vinegar.

It was only when the situation became grave and after the Minister of the Interior had sent doctors to Flores from Madrid that the truth came out.

Many lambs had died, but the veterinaries declared the deaths were due only to indigestion. The animals thereupon were exhumed and sold for seven cents a pound.

SEEKS DAUGHTER'S RETURN.

John Scott of Montreal Doesn't Want Her To Be Nun.

MONTREAL, July 9.—That he had retained a lawyer and had instructed him to sue St. Joseph's convent of Toronto, which institution he claims is holding his daughter, Elsie May, aged 18, was the announcement made yesterday by John Scott of this city.

The father wants the girl handed over to him and also money as compensation for her work at St. Michael's Hospital.

Mr. Scott is an old countryman, and he has told the press that his daughter, despite her assurances to him that she is under no restraint, is being forced to work for practically nothing by the hospital authorities. He further says the girl wants to become a nun and to this he will not consent.

As Miss Scott is under age, her father says that the law gives him control over her, and he wants her back in Montreal where she could assist her mother.

Both Mr. Scott and his daughter are Roman Catholics and only recently arrived in Canada.

May Recall Council.

VANCOUVER, July 9.—Steps are to be taken immediately to endeavor to have the entire municipal council of South Vancouver recalled. Serious allegations have been made against members of that body, and the probability is that the question will be carried to the courts. Extravagance and incompetency are two of the principal grounds on which 99 per cent. of the electors are making demands.

Three Killed By Storm.

ELGIN, Ills., July 9.—Three men were reported killed and property damage estimated at $50,000, was done by an electric storm here yesterday. Four stores were unroofed by the wind, the steeple of the First Baptist Church was blown down and much damage done to telephone and telegraph wires.

PROBABILITIES

Mostly fair and warm with local thunderstorms, strong northwest winds to-night. Thursday—Fine and cooler.

SMALLPOX IN THE CAMP

One Case Is Found Among Soo Cadets and Promptly Isolated.

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, July 9.—A case of smallpox was discovered in the cadets' camp yesterday afternoon among the cadets from Sault Ste. Marie. The case was isolated immediately, and quarantined, and all members of the company from the Soo were also completely isolated from the rest of the camp. There are about fifty members of the Soo company.

Such prompt measures were taken when the case was discovered that there is positively no danger of a spread of the disease, and parents need have no fear for the safety of their boys who are under canvas here. The case was discovered on the afternoon medical inspection, before the boys had been assigned to their duties, and must have developed before the lad who has the disease reached the camp ground. None of the other cadets in camp can possibly come in contact with the boys from the Soo.

No intereference will be made with the daily routine of the camp, which was conducted yesterday as it will be every day.

The general health of the camp is good, and the weather so far has been propitious.

HEAVY LOSSES

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, July 9.—Reports of the evacuation of Kotchana and Istip by General Kovatcheff's Bulgarian army is confirmed in Sofia, according to a despatch to the Times which estimates losses on both sides at thirty thousand killed and wounded. On high authority the total casualities on all sides since was was resumed is fully fiffty thousand.

TRIAL COST $125,000.

Scott Will Case Takes Big Slice Out of the Estate.

LONDON, July 9.—The costs in the Scott will suit probably will reach $125,000, to be paid out of the residuary estate. Lady Sackville is lying ill at her London residence, unable to see her numberless callers, while an avalanche of congratulatory telegrams and letters has descended on her.

She declares she will keep intact the pictures, furniture and other art objects, valued at $1,750,000, and bequeathed to her by Sir John Scott, and will apply the interest of $750,000 cash she also receives to their upkeep at Knole. The Knole collection is worth $10,000,000, and she claims to have refused princely offers from the late J. Pierpont Morgan and others for individual pictures.

EDMONTON FEELS PINCH.

Balkan War May Interfere With the Western City's Flotation.

EDMONTON, July 9.—The significance of the new war in the Balkans has made itself felt in Edmonton civic circles. A cablegram has been received from Kleinworths, London, who took up a $10,000,000 oil issue by the city this year, and who have already paid to the city some $5,000,000, proceeds of the debentures, drawing attention to the fact that war has been declared and the city should take proper heed of the fact. The reason for the cablegram is found in the fact that there is a war clause in the agreement with the city, regarding the sale of debentures, and under this clause the firm might seek relief from the responsibility of carrying out the terms of their contract. If the company should do this, it may be necessary for the authorities to issue treasury notes in order to raise money to carry on present construction work.

CORONER STONE OF NEW GATE-WAY TO THE LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY IS LAID

Silver Trowel is Presented to the President, W. H. Moore K. C.

W. H. MOORE, K.C.

Another milestone, in the history of the Little Lake cemetery and of the city in general, has been passed, for yesterday saw the laying of the foundation stone of the new stone fence and iron gates at the approach to the cemetery. As Mr. E. A. Peck, M.L.A., stated in the opening address, the cemetery was purchased in 1850, and has since been the scene of many such like ceremonies, and that since the area was extended, the chapel built and the caretaker's residence and office erected, perhaps this was the last important step for some years, and the directors deemed it advisable to have it in the form of ceremony. Mr. Peck also showed the difference between the local cemetery and the cemeteries in other cities. In most cities the Council owns the cemetery, and thus improvements and running expenses had to be supplied by the ratepayers. Here it is different, for directors own the cemetery an dit has not cost the city a cent. He said that the directors of the Little Lake cemetery had something like $10,000 in local securities. Mr. Peck then called upon Mr. T. A. S. Hay to present the trowel to Mr. W. H. Moore, who would lay the corner stone.

PRESENTATION OF TROWEL.

In making the presentation Mr. Hay read the following address:—

W. H. Moore, Esq., K.C., President
Little Lake Cemetery Co., Peterborough:

Dear Sir,—The other directors and officers of the Little Lake Cemetery Company desire to take advantage of the occasion of the laying of the corner stone of the new gate-way to the cemetery to recognize in a becoming way the faithful services you have given the Company for the past quarter of a century.

The cemetery in its beauty and befitting character, as a resting place for our beloved dead, has been very largely made so by the help of your efforts and advice, and now that you are about to add another feature to the dignity and completeness of the equipment of the cemetery by laying the corner stone of a new gate-way, we ask for your acceptance of this silver trowel, both for this purpose and as a tangible evidence of our appreciation of your services.

Signed on behalf of the officers and directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Company.

E. A. PECK,

Mr. Moore then took the trowel and proceeded to lay the stone. Inside was placed a tin box which contained a copy of each of the local daily papers, the Toronto Mail and Empire and Toronto Globe, also the following memorandum:

> The Board of Directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Company, on the occasion of laying this foundation stone of the new entrance gates and fences of the cemetery of Peterborough desires in the present ceremony, to commemorate this complement to the near-by grounds, consecrated, as they are, to the memory and devoted to the interment of departed relatives and friends; And it is the earnest prayer of the members of the Board that these gates and fences shall ever be preserved, and that God's Acre, just beyond, will always be maintained with that solicitude for its reverent care, and its beauty, that has animated the Board in all times past.
>
> W. H. MOORE,
> President.

Peterborough, Ont., 8th July, 1913.

A document bearing the names of the directors of the Little Lake Cemetery Company, the members of the City Council and other civic bodies, the cost of the work and by whom done, were also placed in the receptacle.

ERECTION OF GATES AND FENCES.

| | |
|---|---|
| Builders of gates and iron work of fences, Stewart Iron Works Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, cost | $741 |
| Contractors and builders of stone work, Sherwood and King, Peterborough, Ont. Cost | $1,720 |
| Total | $2,461 |
| Cost of foundation, etc. | 139 |
| | $2,600 |

Mr. Moore then retruned to the platform and gave a short address in which he traced the history of the cemetery step by step up to the present time and showed the rapid strides made.

Other addresses were given by Mayor Bradburn, Warden Garbutt and Rev. Jas. Rollins, on behalf of the Ministerial Association. The latter gave a very interesting speech on cemeteries and why they should be beautiful. He said, "It is a characteristic of christian and civilized countries to have a beautiful resting place for their dear departed friends." He also stated that nothing pleased the ministers of the city more that when they learned through the press that a new approach to the now beautiful cemetery was to be built.

Rev. H. J. Keith was then called upon to bring the ceremony to a close with the benediction.

Among those present, besides those already mentioned, were Rev. R. G. Peever, ex-Mayor Morrow, Aldermen Johnston and Gordon, City Clerk Armstrong, Fire Chief Howard and V. Eastwood.

SIX KILLED; THIRTY HURT

Flat Car With Artillerymen is Wrecked

Canadian Press Despatch.

MANILA, July 9.—Six men were killed and thirty were injured to-day when a flat car crowded with members of the Coast Artillery was wrecked near here.

Government Cruiser Arrives.

HALIFAX, July 9.—The new Canadian Government cruiser Acadia arrived from Newcastle-on-Tyne yesterday and proceeded to the dockyard. She is to be put into service almost immediately, and it was yesterday announced that she would proceed to Hudson Bay as a survey ship and will take the place of the Minto, which was to have gone northward if the Acadia had not arrived in time.

Captain Anderson of the Hudson Bay survey department, has arrived in Halifax, and will likely be a passenger to Hudson Bay.

MAKE GOOD TO BE GOOD

It has often been remarked that a much better class of emigrant is coming out from the Old Country of recent years. An emigrant used to be regarded as an object of pity. Things have moved since those days, and now, when a man hears and obeys the siren call of the West, he is followed by a chorus of congratulation, and is rather an object of envy than commiseration.

Canada is always ready to welcome Britishers of every class, the plebeian and the aristocrat are all one to her. It matters not whether they travel first-class or steerage, she only imposes one condition; that they shall "make good."

This means not merely that a man must be a genius, or that he must get to the top at all moral and physical hazards. He must not only "make good" he must be good. He must take his place in the community and contribute his quota to the establishment of a rising nation.

If he shines shoes, let him shine them well, let him also polish up his character. If he preaches sermons, let him preach the whole Gospel, let him also show his people how to live up to it. If he edits a newspaper, let him—. But we might go on for ever in this way, lack of space forbids.

TACT

There is too much gratuitous advice meted out to our Governor General. Many of the Liberal journals are in the habit of commending the Duke upon his reserve and tact.

Tact is no doubt a very necessary qualification for a Governor General as for Prime Minister and everybody else in responsible positions. But why give our royal Governor the impression that we Canadians are a thin-skinned lot of people, whose infallibility must by no means be brought into question—especially by an Englishman.

It is time we gave up playing the role of "Spoilt Child" of the Empire Canada is no precocious little Tommie who will kick and upset the household if he does not get candies all the time from his mother. We have got out of our swaddling clothes long ago, and it is time we doffed the knickerbockers and played the man.

Let us welcome freely the counsel and ever the admonition of our Governor, whoever he may be, even though there be no sugar of "tact" on it.

EDITORIAL NOTES

There are a number of streets in the south of the city that are thirsting for city water. Who is responsible for this, the landlord or the Commissioners?

The Stars and Stripes were trampled upon and the man who waved them was rolled in the mud in the streets of Moose Jaw on Independence day. The loyal American must have enjoyed the day as much as if he had been at home.

The "Saturday Night" says that "the land-boomer is a parasite who lives on endeavors of others." He is not the only parasite.

Everyone will regret the disappearance of the "Montreal Witness." It has held a high place in Canadian journalism and has been respected by all parties for its purity and its conscienousness. It has died of orthodoxy. We are all heretics in these days. But we trust that Mr. Dougall will not disappear with his beloved journal.

The Sisterhood of the Washington Hebrew congregation has petitioned the Jewish authorities to authorize dances in the Synagogue vestibule. We would suggest they be called "Miriamites."

Ellen Terry, the famous English actress, has once more separated herself from a husband. It will be recalled that her first husband was Sir G. F. Watts, the great painter, from whom she was separated after a few months of married life. She must be a Terryble woman to live with.

The proposal to institute a police of women to fight the white slave traffic is the only Militant proposal in connection with the gentler sex that will appeal to common sense men and women—march on, to victory!

MY CREED.

To look at life, and see it plain,
And yet believe it is not vain;
To drink love's draught of vintage up
Then hold out for another cup;
To watch the years pass to their bourn,
Yet gladly hail the latest morn!
To know, though bud and bloom be brief,
There's life in every fallen leaf;
To greet new friends, though old depart,
And ne'er let age invade the heart;
To stand alone beneath the spheres
And hold that these few feverous years
Are but a part of one vast whole,
A little schooling for the soul;
Thus do I state in numbers terse
My theory of the universe!

NO PLACE FOR PARROT.

Bird's Owner Is Striving To Rescue It From a Saloon.

ALTON, Ill., July 8.—Mrs. Geneva Littlepage, colored, has applied to Justice Daniel Gorman, for a replevin writ to secure possession of a parrot to save him from the baneful influences of a saloon.

"The bird never swore once in his life, and I can't bear the thought of his learning to curse," she told the judge. "You ought to help along the cause by not charging me anything for the papers."

Mrs. Littlepage said that while coming from Kansas City to Alton she employed a porter to carry the cage, and that he ran off with the parrot. When she next heard of it the bird had been sold to J. W. Smith, a saloon keeper, for $10, and, she alleges, he refused to let her have it.

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Bradley's Health—Her Own Statement.

Winnipeg, Canada.—"Eleven years ego I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. They found that my organs were affected, and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in.

"After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper, and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 284 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can.

Why will women take chances or drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, when they can find health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, etc.

What?"

"I didn't speak. The date seemed kind of familiar to me, that's all. Seem's as if I heard it recent, but I can't remember when. Seventy-five thousand, hey? Well, that wan't so bad, was it? With that for a nest egg, no wonder Heman's managed to hatch a pretty respectable brood of dollars."

"Oh, the whole seventy-five wasn't his, of course. Half belonged to his partner. But the poor devil didn't live to enjoy it. After the articles were signed and before the money was paid over he was taken sick with a fever and died."

"Hey? He did? With a fever?"

"Yes, but he left a pretty good legacy to his heirs, didn't he? For a common sailor or second mate—I believe that's what he was—$37,500 is doing well. It must have come as a big surprise to them. The whole sum was paid to Atkins, who— What's the matter with you?"

Captain Cy was leaning back in his chair. He was as white as the tablecloth.

"Are you ill?" asked the congressman anxiously. "Take some water. Shall I call"—

The captain waved his hand.

"No, no!" he stammered. "No! I'm all right. Do you—for the Lord's sake tell me this! What was the name of this partner that died?"

Mr. Everdean looked curiously at his friend before he answered.

"Sure you're not sick?" he asked. "Well, all right. The partner's name? Why, I've heard it often enough. It's on the deed of sale that father has framed in his room at home. The old gentleman is as proud of that as anything in the house. The name was—was"—

"For God sake," cried Captain Cy, "don't say 'twas John Thayer, 'cause if you do I shan't believe it."

"That's what it was—John Thayer. How did you guess? Did you know him? I remember now that he was another down easter, like Atkins."

The captain did not answer. He clasped his forehead with both hands and leaned his elbows on the table. Everdean was plainly alarmed.

"I'm going to call a doctor," he began, rising. But Captain Cy waved him back again.

"Set still!" he ordered. "Set still, I tell you! You say the whole seventy-five thousand was paid to Heman, but that John Thayer signed the bill of sale afore he died as half partner and your dad's got the original deed and—and—he remembers the whole business?"

"Yes, he's got the deed—framed. It's on record, too, of course. Remembers? I should say he did! He'll talk for a week on that subject if you give him a chance."

The captain sprang to his feet. His chair tipped backward and fell to the floor. An obsequious waiter ran to right it, but Captain Cy paid no attention to him.

"Where's my coat?" he demanded. "Where's my coat and hat?"

"What ails you?" asked Everdean. "Are you going crazy?"

"Goin' crazy? No, no! I'm goin' to California. When's the next train?"

CHAPTER XX.

THE Hon. Heman Atkins sat in the library of his Washington home before a snapping log fire reading a letter. Mr. Atkins had, as he would have expressed it, "served his people" in congress for so many years that he had long since passed the hotel stage of living at the capital. He rented a furnished house on an eminently respectable street, and the polished doorplate bore his name in uncompromising characters.

The library furniture was solid and dignified. Its businesslike appearance impressed the stray excursionist from the Atkins district when he or she visited the great man in whose affairs we felt such a personal interest. Particularly impressive and significant were a map of the district hanging over the congressman's desk and an oil painting of the Atkins mansion at Bayport, which, with the iron dogs and urns conspicuous in its foreground, occupied the middle of the largest wall space.

The cheery fire was very comforting on a night like this, for the sleet was driving against the windowpanes, the sidewalks were ankle deep in slush, and the wet, cold wind from the Potomac was whistling down the street. Somewhere about the house an unfastened shutter slammed in the gusts. Mr. Atkins should have been extremely comfortable as he sat there by the fire. He had spent many comfortable winters in that room. But now there was a frown on his face as he read the letter in his hand. It was from Simpson and stated, among other things, that Cyrus Whittaker had been absent from Bayport for over two weeks and that no one seemed to know where he had gone. "The idea seems to be that he started for Washington," wrote Tad, "but if that is so it is queer you haven't seen him. I am suspicious that he is up to something about that harbor business. I should keep my eye peeled if I was you."

Alicia, the Atkins' hopeful, rustled into the room.

"Papa," she said, "I've come to kiss you good night."

Her father performed the ceremony in a perfunctory way.

"All right, all right," he said. "Now run along to bed and don't bother me; there's a good girl. I wish," he added testily to the housekeeper, who had followed Alicia into the room—"I wish you'd see to that loose blind. It makes me nervous. Such things as that should be attended to without specific orders from me."

The housekeeper promised to attend to the blind. She and the girl left the library. Heman reread the Simpson letter. Then he dropped it in his lap and sat thinking and twirling his eyeglasses at the end of their black cord. His thoughts seemed to be not of the pleasantest. The lines about his mouth had deepened during the last few months. He looked older.

The telephone bell rang sharply. Mr. Atkins came out of his reverie with a start, arose and walked across the room to the wall where the instrument hung. It was before the days of the convenient desk phone. He took the receiver from its hook and spoke into the transmitter.

"Hello!" he said. "Hello! Yes, yes! Stop ringing. What is it?"

The wire buzzed and purred in the storm. "Hello!" said a voice. "Hello, there! Is this Mr. Atkins' house?"

"Yes; it is. What do you want?"

"Hey? Is this where the Hon. Heman Atkins lives?"

"Yes, yes, I tell you! This is Mr. Atkins speaking. What do you want?"

"Oh! Is that you, Heman? This is Whittaker—Cy Whittaker. Understand?"

Mr. Atkins understood. Yet for an instant he did not reply. He had been thinking as he sat by the fire of certain persons and certain ugly though remote possibilities. Now, from a mysterious somewhere, one of those persons was speaking to him. The hand holding the receiver shook momentarily.

"Hello! I say, Heman, do you understand? This is Whittaker talkin'."

"I—er—understand," said the congressman slowly. "Well, sir?"

"I'm here in Washin'ton."

"I have been informed that you were in the city. Well, sir?"

"Oh, knew I was here, did you? Is that so? Who told you? Tad wrote, I suppose—hey?"

The congressman did not reply immediately. This man, whom he disliked more than any one else in the world, had an irritating faculty of putting his finger on the truth. And the flippancy in the tone was maddening. Mr. Atkins was not used to flippancy.

"I believe I am not called upon to disclose my source of information," he said, with chilling dignity. "It appears to have been trustworthy. I presume you have phoned me concerning the appropriation matter. I do not recognize your right to intrude in that affair, and I shall decline to discuss it. Yes, sir; to my people, to those who have a right to question, I am and shall always be willing to explain my position. Good night."

"What! Hello! Hold on a minute. Don't get mad, Heman. I only wanted to say just a word. You'll let me say a word, won't you?"

This was more like it. This was more nearly the tone in which Mr. Atkins was wont to be addressed. It was possible that the man, recognizing the uselessness of further opposition, desired to surrender.

"I cannot," declared the honorable, "understand why you should wish to speak with me. We have very little in common, very little, I'm thankful to say. However, I will hear you briefly. Go on."

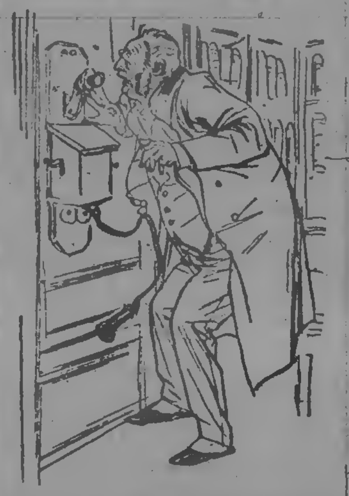
"Much obliged. Well, Heman, I only wanted to say that I thought maybe you'd better have a little talk with me. I'm here at the hotel, the Regent. You know where 'tis, I presume likely. I guess you'd better come right down and see me."

Heman gasped, actually gasped with astonishment.

"I had better come and see you? I—Well, sir—well! I am not accustomed"—

"I know, but I think you'd better. It's dirty weather, and I've got cold somehow or other. I ain't feelin' quite up to the mark, so I cal'late I'll stay in port much as I can. You come right down. I'll be in my room, and the hotel folks 'll tell you where 'tis. I'll be waitin' for you."

Mr. Atkins breathed hard. In his present frame of mind he would have liked to deliver a blast into that transmitter which would cause the person at the other end of the line to shrivel under its heat. But he was a politician of long training, and he knew that such blasts were sometimes expensive treats. It might be well to hear what his enemy had to say. But as to going to see him—that was out of the question.



THE RECEIVER FELL FROM THE CONGRESSMAN'S HAND.

"I do not," he thundered—"I do not care to continue this conversation. If—if you wish to see me, after what has taken place between us, I am willing, in spite of personal repugnance, to grant you a brief interview. My servants will admit you here at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning. But I tell you now that your interference with this appropriation matter is as useless as it is ridiculous and impudent. It is of a piece with the rest of your conduct."

"All right, Heman, all right," was the calm answer. "I don't say you've got to come. I only say I guess you'd better. I'm goin' back to Bayport tomorrer early. And if I was you I'd come and see me tonight."

"I have no wish to see you, nor do I care to talk with you further. That appropriation"—

"Maybe it ain't all appropriation."

"Then I cannot understand"—

"I know, but I understand. I've come to understand consider'ble many things in the last fortni't. There! I can't holler into this machine any longer. I've been clear out to Frisco and back in eleven days, and I got cold in those blessed sleepin' cars. I"—

The receiver fell from the congressman's hand. It was a difficult object to pick up again. Heman groped for it in a blind, strangely inadequate way. Yet he wished to recover it very much.

"Wait! Wait!" he shouted anxiously. "I—I—I dropped the— Are you there, Whittaker? Are you— Oh, yes! I didn't— Did you say—er—Frisco?"

"Yes, San Francisco, California. I've been west on a little cruise. Had an interestin' time. It's an interestin' place. Don't you think so? Well, I'm sorry you can't come. Good night."

"Wait!" faltered the great man. "I—I—let me think, Cyrus. I do not wish to seem—er—arrogant in this matter. It is not usual for me to visit my constituents, but—but—I have no engagement this evening, and you are not well, and— Hello! Are you there? Hello! Why, under the circumstances, I think— Yes, I will come. I'll come —er—at once."

The telephone enables one to procure a cab in a short time. Yet to Heman Atkins that cab was years in coming. He paced the library floor, his hand to his forehead and his brain whirling. It couldn't be! It must be a coincidence! He had been an idiot to display his agitation and surrender so weakly. And yet—and yet—

The ride through the storm to the Regent hotel gave him opportunity for more thought. But he gained little comfort from thinking. If it was a coincidence, well and good. If not—

A bellboy conducted him to the Whittaker room "on the saloon deck." It was a small room, very different from the Atkins library, and Captain Cy, in a cane seated chair, was huddled close to the steam radiator. He looked far from well.

"Evenin', Heman," he said as the congressman entered. "Pretty dirty night, ain't it? What we'd call a gray no'theaster back home. Sit down. Don't mind my not gettin' up. This heatin' arrangement feels mighty comf'table just now. If I get too far away from it I shiver my deck planks loose. Take off your things."

Mr. Atkins did not remove his overcoat. His hat he tossed on the bed. He glanced fearfully at his companion. The latter's greeting had been so casual and everyday that he took courage. And the captain looked anything but formidable as he hugged the radiator. Perhaps things were not so bad as he had feared. He resolved not to seem alarmed, at all events.

Handy Desk.

If one does not feel like buying a desk a small table covered with rep to match the wall paper will answer as a good substitute. Shelves should be placed under the table and a valance plaited around the edges to cover them. A very good piece of leather colored rep would be in good taste, and the blotter pad could be bound with real leather. It would not require a large outlay for sufficient material to make a very dainty desk.

PETES DROPPED SECOND GAME TO BRANTS AFTER TAKING LEAD OF FOUR

The Petes felt the sting of a heart-rending defeat, yesterday afternoon, when after securing what looked like a safe lead of four runs, the Brants came along and biffed their way to victory. The score was 9—4.

It was a sad blow. The Petes fell on Chubby Coose, erstwhile jinx, and sent four men across in the second, on doubles by McNeal, Byrne and Thompson, and Gaboy. Ivers' failure to hold a throw from Cassavant. The scenery was beautiful to behold, but alas the storm clouds appeared in the sixth with two men gone. Singles by Slemin, Tesch, Cassavant and Lamond and Coose's double, gave the enemy four runs and the game was tied. It would not have been so bad had they slowed up a bit, but such was not the intention as they grabbed three more in the seventh. Kane hit into right and Ivers was passed. Thompson's juggle made three on. Tesch singled into right, scoring Kane and Ivers and in the throw in, McNeal, after failing to touch Ivers, when it appeared as though he had plenty of time, threw to second to get Tesch. Umpire Evans called the runner out and then decided to allow him to retain the bag. The Petes kicked and the bags were forgotten. Slemin who had made the third bag, was wide awake and it was the easiest thing in the world for him to make the plate. In the eighth, with one down, Burrill hit over second and Wagner doubled to left. Brant took a relay throw from Swartz and threw badly to Byrne, the ball going to the fence. Wagner scored on the play.

Rube Marchant has been let out by Shaughnessy and Reilly of the Saints taken on.

Frank Dolan accepted nineteen chances at first base the other day. Some going.

Frank Shaughnessy must appear at police court in St. Thomas, as a charge of using insulting language has been made by a man against the Senators' leader.

As manager of the Berlin team, Jack White's path is not one of roses and Peterborough fans will hope to see him make good.

Manager Rowan said last night that he would likely pitch Stan Cresswell to-day.

Mullin, the old war horse of the Detroit Tigers, is reported as having been signed by Montreal.

Coose is a dangerous man at the bat all this two-bagger helped the Brants yesterday.

"You've got a long way to go yourself," sang Amby Kane, when jollied by the west side fans, about his team.

Sargent went in as hitter for Tracey, but his best was a foul fly to the first baseman.

In the sixth, the Brants hit five in a row, which is some batting rally.

Lamond wasted a double in the ninth when he cut first base.

While the Petes were protesting a decision in the sixth and McNeal strayed away from the plate, Slemin watched his chance and made home from third.

Chubby Coose held the Petes to one hit in each of five innings after they had scored four runs and he turned them away empty-handed in the eighth and ninth.

Both Thompson and Brant handled some hard grounders and got the ball to Rowan for put-outs.

Burrill's single in the eighth was his first bit in two games and yet he fanned but twice in ten trips to the plate.

Tesch plays a much better game at third base, and, by the way, Cassavant holds down the short infield in clever style.

Tracey fanned five Brants in the first four rounds and allowed but four hits.

Thi aman Hillard has a powerful throwing arm and it's a real treat to see the big fellow return the ball.

Kuntz Brewery

"Yes! Kuntz's Old German Lager is my choice. There's nothing to match that 'Old German' flavor, you know. And just watch how it sparkles when I pour it out. See the beautiful foam, too. You can't beat it. Kuntz's Old German has the class, alright. And it's put in Peacock Green bottles to prevent it from deteriorating when exposed to light. Better order a bottle yourself, old man."

BRAND NEW MIDWAY

And the Spieler Sings a New Song Down the Pike

A Brand New Midway with brand new shows is what the Canadian National offers this year to those who like to wander down the "Pike."

The removal of the cattle barns has necessitated the new midway, while the engagement of the Con. T. Kennedy Shows guarantees everything entirely new in this line of amusement.

The Kennedy Shows are a whole circus in themselves. They carry a band of fifty pieces, a wild animal show with representatives of all the denizens of the forest and jungle, a Wild West Show, illusions, curiosities, etc., etc. It will be a clean Midway. Those monstrosities that disgust have been eliminated: but there is everything to amuse and the sweet voice of the spieler to tell you all about it. It will be a monster Midway and if you are out for fun it is there for the finding.

A woman married to a "good fellow," usually has a bad time of it.

EQUIPMENT ARRIVING FOR HYDRO ELECTRIC WORK

Applications Will Be Received for Position of General Foreman

The Power Committee discussed Hydro Electric matters with Mr. R. T. Jeffery last night, when the Hydro Electric Commission was authorized to purchase those supplies reported as necessary by Mr. Jeffery. This includes wires and other equipment for the distribution system.

Already the magnetite arc lamps and the two transformers are here. The lamps represent an outlay of $5,100 and the transformers, $4,500. The cable and poles were shipped on Monday and are expected at any time. All these supplies will be insured.

The City Clerk read a letter from the Electric Power Co., stating that independent, expert valuators were preparing a valuation of the company's property in Peterborough, and the request was that the company be supplied with the statement of the valuation, made by the Hydro Commission for the city, so that the work might be facilitated. Affirmative action was not taken.

The preliminary work is proceeding very favorably, and the very near future will see operations in progress.

Applications will be received for the position of general foreman, as will be seen by an advertisement elsewhere in this issue.

It is not yet decided where the poles for street lighting will go. The base is 16 inches, and as it will be placed 2 inches from the sidewalk line, 18 inches of the pavement will be occupied. The curb may be extended and the poles placed thereon. At the present time, on account of the poles, vehicles do not drive as close to the curb as would be permissable with the poles absent.

Officer Gummell took him to the police station and this morning he was fined $5.75. In default of payment he goes to jail for fifteen days. Connors gave Tweed as his home.

THE HEALTH OFFICERS PLAN DRASTIC CAMPAIGN

Ontario Municipalities, Especially Those Located on Rivers, Are Being Closely Watched With a View to Sweeping Reforms—Suggestious Will be Forwarded and Then Local Officers Liable.

TORONTO, July 10.—Several Ontario towns now running under free and easy health regulations, and incidentally their death rates mount up annually through negligent practices, are about to be brought up short within the ensuing few weeks. The Provincial Board of Health is camping on their trail these days, and acquiring information which will later be turned into the strongest kind of leverage to demand the installation of prompt and efficient sanitary services.

This regeneration comes as the fruit of the new policy of sanitary surveying, recently instituted. Seven district representatives dividing between them the sum total of Ontario municipalities are daily journeying from place to place, and each town is subjected to the most rigid scrutiny of all matters pertaining to public health. Immediately, a complete report is forwarded to the chief officer, and in the cases of negligent or careless management, a plan of action is decided upon and the advice of the board is forwarded in regard to particular matters. To ignore this advice is to become liable to penalty.

Although no particular cases will yet be quoted by the board, it is understood that several towns throughout the province, and especially those located on rivers, have been found in a most deplorable sanitary condition. In some typhoid fever increases yearly, and the cause was very apparent to the health officer on his rounds.

The water system, condition of public building, milk supply, care of fruit and meat in the town stores, prevalence of flies and methods to guard against them, care of streets and lanes, number of people and health record, number of physicians and their faithfulness to duty, and a score of other matters are all taken note of, and filed for future reference in the department.

Some local eyesores and menaces to public health in various towns, which apparently have defied the efforts of citizens to have them removed, are now under consideration, and orders will be issued within a few days.

The department is much pleased with the success following the working out of the new scheme of district representatives.

Mrs. Shaw Says She Did Not Try To Kill Husband.

BELLEVILLE, July 10.—Before Magistrate Masson yesterday the preliminary trial of Mrs. Nelson Shaw of Point Ann on a charge of attempting to murder her husband by placing poison in his dinner pail was taken up. The accused emphatically denied she placed the poison in the pail, and swore she could not remember telling Police Officer Naphin that she did so and also intended to poison herself and her children at the same time.

Mr. Shaw swore he did up his dinner on the day in question, and after partaking sparingly of some preserves felt sick. Oil of cedar, he found out, had been placed in the preserves.

Prohibitionists Support J. McQuaker In North Grey.

TORONTO, July 10.—The political action committee of the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance met yesterday to consider the North Grey bye-election, and after discussion passed a resolution endorsing the candidate of John McQuaker, the Liberal standard bearer. In the manifesto, which was issued the committee said in part:

"We believe that the only method by which we can secure the legislative results we desire is by the election to the Legislature of representatives who are known, avowed and trustworthy supporters of the principles we advocate."

Premier To Choose Poet.

LONDON, July 10.—Premier Asquith made the announcement in the House of Commons yesterday that it was his intention to appoint a poet laureate to succeed the late Alfred Austin, whereupon an irreverant member, amid laughter, asked whether or not the Prime Minister had noticed that, whenever genius was patronized by authority, authority remained but genius fled.

Another suggestion was that the office be enlarged so as to embrace a laureateship of literature. Mr. Asquith shook his head at this suggestion.

HON. C. J. DOHERTY MAY BE CHIEF JUSTICE

Rumors at Ottawa Involve Changes in Judiciary of Canada

OTTAWA, July 10.—It is currently reported that Sir Charles Fitzpatrick will soon retire as chief justice and will be succeeded by Hon. Charles J. Doherty, Minister of Justice.

In the Cabinet reorganization to follow it is said that the Protestants of Quebec will be given representation in the Cabinet and that the representative of the English-speaking Catholics will be taken from Ontario.

The cause of Sir Charles Fitzpatrick's retirement is not definitely announced, but it is rumored that he will be appointed by the Imperial Government as one of the law lords of the judicial committee of the Privy Council as soon as the bill now going through Parliament receives the royal assent. The place carries with it a life peerage and a salary of $35,000 per annum.

HON. CHARLES J. DOHERTY.

The Asquith Government, of course, will take full responsibility for the appointment, which, it is believed, will go far to allay the dissatisfaction in Canada with many recent decisions of the Privy Council.

New York Doctor Gives Details of Friedmann's Serum.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Dr. Geo. R. Rambaur of New York City, medical director of the institute operating on the Friedmann process for the treatment of tuberculosis, announced yesterday that "the vaccine consists of a homogenous emulsion of live avirulent tuberculosis bacille in sterile distilled water. The germ was isolated several years ago from a turtle and maintained ever since by transplantation on culture media according to the usual procedure. The vaccine is administered to patients in doses of from cubic centimetres 0.0 to cubic centimetres 0.30 at intervals of from four to six weeks. Injections are made intravenously in the case of joint tuberculosis and intramuscularly in the case of lung tuberculosis."

He says: "Any physician in good standing is welcome to familiarize himself at the various laboratories where the vaccine is prepared with the details concerning the administration of the treatment that he may be able to use it personally on his own patients."

KNEW SHIP WAS DOOMED.

Owners of Sinking Vessel Insisted on Captain Sailing.

NEWCASTLE, Eng., July 10.—Foreknowledge of the fate of his ship, the Mount Oswald, which with her crew of twenty-four men was never heard of after her departure for Baltimore for Hamburg, on Feb. 19, 1912, was shown in a letter from Captain Stannard to his wife, read during the Board of Trade inquiry into the loss of the vessel, which opened here yesterday.

The Mount Oswald, a transatlantic freight steamer, belonging to Messrs. Lunn & McCoy of Newcastle, dropped the pilot she had taken on board at Baltimore in Chesapeake Bay, and Stannard sent ashore with him a farewell letter to his wife. It said:

"We have twelve feet of water in the forepeak and are not yet out of harbor. God knows whether we shall ever reach home. The sailors are now working at the pumps. I wanted the ship to be drydocked at New York, but the owners would not allow it."

She was built at Port Glasgow in 1889. Her net tonnage was 2,079, her length 330 feet, her beam 45 feet and her depth 16 feet.

Mrs. Rigby surrendered voluntarily.

She said she wanted Sir William Lever to consider whether his house was more valuable as a show place "As a beacon lighted for the King and the country to see that women were suffering an insupportable grievance."

During the past week King George and Queen Mary have been on two occasions held up on the London streets by militants with petitions for "votes for women," which were in one case flung at the head of his Majesty.

A special bodyguard has had to be provided to protect the King from actual injury.

The pier on the beach at Southport in Lancashire, and the mansion of Sir William Lever, Bart., was destroyed because the King had promised to visit there.

The authorities at Scotland Yard are said to have unearthed a plot to kidnap His Majesty and that the militants are becoming so desperate that they are planning the most daring campaign imaginable to gain their ends.

DE LESSEPS BACK.

Count and His Canadian Wife Will Live In Canada.

MONTREAL, July 10.—Count De Lesseps, whose marriage to Miss Mackenzie, daughter of Sir William Mackenzie, after she had flown with him while he was giving a spectacular exhibition in Montreal and Toronto four years ago, is to take up residence in Canada, but Canada will not acquire an aviator by the change, as the countess made it a condition of the match that the count would confine his future sports to solid ground.

Count De Lesseps, the countess and their sons, Guillaumund and Francois, arrived in Montreal yesterday by one of the father's boats.

"I have done no flying since I left Canada," said the count. "We are going to live in Canada, but have not yet decided in exactly what spot we shall make our home."

Count De Lesseps will be a figure at the opening of the Panama Canal. The old French canal had his uncle, Ferdinand De Lesseps as its chief engineer.

STANDARDIZED EQUIPMENT.

Railway Board Issues Regulations to All the Companies.

OTTAWA, July 10.—Regulations with respect to railway safety appliance standards, designed to ensure trainmen against accident in the discharge of their hazardous duties, were issued by the Railway Commission yesterday. They standardize safety appliance equipment to conform to the requirements of the U. S. Inter-State Commerce Commission. All railway companies in Canada must complete by Dec. 31, 1915, the work of reconstructing and standardizing their equipment.

Among the classes of equipment for which specifications are given are hand brakes, brake steps, running boards, sill steps, ladders, end ladder clearance, roof hand-holds, side hand-holds, horizontal end hand-holds, vertical end hand-holds, uncoupling levers and the like, the whole constituting a bulky pamphlet.

C.P.R. Appeals To Cabinet.

OTTAWA, July 10.—The C.P.R. has appealed to the Cabinet against the Railway Commissions' ruling directing that company and the C.N.R and the G.T.P. to readjust lumber tariffs from points west of the Rockies to Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The claim is that the company had no opportunity to properly answer the complaint of the Mountain Lumber Association.

CHINESE GOT ASHORE.

And Now British Sea Captain Faces Boston Law Courts.

BOSTON, Mass., July 10.—Charged with violation of the Chinese exclusion act, in that two of his crew of Chinese went ashore, Captain H. L. Lockhart Muir, commander of the British steamer Alette, which arrived here last week, was held under $1,000 bonds for the grand jury by U. S. Commissioner Hayes yesterday.

Captain Lockhart Muir appeared as his own attorney, and put forth the claim that the Chinese members of his crew were all British subjects inasmuch as their homes were in Hong Kong and Singapore, both British possessions. This claim was over-ruled by the court, however.

There was a wild time on board the Alette yesterday. The Chinese strikers made a rush on the two Boston policemen, who have been on guard since the crew mutinied Monday, and the bluecoats were forced to use their clubs.

Captain Lockhart Muir went to the British consul and reported the affair. The consul advised the captain to get out warrants for the striking sailors and to have them put in irons until the vessel shall be ready to sail.

BULGARS DRIVEN OUT, ACCORDING TO REPORTS

Results of Fighting in Doubt, But Indications Are That Servia and Greece Have Met With Successes—Bulgaria Said to Have Appealed to Powers to Intervene.

LONDON, July 10.—Out of the welter of conflicting stories from the Balkan battlefields, it is almost impossible to sift the truth. This was markedly illustrated last night, a despatch from The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Uskup, dated Tuesday night, reporting that there had been hardly any fighting in the last few days, while Belgrade despatches reported further Servian victories, the latest advices from the Servian capital asserting that all the Bulgarians who had invaded Servia had been driven back across the frontier.

There seems to be little doubt that Gen. Ivanoff's army is steadily retiring before the victorious Greeks, and it is reported that the Bulgarians have evacuated both Kavala, where the Greek fleet is operating, and Dedeagatch.

Whether there is any truth in the Vienna reports to the effect that Bulgaria has applied to the powers to arrage peace is not known, but it would appear not unlikely, since clearly things are not going well with the Bulgarians, and the outbreak of cholera at many points in the field of operations combined with the exhaustion of the armies by the fierceness of the struggle, is calculated to render some such solution welcome to the combatants. This is especially so because of the uncertainty of the policy of Roumania, which is now reported to be equally ready to attack either Servia or Bulgaria, as the occasion may demand, in order to prevent a disturbance of the Balkan equilibrium.

The problem of dealing with the dead and wounded is proving a very serious one. The nursing resources in Belgrade are woefully insufficient and all accommodations there are distressingly overtaxed. It is stated that the Servians have permitted a pause in the operations to allow of the removal of the wounded and the interment of the dead, as well as the carrying out of sanitary measures to prevent the spread of cholera.

The Greek Government has made urgent representations to the European Governments against massacres and atrocities alleged to have been committed by the Bulgarian troops and irregulars on villagers at Bogdanza, Nigrita, Guevgheli and elsewhere, in violation of the international laws of war. This appeal declares that in the event of defenceless Greek populations being left to their fate, Greece will be obliged to take rigorous measures to put an end to Bulgarian atrocities.

A Greek official statement asserts that instead of 30,000, as alleged by Bulgaria, Gen. Ivanoff's army consisted of 120,000 men.

Servian Attacks Repulsed.

SOFIA, July 10.—Semi-official reports yesterday report the Bulgarians as successful throughout the fighting lines. All the Servian attacks from Sutantepe to Ptataritza, according to these reports, were repulsed, the Servians suffering enormous losses and retreating in the direction of Egri Palanka, pursued by the Bulgarians.

A battle is in progress near Kotchana and the Servians are retiring. The Greek attacks north of Doiran have been repulsed with great loss, and on the right bank of the River Struma the Greeks are operating weakly.

Dark Atrocities By Bulgars.

LONDON, July 10.—A correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, who arrived at Nigrita Saturday morning, describes the town as a reeking heap of smoldering ruins, and confirms the reports of wholesale murders and burning committed by the Bulgarians in all the villages around, as well as Nigrita. He estimates that 1,500 persons have been killed in this manner.

The correspondent declares that these atrocities have imbued the Greek soldiers with a frenzied rage and desire to be revenged on the Bulgarians, which carries them to victories against any odds.

"LONDON NEWS" FORECASTS OPERATIONS OF HOME RULE BILL IN IRELAND

JOHN REDMOND FOR PREMIER

LONDON, July 10.—The hope is expressed by The News, a supporter of the Liberal administration, that the Duke of Connaught may be Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, when the home rule bill becomes law.

In a forecast of the procedure as regards the situation of home rule, The News also says:

"On the act of becoming operative, it is understood the King will be advised to send for John Redmond, who will be asked to form a Government. On the final passage of the bill, Irish privy councillorships will be conferred on Messrs. Redmond and Dillon and their leading colleagues. In due course, Mr. Redmond will retire from the active leadership of the Nationalists in the House of Commons, and will doubtless be succeeded by T. P. O'Connor."

The News adds that Redmond's policy will be conservative and "will respect the susceptibilities and pay due honor to the high character of the Protestant counties."

A fresh Unionist attack to place a further obstacle in the way of enactment of the home rule bill for Ireland was announced by the Marquis of Lansdowne, leader of the Unionist party in the House of Lords, in that chamber yesterday afternoon.

When the bill is submitted to the House of Lords for the second time on Monday, Lord Lansdowne will move "that this House declines to proceed with the consideration of the bill until it has been submitted to the judgment of the country."

The Unionists believe they have discovered a flaw in the Parliament Act, which provides for the passage of bills over the heads of the peers within a specified period. Their contention is that if the House of Lords postpones dealing with Irish home rule bill by an adjournment to a date beyond the life of the present Parliament the Liberal Government will be powerless to force through its legislation, as the Parliament Act overlooks the possibility of the Upper House giving itself a prolonged vacation.

The Fence and the Law.

HAMILTON, July 10.—Harry Popper, a Detroit youth, arrested here during race week for making handbook on the street, got his liberty yesterday, after his aged mother came all the way from her home to plead for her boy.

In dismissing the case the magistrate said: "I am going to let this lad go because I don't approve of the offence with which he is charged being legalized on one side of the fence and made punishable on the other by a fine of $1,000, or imprisonment in jail for one year."

Lost Both Feet.

WINDSOR, July 10.—Ross Wilson, aged 25, met with a painful accident in the Grand Trunk Railway yards here yesterday afternoon, his feet being completely severed by a freight car.

Demands Shake-Up In Police.

MONTREAL, July 10.—Because the Montreal police have not arrested the hoodlums that knocked him unconscious while addressing a temperance meeting on Fletcher's Field on Monday night, John H. Roberts, secretary of the Dominion Alliance, yesterday entered an appeal to the Attorney-General of the province, asking that the present Montreal police administration be abolished.

Rained Fire and Stones.

MADRID, July 10—Despatches from Valencia report the occurrence of a phenomenon in the form of a rain of fire that reduced to cinders the district outside the village of Alcocer, the inhabitants of which took refuge in a church.

Three terrific detonations were heard about the same time, and out of a clear sky a violent tempest broke over the villages of Benavites and Cuartil, some miles away, accompanied by a shower of stones, the largest of which weighed two pounds.

RUMBLE RE-ELECTED.

Grand Chancellor of Knights of Pythias To Serve Again.

BERLIN, Ont., July 10.—The grand lodge session of the Knight of Pythias opened yesterday. The question of lowering the age limit of admission to 18 years was left over to next convention, the opinion of the subordinate lodges to be obtained in the meantime.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Grand chancellor, Oscar Rumble, Berlin; grand vice-chancellor, Charles Farquharson, Stratford; grand prelate, Thomas Towers, Hamilton; grand keeper, records and seals, Alex. Coulter, Toronto; grand master of exchequer, John Burns, Niagara Falls; grand master-at-arms, Jas. G. Wilson, Toronto; grand inner guard, Alf. W. Wilkes, Hamilton; supreme representative, George Geddes, St. Thomas. St. Catharines is the next meeting place.

WANTED---AN ABATTOIR

There is an agitation on foot among the citizens of Peterborough to establish a municipal abattoir, where all cattle bought for human consumption may undergo a thorough inspection before they are slaughtered and offered for sale as food.

This is not only a necessary, but a very urgent reform, and ought to occupy the immediate attention of our city fathers.

At present each butcher slaughters his own cattle and can present for sale meat that would, under proper inspection, be condemned as unfit for food.

Only the other day evidence was given before the Board of Health of one butcher who was offering for sale a piece of beef that was absolutely full of tuberculosis germs, and that unscrupulous men can under present conditions foist diseased meat upon the public with impunity.

The only check on these men is the sanitary inspector, who claims that he has so much to do in other directions that it is impossible for him to supervise the cattle and meat markets of the city. Even if he had the time he has not the power to act, as in some cases the slaughter-houses are outside the city limits, and he has no authority to sieze the meat before it is placed on the market.

As Dr. McPherson said: "The only thing to do is to get a city abattoir." But when will this be done? The Board of Health meeting closed by deferring the discussion till the next meeting.

It is a good thing to have the Health committee discuss this matter, but to build an abattoir it will be necessary for them to get out specifications without delay for the materialization of their dreams.

Meanwhile the public must go on eating tubercular beef and perhaps contracting diseases which will cost the city in the future far more expense than the putting up of an abattoir.

THE HOME RULE BILL

The Home Rule bill has passed the House of Commons, after the defeat of a motion of rejection by Bonar Law, without division.

Of course the bill has yet to run the gauntlet of the House of Lords which, despite recent legislation depriving it of its veto, can do much toward staying the progress of the measure and may retard its final passage into law.

Some people hold that we, as Canadians, ought to support the Nationalists in Ireland in their effort to gain the right to rule their home affairs. But while we are always on the side of liberty, there are certain conditions under which we would withhold as long as possible the privileges of self-government.

South Africa is a case in point, where the liberals, with a misplaced generosity, bestowed the blessings of self-government upon a people who had scarcely washed their hands clean of the blood of Englishmen who had sacrificed themselves for the Empire. The result of their liberality is seen in the sedition that is undermining British rule in South Africa at the present time.

Ireland has as much liberty today as Scotland and Wales. These provinces have never felt the oppression of the Parliament of Westminister, because they have been a contented and industrious people and have not nutured the spirit of suspicion and distrust toward their supreme neighbor. The remedy for all their grievances lies with the Irish themselves and not in the form of government.

The only hope of Ireland lies in a more loyal co-operation with the rest of the British Isles and so cementing them into one United Kingdom.

THE FOREST FIRE PROBLEM

The Northern Ontario forest fires have been quieted but there remains the question: Are these to recur every hot summer, endangering the existence of the Northern towns, perhaps burning settlers to death, and in any event destroying great areas of valuable timber. The forest ranging service is fairly adequate. But forest ranging is principally to detect fires in their early stage, so that they can be put out by a force that can readily be collected. The ranging forces are entirely unable to stop the bigger fires. A force of 25,000 men could not have stopped the fire that destroyed Porcupine in 1911. The question is what steps can be taken to protect the towns already built in the North, and those that are building. Along the line of the Transcontinental there will be many places grow up, like Hearst has done. Are they adequately protected, or shall we hear some day of whole towns and their inhabitants being wiped out? There seems to be only one fairly efficient way, and that is to do enough clearing around them that fires cannot make enough headway to reach the buidlings. There must be wide clearings or fire-guards. The Ontario Government has a duty to the North in this respect, in assisting the communities to protect themselves. Perhaps, as has been suggested, convict labor could be employed to make the clearings, at little expense to the towns and villages. At any rate, the problem is one that must be faced if settlement of the Northern country is to go ahead on the scale that the people of both older and newer Ontario wish it to proceed.

MEN AND WOMEN.

For men have marble, women waxen, minds,
And therefore are they found as marble will:
The weak oppressed, the impression of strange kinds
Is formed in them by force, by fraud, or skill,
Then call them not the authors of their ill,
No more than wax should be accounted evil
Wherein is stamped the semblance of a devil.

Where Does Money Go?

Truth threatens to put Alexandra Day in its "cautionary list," which consists of bogus and fraudulent and so-called charities. Alexandra Day was originated by leading society women last year under the auspices of the widowed queen. Throughout London thousands of volunteer girls and women sold roses nominally at a penny each but in the west end anything from a shilling to five pounds was given for one. It was a gigantic success, and preliminary estimates put the amount thus raised for hospitals at between $150,000 and $200,000. But the accounts, tardily published, showed $90,000 collected, and from that sum $25,000 was deducted for expenses.

Volunteer work for charity at this rate is rather more costly than the hired article. Alexandra Day is again being prepared for, and the proportion of expenses to the receipts will be narrowly scrutinized.

During the time the famous educator, Dr. Jowett, was master of Baliol a young Japanese undergraduate of the university had been condemned to be expelled on account of unsatisfactory conduct. # THE MARKET

Latest Quotation in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc

CHICAGO, July 9.—Altho some wheat speculators today anticipated a bullish surprise in the government crop report, comparatively few were perpared for the small yield that finally was shown. On the other hand, the estimate for corn was larger than looked for. Oats turned out as expected. Pending the report, which arrived too late to affect prices, all grain markets dragged, with wheat closing the same as last night at 1c to 1 1-8c off; corn down 1-4c to 3-4c and oats at a decline of 1-8c and 5-8c to 5-8c and 3-4c. In provisions the outcome ranged from 5c loss to a like advance.

The Liverpool market closed ⅛d higher to ⅛d lower on wheat, and unchanged on corn. Antwerp, Berlin and Buda Pest all closed unchanged on wheat.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for cattle today, prices being about steady at the recent decline noted. ## "BLACK PERIL" AGAIN.

Negro Laborers on the Rand Are Roused by Strike.

JOHANNESBURG, S. Africa, July 9—Six thousand native black laborers from three of the large gold mines on the Rand joined in the labor upheaval yesterday morning, and should the dissatisfaction among them spread to the other 250,000 natives employed on the reef, it will mean that the white inhabitants will be confronted with the reappearance of the "black peril," which has been quiescent for some years.

The natives refused to descend into the mines until granted an increase of wages and 1,000 of them employed in one mine broke out of their compound. They were, however, awed by the leveled rifles of the troops who had been imposed to deal with this serious development, and they returned to their quarters.

HE ALMOST ESCAPED.

Sentenced Man Played Possum—Arrest Stopped Wedding.

MONTREAL, July 9.—With one wife in the asylum, of which he was watchman, Joseph Seguin had made all arrangements to marry again, when on the wedding day he was arrested on a charge of paying for furniture with which he had furnished a new home, by forged checks. Yesterday morning he was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary.

When sentenced he appeared to faint in the dock. Instead of being handcuffed he was carried out of the court, and while going down a narrow stair, kicked away the officer holding his feet and sprang for the railing.

John Lomax, the court stenographer, grabbed Seguin as he jumped and held him suspended in the air until assistance arrived.

HOOP DID DAMAGE.

Child's Toy Tied Up Toronto's Street Car Service.

TORONTO, July 9.—It was not the mischievous lightning that knocked out the street railway service yesterday, but more than likely a mischievous boy. At any rate, a barrel hoop was discovered looped around one of the 12,000-volt lines, with the result that a short circuit was started, causing three or four grounds on the system, and breaking the insulation at four points, one at Teraulay street, one at Scott street, one at Natalie, and the terminal. This interruption to the service was around six o'clock last evening.

The manager believes that the throwing of a hoop on the wires was the work of a boy, because it could scarcely have been some careless cherub dropping his halo from the sky.

Firebug Is Released.

CORNWALL, Ont., July 9.—Edward Duffy, the man who was committed to stand his trial by Police Magistrate Denis on a charge of setting fire to his own house no less than five times in one night, decided not to remain in confinement until the high court sitting in September and received a summary trial before Judge Liddell yesterday.

He was allowed out on suspended sentence, after promising to conduct himself better in the future.

Sydney Miners Strike.

SYDNEY, N.S., July 9.—Fifteen hundred miners at Nos. 2, 3 and 4 collieries, Sydney Mines, went on strike yesterday. The cause of the trouble is that no horses are being supplied in these mines, and practically all the work of hauling cars, shoveling and filling falls on the miners. Nearly all the men in the three collieries belong to the Provincial Workmen's Association, which took the initiative in the matter.

To Report on Prison System.

OTTAWA, July 9.—It is announced that two of the members of the Kingston Penitentiary investigation commission, will be S. A. Armstrong, head of the prison branch of the Provincial Secretary's Department, and Jos. Downey, director of Orillia Asylum. The third man is to be a lawyer and the whole prison system of the province will be reported on.

Engineer Killed on First Trip.

MONTREAL, July 9—The steamship Montreal, C.P.R. Atlantic line, which arrived yesterday from Antwerp, reported the death by accident, on the voyage, of Bert Varney, sixth engineer, who fell into the crank pit and was crushed to death. Varney was 21 years of age and belonged to West Cowes, Isle of Wight. He was making his first voyage on the Montreal.

Missionary Dead.

LONDON, July 9.—The death is announced of Rev. Dr. Gardiner of Market, Marlborough, aged 84, formerly missionary and chaplain of the Hudson Bay Co. He did remarkable work among the Manitoba half-breeds, being captured by rebels, but was released by Riel in later years. He was active at his home in Birmingham.

The visitor rose to his feet. The time had come for another blast from Olympus. He raised the mighty right arm. But Captain Cy spoke first.

"Sit down, Heman," said the captain quietly. "Sit down. This ain't town meetin'. Never mind the appropriation now. There's other matters to be talked about first. Sit down, I tell you."

Mr. Atkins was purple in the face, but he sat down. The captain coughed again. "Heman," he began when the spasm was over, "I asked you to come here tonight for—well, blessed if I know exactly. It didn't make much difference to me whether you came or not."

"Then, sir, I must say that of all the impudent"—

"S-s-h-h, for the land sakes! Speechmakin' must be as bad as the rum habit when a feller's got it chronic as you have. No; it didn't make much difference to me whether you came or not. But, honest, you've got to be a kind of Bunker Hill monument to the folks back home. They kneel down at your foundations and look up at you and tell each other how many foot high you are and what it cost to build you and how you stand for patriotism and purity till—well, I couldn't see you tumble down without givin' you a chance to explain—I couldn't. 'Twould be like blowin' up a church."

CHAPTER XXI.

THE purple had left Congressman Atkins' face, but the speechmaking habit is not likely to be broken.

"Cyrus Whittaker," he stammered, "have you been drinking? Your language to me is abominable. Why I permit myself to remain here and listen to such"—

"If you'll keep still I'll tell you why. And if I was you I wouldn't be too anxious to find out. This everlastin' cold don't make me over and above good tempered, and when I think of what you've done to that little girl, or what you tried to do, I have to hold myself down tight—tight—and don't you forget it! Now you keep quiet and listen. It'll be best for you, Heman. Your cards ain't under the table any longer. I've seen your hand, and I know why you've been playin' it. I know the whole game. I've been west, and Everdean and I have had a talk."

Mr. Atkins had again risen from the chair. Now he fell heavily back into it. His lips moved as if he meant to speak, but he did not. At the mention of the Everdean name he made a queer choking sound in his throat.

"I know the whole business, Heman," went on the captain. "I know why you was so knocked over when you learned who Bos'n was the night of the party. I know why you took up with that blackguard Thomas and why you've spent your good money hirin' lawyers for him. I know about the mine. I know the whole thing from first to last. Shall I tell you? Do you want to hear it?"

The great man did not answer. A drop of perspiration shone on his high forehead, and the veins of his big white hands stood out as he clutched the arms of his chair. The monument was tottering on its base.

"It's a dirty mess, the whole of it," continued Captain Cy. "And yet I can see—I suppose I can see—some excuse for you at the beginnin'. When old man Everdean and his crowd bought you and John Thayer out way back there in '54, after John died, and all the money was put into your hands I cal'late you was honest then. I wouldn't wonder if you meant to hand over the $37,500 to your partner's widow. But 'twas harder and more risky to send money east in them days than 'tis now, and so you waited, thinkin' maybe that you'd fetch it to Emily when you come yourself. But you didn't come home for some years; you went tradin' down along the Feejees and around that way. That's how I reasoned it out these last few days on the train. I give you credit for bein' honest first along.

"But never mind whether you was or not—you haven't been since. You never paid over a cent of that poor feller's money—honest money, that belonged to his heirs and belongs to 'em now. You've hung on to it, stole it, used it for yours. And Emily worked and scratched for a livin' and died poor. And Mary, she died after bein' abused and deserted by that cussed husband of hers. And you thought you was safe, I cal'late. And then Bos'n turns up right in your own town, right acrost the road from you! By the big dipper, it's enough to make a feller believe that the Almighty does take a hand in straightenin' out such things when us humans bungle 'em—it is so!

"Course I ain't sure, Heman, what you meant to do when you found that the child you'd stole that money from was goin' to be under your face and eyes till you or she died. I cal'late you was afraid I'd find somethin' out, wan't you? I presume likely you thought that I, not havin' quite the reverence for you that the rest of the Bayporters have, might be sharp enough or lucky enough to smell a rat. Perhaps you suspicioned that I knew the Everdeans. Anyhow you wanted to get the child as fur out of your sight and out of my hands as you could. Ain't that so? And when her dad turned up you thought you saw your chance. Heman, you answer me this: Ain't it part of your bargain with Thomas that when he gets his little girl he shall take her and clear out, away off somewheres, for good? Ain't it now—what?"

The monument was swaying, was swinging from side to side, but it did not quite fall—not then. The congressman's cheeks hung flabby, his forehead was wet, and he shook from head to foot. But he clinched his jaws and made one last attempt at defiance.

"I—I don't know what you mean," he declared. "You—you seem to be accusing me of something—of stealing, I believe. Do you understand who I am? I have some influence and reputation, and it is dangerous to—to try to frighten me. Proofs are required in law, and"—

"S-s-h-h! You know I've got the proofs. They were easy enough to get once I happened on the track of 'em. Lord sakes, Heman, I ain't a fool! What's the use of your pretendin' to be one? There's the deed out in Frisco, with yours and John's name on it. There's the records to prove the sale. There's the receipt for the $75,000 signed by you on behalf of yourself and your partner's widow. There's old man Everdean alive and competent to testify. There's John Thayer's will on file over to Orham. Proofs! Why, you thief, if it's proofs you want I've got enough to send you to state prison for the rest of your life! Don't you dare say 'proofs' to me again! Heman Atkins, you owe me, as Bos'n's guardian, $37,500, with interest since 1854. What you goin' to do about it?"

Here was one ray, a feeble ray, of light.

"You're not her guardian," cried Atkins. "The courts have thrown you out, and your appeal won't stand either. If any money is due it belongs to her father. She isn't of age! No, sir, her father"—

Captain Cy's patience had been giving away. Now he lost it altogether. He strode across the room and shook his forefinger in his victim's face.

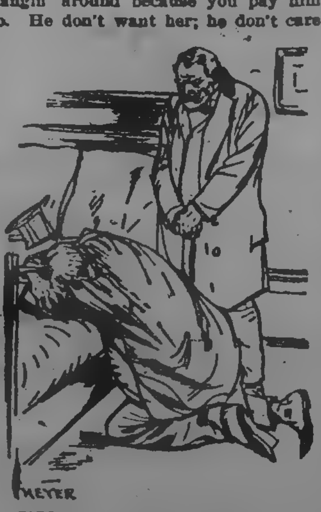
"So!" he cried. "That's your tack, is it? By the big dipper, you go to her father—just you go to him and tell him! Just hint to him that you owe his daughter thirty-odd thousand dollars and see what he'll do. Good heavens above, he was ready to sell her out to me for $50 wuth of sand bank in Orham—almost ready, he was, till you offered a higher price to him to fight. Why, he'll have your hide nailed up on the barn door! If you don't pay him every red copper down on the nail he'll wring you dry. And then he'll blackmail you forever and ever, amen—unless, of course, I go home and stop the blackmail by printing my story in the Breeze. I've a precious good mind to do it. By the Almighty, I will do it unless you come off that high horse of yours and talk like a man."

And then the monument fell—fell prostrate, with a sickly, pitiful crash. If we of Bayport could have seen our congressman then! The great man, great no longer, broke down completely. He cried like a baby. It was all true—all true. He had not meant to steal at first. He had been led into using the money in his business. Then he had meant to send it to the heirs, but he didn't know their whereabouts. Captain Cy smiled at this excuse. And now he couldn't pay—he couldn't. He had hardly that sum in the world. He had lost money in stocks. His property in the south had gone to the bad. He would be ruined. He would have to go to prison. He was getting to be an old man. And there was Alicia, his daughter! Think of her! Think of the disgrace! And so on, over and over, with the one recurring burden—what was the captain going to do—what was he going to do? It was a miserable, dreadful exhibition, and Captain Cy could feel no pride in his triumph.

"There, there!" he said at last. "Stop it, man; stop it, for goodness sakes! Pull yourself together. I guess we can fix it up somehow. I ain't goin' to be too hard on you. If it wan't for your meanness in bein' willin' to let Bos'n suffer her life long with that drunken beast of a dad of hers I'd feel almost like tellin' you to get up and forget it. But that's got to be stopped. Now, you listen to me."

Heman listened. He was on his knees beside the bed, his face buried in his arms, and his gray hair, the leonine Atkins hair, which he was wont to toss backward in the heated periods of his eloquence, tumbled and draggled. Captain Cy looked down at him.

"This whole business about Bos'n must be stopped," he said, "and stopped right off. You tell your lawyers to drop the case. Her dad is only hangin' around because you pay him to. He don't want her; he don't care what becomes of her. If you pay him enough he'll go, won't he, and not come back?"



CAPTAIN CY LOOKED DOWN AT HIM.

The congressman raised his head.

"Why, yes," he faltered; "I think he will. Yes, I think I could arrange that. But, Cyrus"—

The captain held up his hand.

"I intend to look out for Bos'n," he said. "She cares for me more'n any one else in the world. She's as much to me as my own child ever could be, and I'll see that she is happy and provided for. I'm religious enough to believe she was sent to me, and I intend to stick to my trust. As for the money"—

"Yes, yes—the money?"

"Well, I won't be too hard on you that way, either. We'll talk that over later on. Maybe we can arrange for you to pay it a little at a time. You can sign a paper showin' that you owe it, and we'll fix the payin' to suit all hands. 'Tain't as if the child was in want. I've got some money of my own, and what's mine's hers. I think we needn't worry about the money part."

"God bless you, Cyrus! I"—

"Yes, all right. I'm sure your askin' for the blessin' 'll be a great help. Now, you do your part and I'll do mine. No one knows of this business but me. I didn't tell Everdean a word. He don't know why I hustled out there and back nor why I asked so many questions. And he ain't the kind to pry into what don't concern him. So you're pretty safe, I cal'late. Now, if you don't mind, I wish you'd run along home. I'm—I'm used up, sort of."

Mr. Atkins arose from his knees. Even then, broken as he was—he looked ten years older than when he entered the room—he could hardly believe what he had just heard.

"You mean," he faltered—"Cyrus, do you mean that—that you're not going to reveal this—this"—

"That I'm not goin' to tell on you? Yup; that's what I mean. You get rid of Thomas and squelch that law case and I'll keep mum. You can trust me for that."

"But—but, Cyrus, the people at home? Your story in the Breeze? You're not"—

"No; they needn't know, either. It'll be between you and me."

"God bless you! I'll never forget"—

"That's right. You mustn't. Forgettin' is the one thing you mustn't do. And, see here, you're boss of the political fleet in Bayport; you steer the school committee now. Phoebe Dawes ain't too popular with that committee. I'd see that she was popularized."

(To be Continued.)

Not In Proportion.

"I'm a self made man," said the proud individual.

"Well, you're all right except as to your head," commented the other part of the conversation.

"How's that?"

"The part you talk with is out of proportion to the part you think with."

The Boss.

"All right," said Elsie; "we'll play theatre. I'll be the boss."

"No," replied Tommy; "I will. It takes a man to be manager."

"Of course, that's all right. I mean I'll be the leading lady."

NOT A TWINGE OF RHEUMATISM SINCE TAKING RHEUMA

"I suffered from Rheumatism for six years: tried different doctors with no relief. I saw your advertisement and decided to try RHEUMA. I have taken three bottles and am entirely free from the disease. I was so bad I could not sleep nights; now I sleep well, and my kidneys work perfectly."—P. W. Miller, Catawissa, Pa.

"For 11 months I was so badly afflicted with Rheumatism that much of the time I was obliged to use a cane. I used one bottle of RHEUMA and THE CANE IS IN THE CORNER NOW. No one could be happier to be rid of the pain, swollen knees and badly swollen ankles. I certainly believe there is no remedy for the disease like RHEUMA."—Mrs. Daniel S. Knox, Severance, N.Y., Aug. 8, 1912.

Warne Drug Co guarantees RHEUMA to cure Rheumatism, Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Arthritis, Chronic Neuralgia and Kidney disease, or money back—and only 50 cents a bottle.

Careful About Breathing.

Breathing exercises are beneficial to persons who get little exercise, but it is not best to take them early in the morning. After six or eight hours of sleep the circulation and body activities are slow. It takes two or three hours at least for the body to regain its normal rate of action. Now, if a person spends ten minutes in breathing exercises he is giving his system that much more work getting started. It takes his body longer to get into shape for the day's work and leaves it in a poorer condition to do that work. If you need exercise take it after your body has been in running order several hours.

"This Indenture."

The phrase "this indenture," which appears so often in legal papers, is of curious origin. In the early days parchment was used for legal documents because it was cheaper than paper. The leaves were not cut evenly, but scalloped but "this indenture" still remains.

By Special Permit.

"Here! What does this mean?" shouted Whooply, as he found his youngest riding a broomstick over the top of the piano.

"This is all right. Mamma said if I'd stay in I could play on the piano."

UMPIRE EVANS PULLED A GOOD ONE ON THE BRANTS

Visitors Forfeited the Game in the Fourth Because of Their Deliberate Attempts to Delay the Game

Yesterday's ball game was brought to a sudden end, when Umpire Evans declared that Brantford had forfeited the contest.

The Petes had scored two runs and as a rainstorm appeared likely the Brants were doing their best to hold the game from going five innings. Slow movements, wild throws and finally Kane's deliberate attempt to prolong the game, by protesting against the fans occupying the green immediately in front of the western grandstand, got on the nerves of the umps, and after pulling his watch on the Red Sox manager, with but little success he declared the game forfeited.

Manager Kane rather surprised Peterborough fans by his actions. It has been the custom since the professional game was commenced at Riverside Park, for the fans to occupy the fence and the green as was the case yesterday, and there has never been the slightest objection taken in the past.

THE SCORING.

A pass to Trout and Hilliards hard hard drive to left that went for a triple, gave the Petes one in the first innings, while another pass to Byrne, a passed ball and Belting's single to right gave them another in the second. The visitors could do nothing with Belting. Tesch was moved to the top of the batting order and fanned on both trips to the plate.

LIFE INSURANCE

THE pessimist and the prophet of woe have no rightful place in any consideration of the expediency of insuring life. But certain hard facts should be squarely faced by every man of moderate means who has anyone dependent on him. Hundreds of men are yearly rejected for life insurance who would have been accepted had they not delayed their applications until ill health had come upon them. Why do men in good condition take such a long chance of remaining well? It is an impressive fact that out of 8549 holders of policies in a leading life insurance company who died in the past year, only 64 died of old age. The remainder were carried away by disease or accident. Hence the wisdom of insuring early in life. The best years for saving are from 20 to 40, and no man should let that period pass without taking out an insurance policy. For that part of his career an endowment policy, which is likely to mature while he is still living and can secure the proceeds of it himself, is to be preferred.

There will probably always be poor old men. their ranks will be recruited from the successful men of an earlier date, and fortunate is he who has made certain provision by means of endowment insurance in the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

FRESENTATION AT ENNISMORE

Special Correspondence.

Ennismore, July 10.—A very pleasant afternoon and evening was spent at S.S. No. 3, Ennismore, on Friday, June 28, the occasion being the closing of the school for the term 1912-13. The parents and young people turned out in goodly numbers to help the children celebrate the day which is so welcome to all school children. Many visitors from the other sections were present also, including Rev. M. F. Fitzpatrick, Mr. J. Fitzpatrick, Misses Vivian Galvin, Etta Scollard, Lilian Hickey, Irene Condon, Monica Crough, Eunice Crough, Ethel Kennedy, Carrie Moloney and Mrs. M. F. Crough.

The following programme was rendered in the afternoon.

Chairman's address—K. Killen.
Song—J. Crough.
Recitation—Celia O'Reilly.
Song—Nellie Conway.
Recitation—James Gifford.
Song—Frank Killen.
Recitation—Katie McAuliffe.
Song—Michael Crough.
Recitation—Iola O'Reilly.
Song Hazel O'Donnell.
Recitation—Patrick Perdue.
Duet—Nellie Conway and Anni Sullivan.
Recitation—Olive Calvert.
Song—Kent Killen.
Recitation—Anni Sullivan.

At the close of the programme Master James Gifford on behalf of the pupils and parents, presented their teacher, Miss Helena Moloney, with an amethyst pendant and earpin, while Ethel O'Reilly read the following address;

Dear teacher,—We, your affectionate pupils unite here to-day to endeavor to show that we appreciate all the services you have rendered us during the past three years as our teacher. We realize that many times we could have made your duties lighter and school life happier but lack of thought rather than lack of love was always the cause. Personal interests was always set aside when your duties were to be performed and these duties were always performed with great faithfulness.

As a proof of our love and thankfulness we ask you to accept these gifts. We wish them to remind you that your pupils here realize the kindness you have bestowed on them on all occasions. We sincerely hope that success and enjoyment will accompany you in all your undertakings, now and in the years to come.

Signed on behalf of the pupils of S.S. No. 3, Ennismore.

Ethel O'Reilly, James Gifford, ford, Katie Crough, Patrick Perdue, Olive Calvert, Michael Crough, Charlie Perdue, Kent Killen, Annie Sullivan, Nellie Conway, Mary Lyntic.

Miss Moloney, though completely taken by surprise, made a fitting reply, thanking both the pupils and parents for their handsome gift and their many kindnesses bestowed on her during her term in the section.

Lunch, consisting of sandwiches, cake, fruit and lemonade, was partaken of on the grounds and here the children, especially, showed their appreciation of the good things served. The sports were brief, but interesting, and consisted of races, between the numbers of the different classes. Prizes were awarded in each case by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick and competition was keen. The Entrance class pupils prize was won by Michael Crough, while Beatrice Crough captured the prize offered for the teachers' race.

Mr Roy of Peterborough came from Chemong in the evening and took a photograph of all present.

About seven o'clock everyone prepared for home and all were highly pleased with the day's outing. It is to be hoped that this is but a beginning of the social gatherings in our school.

A Test Far Beneath His Capacity.

The young son of a lawyer who lives out south has just made his first appearance at kindergarten The other day his teacher asked the children to look over the room and any who could count to rise and tell her the number of children in the room. The young south sider arose and, looking about over the heads, remarked with great aplomb:

"Huh! I can't count these children, because I can count to a hundred, and there ain't that many here."

Looking For the Man.

Mr. Lowther, the Speaker of the House of Commons, is anxious to meet the gentleman who was first responsible for the story that among the perquisites of his office are a present of wine from the state, a supply of broadcloth from the Clothworkers' Company, and bucks and does from the Master of the Buckhounds. "I should like to have a few moments' talk face to face with him," says Mr. Lowther, severely, "for there is not the slightest truth in the statement." However, that the statement is not altogether wrong. Years ago these were among the perquisites of the Speaker's office, although the custom of giving such presents is no longer observed.

Too Salt For the Fish.

Thousands of fish are lying dead on the surface of the canal which connects Droitwich with the Severn. A quantity of brine was allowed to flow into the canal at Droitwich, and it has caused wholesale destruction of fish from Potter's Hill to Salwarne Church.

PRACTICALLY GIVEN UP TO DIE

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Kidneys and Bladder

WILLIAMSTOWN, ONT., JULY 27th. 1910

"I have much pleasure in testifying to the almost marvellous benefit I have derived from taking "Fruit-a-tives". I was a lifelong sufferer from Chronic Constipation, and the only medicine I ever secured to do me any real good was "Fruit-a-tives". This medicine cured me when everything else failed. Also, last spring, I had a severe attack of Bladder Trouble coupled with Kidney Trouble, and "Fruit-a-tives" cured these complaints for me, when the physicians attending me had practically given me up.

I am now over eighty years of age and I can strongly recommend "Fruit-a-tives" for Chronic Constipation and Bladder and Kidney Troubles"

JAMES DINGWALL.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices—and is the greatest kidney, bladder and liver medicine ever put on the market.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50 trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Offered Bride For a Kilt.

In the garb of "Old Gaul," William Campbell, late of the Black Watch, completed a 50,000 miles' tour recently.

He related a tale replete with incident, amusement and adventure. Really, the trip was undertaken in the interests of Imperial Federation, but later a brotherly challenge caused him to don the kilt for a wager.

At Taranto, in Italy, a gendarme arrested him for doing an impromptu Highland fling in the street, while in Ceylon he had to fight his way out of a religious festival, for the priests regarded him as a devil depriving them of their rights.

In New Zealand he was within an ace of losing his beloved kilt. The Maoris loved it, and one dark night a Maori chief crawled into the intrepid traveler's tent, annexed the garment, and almost escaped with it.

Apparently it resembled the native dress and at Ohmemuta a chief offered him a young and charming, though unblushing, native bride in return for the costume.

Oil the Machine.

Sewing machines should be treated with great care if you would have them last a long while and do perfect work. After every two days of steady work oil the machinery thoroughly, but be careful to wipe away all superfluous oil. Run the machine rapidly but steadily without any thread for five minutes after oiling. This will cause the oil to scatter, and the superfluous drops can be wiped away, and none will be left to stain the material you are working with.

Dolly Varden Dress.

The new flowered crape gives a quaint suggestion of other days which accords well with fichus, reticules and picture hats with long streamers, as fashion requires. This Dolly Varden gown of flowered crape is draped over flounces of shadow lace.

Sleeves in the cotton frocks are seldom full-length. In many of the more dressy ones they stop just above the elbow. Necks are almost universally open, a summer fashion which deserves to be perpetuated. Some of the long sleeves have fullness, which is brought into a cuff, but this fullness does not form a deep pouch. Other sleeves have rather a wide mouth, something like a child's short sleeve.

English Take Precautions

So great are the precautions taken in the port of London in the loading and unloading of vessels carrying quantities of explosives that the danger of terrible explosions in the Thames is as remote as human ingenuity can make it.

No explosives can be loaded, says The St. James Gazette, until the stokehole fires of the vessel, the tug and all the boats in the vicinity have carefully been banked up an hour previously and all other fires and lights extinguished. The ship's signal lights and side lights must be of such a type as to dispose completely of any risk of fire or explosion. Winches or cranes must not be used in handling explosives of whatever character. The gangways and decks of the vessel must be covered with hides or other suitable material; a cushion stuffed with oakum and covered with leather must be used for resting any case of explosives upon, and the steel interior of the ship must be covered with sheet lead, leather cloth or other suitable material approved by the port authority.

No person near the ship is allowed to carry any matches, fuses or other combustibles, and the only matches allowed on the vessel are those of a special safety kind passed by the authority, and even these matches must be kept in a safe place apart from the explosive. No man is allowed to smoke anywhere in the neighborhood, and no passenger can set foot on the ship when it is being loaded.

All these ships, lighters and tugs have to be specially registered, and to mark their dangerous occupation the ship, whether at anchor or under way, must fly a large red flag at her fore masthead, that flag which seamen call the "powder burgee."

Expensive Evening Gowns

are not matters of every-day purchase, and therefore even the independently wealthy like to take the greatest care of them. Yet sometimes the functions of a single evening will ruin their appearance temporarily. We can remedy this, however, by our system of careful cleaning, and in any case we can dye the garment and make it like a new one.

REPORT TO BE MADE TO BOTH GOVERNMENTS

On Trip Over the Trent Waterway and Through North Country—Two Incidents Which Show the Fine Spirit of Men of the North.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., when asked this morning if the party would make a report on what they had seen concerning the Trent Waterway system and their trip to the north country, replied in the affirmative, and further stated that in all probability the Power Users' Association, the Mayor and himself would meet and make a joint report to be forwarded to both governments.

"There are many matters of vital importance to deal with," remarked Mr. Burnham, "and none are more vital than that of fire. If fire swept the north country it would go a long way to make water conservation an impossibility."

"Were there any other incidents which struck you?" the reporter asked.

"Yes, there were," was the reply, "and what struck me most of all, was the fine independence of spirit displayed by two men whom we met while we were under trying circumstances.

"In the midst of a long forest, with darkness all around and the rain coming down in torrents, our car was stalled at a hill. We pulled and hauled till we were nearly exhausted, when a big fellow appeared out of the night, carrying a lantern. He said, 'You'll have to get this thing out of there; I'm behind with a team, and I must get on."

"Well," I said to him, "if you want to get out, you will have to lend a hand, which he did, and finally with much shouting and pulling the car was landed on top of the hill.

"As he turned to go away I said to him, "Let me pay you for your trouble."

"No thank you," he replied, sharply.

"But being accustomed to very little of that spirited independence in these degenerate days, I said it's worth considerable to us to get out of this hole, to which he replied with a scornful laugh, "I will take nothing, thank you."

"Well," "you'll at least permit me to say that we thoroughly appreciate your kindness and your fine spirit of a gentleman." He waved his hand as he walked off and said, "O that's all right, boss."

"On another occasion," continued Mr. Burnham, "one of the party handed one of the paddlers a bill, but he point-blank refused to touch it.

"It is evident that the material spirit has not yet completely stamped out the spirit of manhood from some of our people, and that they draw a sharp distinction between being a man and a mendicant."

EXTEND PAVEMENTS AND MAKE GEORGE ST. OF UNIFORM WIDTH

Board of Works Wrestle With Street Paving Question Again=Work on Hunter Street to Start First—Other Operations May be Tied up Till Next Spring

The width of the roadway between curbs at present varies from 49.5 feet to 45.7 feet on George street from McDonnel street to the C.P.R.

In reality at least, two feet of this width is useless on account of the wooden poles. The present sidewalk is from 10 feet to 10 1-4 feet wide. When the new Hydro Electric iron poles are placed on the outside edge of the sidewalk, they will extend some 16 or 18 ins. on the sidewalk. It is advisable to have a uniform width of 43 1-8 feet from curb to curb. This would leave a space of 17 feet between a street car and the curb. There would also be ample room for a rig to pass another vehicle standing at the edge of the sidewalk. With this change the sidewalk would measure 11 1-4 feet. This would add two feet two both sidewalks,

The above recommendation of the city engineer, which was finally adopted, occupied the attention of the Board of Works last night. A varied discussion arose over the matter.

Mayor Bradburn—"I think the City Engineer's recommendation a good one. It will certainly give the street a far better appearance."

"When we are doing this work we ought to do it right," admonished Ald. Johnston.

Chairman Wm. Buller—"We will have a better street. The people will also find it much easier through being able to drive close to the sidewalk."

RAILS BY SEPTEMBER.

The Mayor informed the committee that in conversation with Mr. Munro, of the Radial Railway Company, they would have enough rails to commence work by the 1st of September.

Ald. Johnston inquired why they couldn't pave one side of the street and let the rest go until the spring.

The City Engineer pointed out that it would be better to pave both sides of the street as they went along.

Ald. Johnston—"Let us cut out this hot air about the paving of the streets and do something."

Ald Gordon—"Better have the City Engineer advertise for tenders.

On motion of Ald. Gordon and Ald. Johnston the Street Car Company will be notified that the work of the paving will proceed at once.

The chairman—"Yes. we are going to do this work right away."

Ald Gordon—"We will never see the pavement this year." The railway company will not be able to get the rails this year.

Mayor Bradburn—"I'll bet you a new hat we get the pavement this year."

"I'll take you," observed Ald. Gordon.

In connection with the paving of George street, the City Engineer says that in order to make the street a uniform width, some 16 inches would have to be added to the present sidewalk.

"In some places," said the Engineer "the walk extends out farther than it does at other points. In front of the Customs House, the walk will have to be chopped out considerably, in order to get the uniform width."

With the City Engineer's explanation of how the Hydro Electric poles would be placed, the committee decided that very little room would be taken up by them.

George street from Murray street to McDonnel street, will be curbed and filled in.

The Mayor expressed his views that they intended to start the paving on Hunter street first, in order to give the Street Car Company sufficient time to get their rails. "Thus," said the Mayor, "we could let the paving of the rest of the streets go until spring."

On motion of Ald. Anderson and Ald. McIntyre, the City Engineer was asked to attend to the changing a surface drain on Oxford street.

"I don't like to come here asking for things at every meeting," said Ald Anderson, when he laid the matter of paving Driscoll Terrace before the Board. "The matter will be attended to as soon as possible," replied the chairman.

Ald. McIntyre asked that Clifton street be paved as soon as possible.

"Don't forget to look at the drain at the foot of Edinburgh street," said Ald Johnston. "We don't want it overlooked."

"When are you going to fix the culvert on Concession street?" asked Ald. Anderson.

"We're fixing that now," declared the chairman.

Mayor Bradburn—"We can't fix all these places at once."

TABERNACLE EXCURSIONISTS HAD VARiETY

Good Time at South Beach Followed by Rain and Trouble With Logs

Bethany Tabernacle Sunday School excursion yesterday, to South Beach, was much enjoyed by all present. The Str. Esturion and the officers aboard gave great satisfaction.

At the Beach there was a grove meeting at which Dr. R. J. Zimmerman was the principal speaker. Mr. and Mrs. Edmands, of Toronto, sang a duet. The whole event was very interesting.

On the way home the rain storm came on when between Young's Point and Lakefield. Most of the passengers were comfortably accommodated in the dining room during the storm.

When in the river, coming home, there was trouble with the logs. At one place one of the logs came up with such force as to damage the wood work. Miss Sid Revoy fainted from the nervous shock, but no serious harm was done.

Fire Department

Since June 25th, the Fire Brigade has answered only one call for a fire, that one being at the residence of Mr. C. L. Cunningham on July 4th, where there was no damage. One run in two weeks is the record for the present season.

STORM WAS BAD IN NORTH COUNTRY

Reports from the north country are to the effect that one of the worst storms of the season swept over the country yesterday afternoon.

With the high wind and hail the size of hen's eggs, the storm took everything possible before it. Windows were broken and trees in some parts completely trimmed, as if by knife. To be caught out in such a storm was the experience of Harold Gibbs, of the Gibbs' Livery.

Mr. Gibbs was driving about two miles north of Buckhorn, when he met the storm. Owing to the force of the hail, the horse, Mr. Gibbs was driving, became frantic with the stinging pain and ran away. Fortunately the driver managed to keep it under sufficient control until the worst of the storm passed. During the worst of the storm period, which lasted about four or five minutes, Mr. Gibbs says he had a very exciting ride over rocks and feels thankful that he escaped without encountering serious injury.

Reports from various points in the north country state that the storm was particularly fierce, and that much damage was done to the crops.

Lady Golfers

The final in the golf competition for the Captains' Prize was won by Miss Jean Harstone who finished one up against Mrs. Gardiner.

In the Consolation finals Mrs. Matthews won from Miss Olga Cavanah with two up and one to go.

WOULD CURB WHOLE BLOCKS AND STREETS

In Preference to Individual Cases as Has Been the Rule

At the Board of Works meeting last night, Ald. Johnston introduced a new feature in regard to the curbing of the residential sections of the city.

Ald. Johnston's suggestion was that, instead of having the front of only one residence curbed, as is at present the case, to get a number of the residents of the block interested and have them communicate with the City Engineer and have all the work done under his supervision. The work could be paid for in the taxes if the Council thought it advisable.

"It is certainly an excellent idea," remarked the Mayor.

Mr. Parsons, City Engineer, stated that it would settle the question of the different widths of the streets.

Chairman Buller—"Better try it on Elias street."

Mayor Bradburn—"I think it would be wise to have a by-law passed regarding the same as to the building of the curbs, and also as to the filling in and sodding of the curbs."

The matter will be further discussed at the next meeting.

AN IMPROVEMENT AT VICTORIA PARK

Caretaker Takes Action to Prevent Broken Limbs

Another improvement is being made at Victoria Park. For several seasons the holes around the seven taps on the eastern section have been very dangerous especially at night when a person could easily step into one and sustain injury. Mr. Cree, the caretaker has overcome the danger by placing covered boxes around the taps which does away with the hole and also preserves the tap.

BULGARIA APPEALS TO THE POWERS TO STOP THE WAR

Roumanian Invasion of Bulgaria is the Last Straw and King Ferdinand's Government Cannot Continue the Struggle---Soldiers Were Tired Out Bearing Brunt of Last Campaign

Canadian Press Despatch.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 11.—The Russian press and official circles express themselves as hopefully regarding the Balkan situation, considering the crippling of the Bulgarian forces which it is felt will hasten peace.

SOFIA, July 11.—The Roumanian Minister after notifying the Bulgarian Government that the Roumanian army had crossed the frontier, left his post. Bulgaria while regarding the invasian as unjustifiable, has decided not to meet it in force.

LONDON, July 11.—The end of a fortnight's desperate fighting in the Balkans finds Bulgaria forced to appeal to the powers to arrange peace. The Bulgarian plan to drive a wedge between the Greek and Servian armies in the neighborhood of Guevgheli has completely failed. The last reports of the fighting received from Athens last night show that the Servians and Greeks at this point are combining their forces, while the Roumanian army is beginning an invasion of Bulgaria.

The latter fact doubtless was the deciding factor in the Bulgarian appeal to the powers. How far Bulgaria's defeat is due to dissensions in high military quarters, which resulted in the resignation of Gen. Savoff, and how far to the fact that the Bulgarian troops, which bore the brunt of the hard fighting in the last campaign, were more exhausted than the Greek and Servian forces, will probably never be known.

Nothing can be predicted at the moment as to how events will shape themselves, the Roumanian invasion of Bulgaria having brought an entirely new factor into the problem. Russia and France are devoting their efforts to persuading the allies to adopt a moderate attitude in order to facilitate a peaceful settlement. The Servian Premier is quoted in The Vienna Neue Frie Presse as declaring that the new war has completely set aside all treaties of alliance and that peace must now be negotiated on an entirely new basis.

Invasion Ordered.

BUCHAREST, July 11.—The Roumanian Government has issued orders to the army to invade Bulgaria today, and has instructed the Roumanian Minister at Sofia to notify the Bulgarian Government of this decision.

Fifty Thousand Captured?

LONDON, July 11.—Rumors were published in Berlin yesterday, and according to The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Athens, were current there, that Gen. Ivanoff with 50,000 Bulgarians was forced to surrender near Demirhissar, where fighting was proceeding for the possession of a railway bridge over the Struma river.

A later Athens' despatch to The Telegraph says that no confirmation of this can be obtained, and an official report issued at Athens, although it mentions the fighting at Demirhissar, says nothing of the surrender.

Despatches from the European capitals published in London, severely criticizes Premier Daneff's overbearing policy as being the cause of the Bulgarians' defeat and his speedy downfall is predicted.

Exit The Montreal Witness.

MONTREAL, July 11.—Under the caption of "Valedictory" J. R. Dougall, editor and proprietor of The Daily Witness, yesterday bid farewell to its readers.

Mr. Dougall explains that he has laid down the editorial and business control of The Daily Witness, which has been taken over by Mr. Charles Gordon-Smith, who has formed a company which will publish it as a Liberal paper under the title of The Daily Telegraph.

Police Pursue Wife-Murderer.

SASKATOON, Sask., July 11.—The mounted police at Wilkie are out on a case in the back country which lies between Wilkie and Macklin, searching for Alex. Anderson, who killed his wife and then attempted to commit suicide. When the shot he fired at himself had no effect he made his escape into the north country.

ADMITS LOBBYING CHARGES, DAZING INVESTIGATORS.

David Lamar

David Lamar, the "Wolf of Wall Street," has proved his right to the title. While the Senate lobby investigating committee alternately gasped and laughed in sheer amazement at the man's impudence, Mr. Lamar confessed to a course of intrigue in which Wall street and the democratic party were to have been brought into close relations, with himself as the pivot wheel of all future relations.

JOHNSON IN FRANCE.

Prizefighter Says He Will Never Return To the U. S.

HAVRE, France, July 11.—Jack Johnson, the colored pugilist, arrived here yesterday on board the Corinthian and immediately on landing announced his determination never to return to the United States. He said he would in the future take up his residence in Paris.

Not Safe Even There.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Jack Johnson may not find refuge in France, in the opinion of the State Department officials. They say that while probably there is no provision in the extradition treaty with France, under which his surrender could be demanded, the French authorities, even without a formal appeal from the U. S. Government, may deport Johnson, as like most European countries, France is understood to have laws prohibiting the immigration of a person convicted of crime in his own country.

AUSTRALIA'S NAVY.

British Colonial Secretary Divulges Admiral Henderson's Plan.

LONDON, July 11.—In the House of Commons yesterday, in reply to questions, Mr. Harcourt, the Colonial Secretary, said: "I understand that the late Government of Australia approved the principles of Admiral Henderson's scheme of naval defence and proposed to carry it into effect. I have no information concerning the views of the present Government. The scheme recommended by Admiral Henderson contemplated the ultimate creation of a fleet of eight armored cruisers, ten protected cruisers, eighteen destroyers, twelve submarines, with a total period of construction of twenty-two years. When fully manned the fleet would require a personnel of 14,844 officers and men. The annual cost of maintenance when fully completed would be £12,226,000, and for the personnel £1,226,000. The maintenance of the ships in commission has been specially undertaken under the scheme.

Stefansson Party at Nome.

NOME, Alaska, July 11.—The Canadian polar exploration ship Karluk has arrived from Victoria with twelve of the scientists who will go with Vilhjalmar Stefansson into the Arctic regions.

Four hours later the steamship Victoria arrived from Seattle with Stefansson, Dr. R. M. Anderson, his lieutenant, and James Murray, oceanographer.

The expedition will remain here until July 20, when the way will be open to Point Barrow, the northernmost point of Alaska. While here supplies will be transferred to the auxiliary boat Alaska, which will take the southern part under Dr. Anderson from Nome to Victoria Land for scientific research work.

MAY REVOKE CLAUSE.

Reciprocity Act In U. S. Likely To Be Upset By Tariff.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—That the provision of the Underwood tariff bill levying a duty of 12 per cent. ad valorem on print paper valued at more than 2 1-2 cents a pound and not more than four cents a pound, may repeal a portion of the Canadian Reciprocity Act of 1911, is contended in the analysis of the measure prepared under direction of Senator Smoot, Republican member of the finance committee. If it does not operate to repeal the law, it is contended that there will be two rates in controversy on this grade of paper.

Besides the duty of 12 per cent. ad valorem, the Democrat bill would impose a countervailing tax in retaliation for export license fee or other charge imposed by a foreign country.

"An interesting point to consider," the Smoot analysis sets forth, is the effect of the enactment of this paragraph on the portion of the Canadian Reciprocity Act, which admits to entry free of duty papers imported from Canada valued at not more than four cents per pound. With respect to printing paper valued at more than 2 1-2 and not more than four cents per pound, it is manifest that there is a complete repugnance between the two statutes, for by the terms of one, the act of 1911, it is free of duty, and by the terms of the tariff bill, it is subject to a duty of 12 per cent., ad valorem. Nor can the two statutes be so construed as to stand together. Under such circumstances the rule of law is that the statute of later date must prevail over the earlier statute as being the latest expression of the legislative will, and that consequently the earlier statute stands repealed by implication."

Republican leaders will make a point of this on the floor of the Senate.

To-day the tariff bill will be reported to the Senate, but the majority report favoring the measure will not be presented by Chairman Simmons until Monday.

THE BOAST OF THE MILITANTS

Mrs. Rigby is Proud of Her Recent Actions

LIVERPOOL, July 11.—A dramatic confession of incendiarism was made by a well-known militant suffragette, Mrs. Edith Rigby, wife of a physician at Preston, to the magistrate sitting in the Police Court here yesterday.

Mrs. Rigby declared it was she who had on Tuesday this week burned down the country residence at Rivington, near Hordwich, Lancashire, of Sir William H. Lever, causing damage estimated at $100,000.

She further confessed to being the perpetrator of the outrage at the Liverpool Stock Exchange on July 5, when a bomb exploded but caused little damage.

Mrs. Rigby surrendered voluntarily to the police. When arraigned yesterday she gloried in her achievements, saying she wanted Sir Wm. H. Lever to consider whether his house was more valuable as a show place than as a beacon lighted for the King and country to see women suffering an insupportable grievance. She told the magistrate:

"I lighted the beacon. I also placed the explosive in the Liverpool Stock Exchange to show how easy it is to procure them and to place them in public buildings. I might just as easily have blown up the Nelson monument."

She was remanded for further hearing.

Mrs. Edith Rigby has been a member of the Women's Social and Political Union, the militant suffrage organization, for many years, and has taken a great part in public movements to promote the welfare of women.

Copious Rains In West.

WINNIPEG, July 11.—Throughout the Canadian prairie west, copious rains fell yesterday, starting generally about noon and continuing well into the night. At some points it is raining yet.

While the western crops are not, as a rule, in urgent need of rain, a few places like the Brandon district, southern Manitoba and parts of Saskatchewan and Alberta have been suffering from lack of moisture. According to the correspondents of the Western Associated Press, yesterday's rain has improved the crop situation in these districts a hundredfold.

PRANKS OF LIGHTNING

Drill Scow Wrecked and Six Men Injured

KINGSTON, July 11.—A lightning bolt during an electrical storm late on Wednesday afternoon in this section wrecked the Government drill scow near Grindstone Island below Gananoque by exploding a quantity of dynamite aboard.

Six men were severely injured and two of the number possibly fatally. The injured are: Alfred Pabrin, aged 37, married, Cornwall, internal injuries and scalp wounds; Wm. Reid, aged 43, married, of Bannockburn, Ont., leg and hip fractured, back badly bruised; Blake Landon, aged 33, single, Lansdowne, left shoulder badly dislocated; Joseph Hurd, aged 24, single, Montreal, body badly bruised; Louis Quesnel, aged 23, single, Cornwall, fractured leg, wounds on head; Milton R. Murray, aged 44, Buffalo, N.Y., scalp wounds and leg fractured.

The damage to the scow and equipment is estimated at between $30,000 and $40,000. The scow has been at work removing a portion of the shoal between the foot of Hay and Grindstone Islands and day and night gangs have been at work.

People at Gananoque heard the explosion and in a short time a number of motor boats started for the scene. Drs. Bird and Davis of Gananoque, were called and attended the injured. Reid and Quesnel are also badly hurt.

The steamer Saginaw and wrecking outfit of the Donnelly Company of this city will leave to-day for the scene to restore the machinery blown overboard, right the drill scow and bring the outfit to Kingston for an overhauling.

Lightning Destroys Three Barns.

BROCKVILLE, July 11.—Reports are coming in of destruction wrought by the big electrical storm which passed over this section. Three barns were burned in Leeds County, two near Elgin, belonging to Hayward Ripley and J. Dwyer, and another at Phillipsville. W. C. Stevens was the heaviest loser. His structure and contents were valued at $4,000, with only $1,500 insurance. Ripley lost five head of cattle and one horse.

Pranks of Bolt.

NEWBURGH, N.Y., July 11.—A barn on the farm of Lester Clark, near here, was struck by lightning Wednesday. The bolt shocked four horses, knocking them down. They are all deaf as a result.

Frank Birdsall, a farm hand, was knocked down, the lightning passing through a pitchfork he held, and the soles being burned from his shoes.

The side of the barn was knocked out, and the roof was torn off a box stall. The current followed a wire clothes line to a chicken house, then down an iron rope inside a well curb, following the pipe to the farmhouse, broke every pane in one of the windows, entered the room, shattered the telephone and broke a lighted lamp, which set fire to the house. The flames were extinguished before much damage was done.

ROWELL ENTERS N. GREY.

Liberal Leader Addresses Meeting at Shallow Lake.

OWEN SOUND, July 11.—Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., provincial Liberal leader, made his first appearance in the riding of North Grey during the present bye-election campaign last night, speaking to a large audience in the open air at Shallow Lake.

Mr. Rowell confined his discussion to the needs of agriculture, social and industrial legislation, tax reform and the temperance issue.

Mr. McQuaker, the Liberal candidate, made his appeal for the support of the electors on his extensive municipal experience and business standing in the community, and decried the tendency on the part of the Whitney Government towards centralization of authority.

Hanna-Proudfoot Debate.

OWEN SOUND, July 11.—Any doubts as to the success of the negotiations between the local Conservatives and Liberals for the meeting of Hon. W. J. Hanna and Wm. Proudfoot debate were finally removed yesterday when the secretary of the North Grey Conservative Association wrote Secretary R. Patterson of the Liberal Association accepting all the terms suggested by the Liberals with regard to the Proudfoot-Hanna meeting.

Mr. Proudfoot will have an hour in which to present his charges and Mr. Hanna another hour in which to reply.

PISTOL SHOT IN THE HOUSE

Militants Made Themselves Known During Session

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, July 11.—The report of a pistol shot, accompanied by yells of "Justice for women," startled members of the House of Commons in session to-day. At the same time a shower of pamphlets inscribed "Votes for the Women," some of them wrapped around toy mouse traps descended on to the floor of the house. Two persons in the gallery were arrested and detained. Later it was found the pistol was only a toy.

Financial assistance was give to 18 local horse shows and 37 local poultry shows.

THE COFFINS, OF THE GRAND VIZIER, AND HIS AIDE-DE-CAMP.

Imposing scenes were witnessed at the funeral of Mahmud Shefket Pacha, Turkish Grand Vizier and Minister of War, who was assassinated in Constantinople. Above the heads of those in the cortège one saw two coffins, carried at arm's length, according to the Mussulman custom, both covered with red satin, richly embroidered with green and gold. The first was the Grand Vizier, the second the aide-de-camp. The above photograph shows the coffins of the Grand Vizier and his aide-de-camp before the Mosque of St. Sophia, Constantinople.

VETERAN EDITOR PASSES AWAY

John V. Ellis Was Outstanding Figure in Eastern Ontario

ST. JOHN, N.B., July 11.—Hon. John V. Ellis, Dominion Senator, died early yesterday afternoon, in his 78th year.

Senator Ellis achieved distinction in the discussion of the Senate on the Borden naval bill in May last, when he was the only Liberal Senator to support the Government bill.

"Hon. John Valentine Ellis, LL.D., was born at Halifax. After a public school education he entered the newspaper business, and since 1862 was editor of The St. John Globe. He was elected to the New Brunswick Assembly in 1882 and 1886, and in 1887 became member of Parliament for St. John City. Defeated in 1891, he was elected in 1896. He was called to the Senate in 1900.

In 1897 he received the honorary degree of LL.D. from New Brunswick University.

He was a writer and speaker of note in the Maritime Provinces on national topics.

In the death of Senator Ellis Canadian newspaperdom loses its veteran exponent, possibly the last of the old-fashioned Henry Watterson type of editor, rapidly losing ground in modern journalism, where diverse personalities dominate a newspaper. In the school to which he belonged the editor was the sole excuse for a newspaper. For 52 years he had been continually the editor and proprietor of The St. John Globe, and was credited with being the oldest daily newspaper editor on the continent.

When first he took charge of The St. John Globe he championed the unpopular cause of the North against the South in the American Civil War. He also stoutly fought Canadian Confederation. In 1887 he was the storm centre of one of the biggest sensations ever connected with the newspaper profession in Canada. He was convicted of contempt of court for having criticized the action of one of the judges of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick and was sentenced to 30 days' imprisonment and a fine of $200 and costs. He served his time, but on his release was made the object of one of the most tremendous ovations ever accordred a man in St. John, the Lieutenant-Governor of the province and the mayor of St. John being among those who combined to make the event an expression of the popular dissent from the judgment of the court.

Senator Ellis was a Mason of highest degree, having been grand master of the A. F. and A. M. in New Brunswick, and having held the highest office in Canada in Arch Masonry, in the Knights Templar and in the Scottish Rite. While in England in 1907 he was granted a special audience by King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra.

INDIANS DO TANGO.

Young Nevada Redmen Too Civilized For the Old Dances.

RENO, Nev., July 11.—From all sections of Nevada, in many instances necessitating a long and arduous travel of upwards of 200 miles, the Shoshone tribes, numbering 1,000, have gathered in Elko county for their annual five-day fandango, a fete held in accordance with ancient custom.

The dancing features are notable, and presents an unexpected scene for the first time in Indian history, when it is observed that while the older Indians engaged in the traditional tribal dances, with their weird chants and monotonous discordant sounds from their native musical instruments, the younger generation has repudiated the old tribal generations, and up on an improvised platform with modern music engaged with manifest enthusiasm in the modern gyrations of the "rag" which they had learned with various success, and their exhibitions of "turkey trotting," "bunny hugging" and "two stepping" is amusing.

Montreal Woman Sues For $50,000.

BOSTON, July 11.—The first suit brought in the Massachusetts courts for loss of life on the steamer Titanic was entered in the Superior Court by counsel for Mrs. Marie Wiseman of Montreal, who for the benefit of herself and her six children, seeks to recover $50,000 from the Oceanic Steam Navigation Co., Ltd., for the loss of the life of [illegible] Wiseman, her husband.

Turkey respected investments during the critical economic condition during the late war, and the capital, which it is sought to interest, will be used in the development of the country. Turkey is not planning for conquest, and will devote only indispensible sums to defence."

The magnificent site has been purchased by a syndicate, the governors of the hospital at a meeting yesterday afternoon agreeing to the sale, which has been the subject of negotiations for years.

HALF-DEMENTED MAN IS MISSING AFTER CRIME

Fifteen Year Old Girl is is Murdered

WINNIPEG, July 11.—The murdered body of Dora Evelyn Inman, the 15-year-old daughter of Fred. Inman, was found at Canton, Manitoba, a village on the Arbog branch of the C.P.R., 35 miles north of here, Wednesday night.

The girl was employed on the farm of W. C. Ross, and on Dominion Day started to visit her parents. Towards evening she left the home of her parents to return to the farm, and had not been seen since. Her disappearance was unknown to either her parents or employers, the one believing that she was at the home of the other.

A half-demented [illegible] in the vicinity, and considered harmless, has been missing for the past few days, and it is alleged it was he who committed the crime. The child fought hard for her life, as there was evidence around of a struggle, and the victim was dragged a matter of hundreds of yards into the bush. The unknown suspect is still at large.

DYING MAN PLANS SUIT.

Victim of Burns Instructs Wife In Procedure To Get Damages.

CINCINNATI, July 11.—Although suffering from burns which he overheard physicians say would prove fatal in three hours, Peter Schlagengeil, brewery worker, spent his last conscious hours in the City Hospital instructing members of his family how to prepare a claim against the brewery on account of his death, caused when burning pitch overflowed. The widow of the dead man in testifying at the coroner's inquest said:

"When I saw how he was burned, I became frantic and wept and he said to me, 'Can't you be sensible and calm yourself? I want you to sit down so I can give you full details of the accident.' He then told me just what happened and explained fully how to proceed after his death."

THE "GLOBE" AND HON. SAM. HUGHES

Mr. G. H. Chesterton in the Illustrated London News quotes Dr. Samuel Johnson where he says: "Why, sir, strickly speaking, physical courage is not a Christian virtue. Nevertheless a christian man should cultivate it; for he who has lost that virtue can never be certain of preserving any other."

Mr Chesterton goes on to say that "In our refined age not only is courage not called christian, but cowardice is actually called christianity. Of course every christian man, if be sane, thinks that peace is better than war."

Mr. Norman Angell, the apostle of peace at any price, has been to a great deal of trouble demonstrating the theory that war never did any one any good, and that not only is it wicked, but that it is futile and unprofitable even to the victors.

No one would have much difficulty in setting out to prove that war was a horrible business, and that it was a foolish expedient to settle any dispute. All this might be granted, along with this further fact, that we live in an unreasonable and foolish world.

Canada, for instance, is basking to-day in the sunshine of peace and prosperity, and it may well go on basking till the crack of doom if—and there is an "if" in every earthly Paradise.

The Globe does not think so. It delights itself, if not its readers, with perky little paragraphs at the expense of our Chief of Militia, the Hon. Sam Hughes, whose indefatigable labors in training a young nation in the art of self-defence, it says are unnecessary and a waste of time and money.

National courage and vigilance may not be christian virtues, but the nation that neglects its physical bulwarks, and does not cultivate a spirit of manly vigor and independence of its young people, will become flabby and insipid, and dependent upon virile nations for its defence and in an evil day will find itself at the mercy of some unscrupulous foe.

Canada can lose nothing, but has everything to gain by its cultivation of the spirit of courage and preparedness among the young life of the nation, if she is to become a nation at all, and not a mere parasite on the Mother Country.

RECIPROCITY WITH THE MOTHER LAND

That there is room for great improvement in the commercial relations between Canada and the Mother-land is shown by an article in the London Times. Canada is buying from the United States four times the value of articles that she is buying from Great Britain.

All this notwithstanding the fact that the United States sets up a high wall of tariff against Canadian goods while Great Britain opens her markets to our products free. If American goods were of a better quality there might be some excuse for this state of things, but it is a well known fact that British manufacturers are by far the finest in the world.

There may be something to be said upon this question of the adaptability of the British manufacturers to the requirements of the Canadian market. Canada, to a large extent has naturally imitated the habits and customs of her neighbour, and therefore buys in the shop which supplies goods most suited to her acquired tastes.

For instance, the Canadian uses articles of stone and glass-ware which are unknown in the domestic life of the Mother-land. In some cases the British manufacturer has supplied the goods demanded, but he is in many cases too slow to obey orders and cannot see why Canadians should require things that he can get along very well without.

It is "up to" the British producer to make himself more intimately acquainted with Canadian life by studying our conditions nad requirements. This can only be done by sending enterprising representatives out to this country and so keeping in constant touch with the Canadian market.

Reciprocity with the Mother-land is a duty which Canada owes to the people who bear the burden of a navy which ensures the safety of her coasts on the two oceans as well as for the where-with-all to develope here western provinces.

THE ARISTOCRACY OF PRIVILEGE

Canadians, as well as the people of every other country, are vastly interested in the breach of promise cases against the young scions of the British aristocracy. These are the suits by actresses who lead their young lordships into making compromising assertions of affection, or some promise of marriage. The actresses take good care to get evidence that looks good in court, preferably something in writing referring to the offer of marriage. The latest case to stir London society is that of the young Marquis of Northampton, who though only 27 has had to settle with an actress named Daisy Markham for $250,000.

The young Marquis told the young laady of the footlights that she would always be his ideal, his beautiful dream. He could not marry her, because he had given his promise to his father to break away from the idea, but he was her broken-hearted Bim."

When the offer of $50,000 was made, most people acquainted with the details of the affair thought Miss Markham was making a pretty good haul. But rumors that the affair would be very spicy, and develop some real scandal got about, and gradually the Marquis had to come up. He is said to have an income of $50,000 a year, so his dabble into the "actresstocracy" has cost him six months' salary. The previous highest settlement was $50,000, which was given by Viscount Garmoyle many years ago. But these suits that get into court are nothing to those which are settled out of court. The "actresstocracy" seems to have greater attraction for the British nobility than the American heiresses have for the European blue-blooded paupers. It almost makes one want to forgive the British aristocracy when one sees the youngsters in it trying to marry some brains.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The village of Tweed is making a bold bid for fame, and is advertising its fishing facilities, its general natural beauties and attractions as a holiday resort. No one who has visited Tweed, or even passed through on the C.P.R. can help wishing the village every success in its enterprise; it is certainly one of the most delightful spots in the eastern counties—after Peterborough.

A writer informs us that it is possible for an echo to be louder than the sound that produced it—under certain conditions. This is very interesting and may go far to explain the reputations of some modern poets — and statesmen.

"Never take two bites at a cherry," says an old proverb, it is not easy to follow this advice just now, cherries are ripe, but they are pretty expensive. The robins must be having a good time in the orchards.

The lumbering industry was not so active throughout the Maritime Provinces this year, owing to the rapid drop of water in the streams. Several million feet of logs being held up by low water.

THE RULING PASSION.

The Amazon in days of old displayed
A man-like vigor on the battle-field,
But, none the less, ere fighting she surveyed
Her features in her shield!

The modern maid who also yearns to face
Some day, if need arise, her country's foes,
Would she not, ere the battle, pause and place
Some powder on her nose?

LUCKY YOUNGSTERS.

Some of Britain's Little Heirs to Vast Tracts of Land.

Who is the luckiest youngster in Britain? Examination of the peerage reveals many interesting cases of boys of tender years who will one day inherit vast riches, estates, and great family honors, the most fortunate, perhaps, being the five-year-old Earl of Arundel and Surrey, the son of the Duke of Norfolk, who is heir to both his father's and mother's estates. The Duke of Norfolk owns 50,000 acres in some of the fairest English counties, his rent roll exceeding a quarter of a million a year, while the Duchess of Norfolk—Baroness Herries in her own right—owns 18,900 acres.

The duke is one of London's great landowners, owning a considerable slice of the southeast side of the Strand, and, according to a competent authority, the rent roll of this land a couple of decades ago was £52,000. New buildings in Norfolk and Surrey streets have immeasurably augmented the rent roll, which has probably increased threefold in value.

A year previous to the birth of the Earl of Arundel and Surrey a son was born to the Marquis of Bute, "the uncrowned king of Cardiff," as he has been called, whose father left the enormous fortune of £6,000,000. His son and heir, the Earl of Dumfries, a bright little youngster of six years of age, will inherit vast estates which cover 117,000 acres, in addition to many titles. Lord Bute is the wealthiest peer in Scotland, although he does not possess quite so many acres as the Earl of Dalhousie, who came into the title, an income of over £50,000 a year, and about 138,000 acres of land, when a boy of nine. His son and heir is Lord Ramsay, who was born in 1904.

Two more instances of vast fortunes which will descend to lucky youngsters, not only from their fathers, but also from their mothers, are afforded by the cases of the Marquis of Blandford, son of the Duke of Marlborough, who is now sixteen years of age, and Viscount Mandeville, son of the Duke of Manchester, who was born eleven years ago. The Duke of Manchester owns some 70,000 acres of land, and is also possessor of four country residences, two in England and two in Ireland. His wife, Miss Helena Zimmerman, daughter of an American railway magnate, whom he married in 1900, brought much wealth to the Manchester family. With two exceptions the Duke of Marlborough is the smallest of ducal landowners. He possesses about 26,500 acres of land the revenue being given at £36,000.

Quite a number of heirs to large estates were born in 1894, the same year as the Prince of Wales, and such names as Lord Whitchester, grandson and heir, after his father, to the dukedom of Buccleuch and Queensburg, occur to one readily, says The Ladies' Field. The duke is easily the biggest landlord in Britain. He owns 460,000 acres, mostly in Scotland, and much of it is barren land. The Earl of Hillsborough, born in 1894, son of the Marquis of Downshire, will inherit some day 120,000 acres. A great many acres of his future property are in Ireland and some in Berkshire.

A Story of Sardou.

It happened at the Athenee in 1893. We were rehearsing the "Salome" of Armand Silvestre and Gabriel Pierne. Behind the scenes one day I encountered a man with an enormous muffler which went several times around his neck and a tall hat of a style that came down over his ears. I chatted with him in the indifferent French I had at command, and this without knowing who he was. While talking to him I noticed a hole in his shoe. He was aware of my discovery, I suppose, for he said to me: "I had that hole made expressly. I prefer a hole in my shoe to a pain in my foot.' This man was Victorien Sardou.

Ended Life In Second Attempt.

ST. CATHARINES, July 11.—Joseph Cook, a former resident of Thorold, ended his life yesterday with a revolver.

He told his Thorold friends he intended killing himself. He had tried a few days ago, but was deterred. Then he said, "I'll try again and succeed. I am tired of life and have nothing to live for." He formerly worked on the canal. He was 55 years of age.

Police Officials Accused.

MEDICINE HAT, Alta., July 11.—Sensational charges against Magistrate Kealy and Chief of Police Bruce have been made by Sergt. Campey. Manipulation of funds entrusted to them is the basis of the charge. At a late hour last night Campey, who was on night duty, was dismissed. An investigation into police matters will likely follow.

LIFE INSURANCE

THE pessimist and the prophet of woe have no rightful place, in any consideration of the expediency of insuring life. But certain hard facts should be squarely faced by every man of moderate means who has anyone dependent on him. Hundreds of men are yearly rejected for life insurance who would have been accepted had they not delayed their applications until ill health had come upon them. Why do men in good condition take such a long chance of remaining well? It is an impressive fact that out of 8549 holders of policies in a leading life insurance company who died in the past year, only 64 died of old age. The remainder were carried away by disease or accident. Hence the wisdom of insuring early in life. The best years for saving are from 20 to 40, and no man should let that period pass without taking out an insurance policy. For that part of his career an endowment policy, which is likely to mature while he is still living and can secure the proceeds of it himself, is to be preferred.

There will probably always be poor old men, their ranks will be recruited from the successful men of an earlier date, and fortunate is he who has made certain provision by means of endowment insurance in the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

CY WHITTAKER'S PLACE

By JOSEPH C. LINCOLN

Copyright, 1908, by D. Appleton & Co.

"Yes, yes; she shall be. She shall not be disturbed. Is there anything else I can do?"

"Why, yes, I guess there is. Speakin' of popularity made me think of it. That harbor appropriation had better go through."

A very faint tinge of color came into the congressman's chalky face. He hesitated in his reply.

"I—I don't know about that, Cyrus," he said. "The bill will probably be voted on in a few days. It is made up and"—

"Then I'd strain a p'int and make it over. I'd work real hard on it. I'm sorry about that sugar river, but I cal'late Bayport 'll have to come first. Yes, it'll have to, Heman; it sartin will."

The reference to the "sugar river" was the final straw. Evidently this man knew everything.

"I—I'll try my best," affirmed Heman. "Thank you, Cyrus. You have been more merciful than I had a right to expect."

"Yes, I guess I have. Why do I do it?" He smiled and shook his head. "Well, I don't know. For two reasons maybe—first, I'd hate to be responsible for tippin' over such a sky towerin' idol as you've been to make ruins for Angie Phinney and the other blackbirds to peck at and caw over, and, second—well, it does sound presumin', don't it? But I kind of pity you. Say, Heman," he added, with a chuckle, "that's a kind of distinction in a way, ain't it? A good many folks have hurrahed over you and worshiped you. Some of 'em, I guess likely, have envied you; but, by the big dipper, I do believe I'm the only one in this round world that ever pitied you! Goodby! The elevator's right down the hall."

It required some resolution for the Honorable Atkins to walk down that corridor and press the elevator button. But he did it somehow. A guest came out of one of the rooms and approached him as he stood there. It was a man he knew. Heman squared his shoulders and set every nerve and muscle.

"Good evening, Mr. Atkins," said the man. "A miserable night, isn't it?"

"Miserable, indeed," replied the congressman. The strength in his voice surprised him. The man passed on. Heman descended in the elevator and walked steadily through the crowded lobby and out to the curb, where his cab was waiting. The driver noticed nothing strange in his fare's appearance. He noticed nothing strange when the Atkins residence was reached and its tenant mounted the stone steps and opened the door with his latchkey. But if he had seen the dignified form collapse in a library chair and moan and rock back and forth until the morning hours he would have wondered very much indeed.

Meanwhile Captain Cy, coughing and shivering by the radiator, had been summoned from that warm haven by a knock at his door. A bellboy stood at the threshold, holding a brown envelope in his hand.

"The clerk sent this up to you, sir," he said. "It came a week ago. When you went away you didn't leave any address, and whatever letters came for you were sent back to Bayport, Mass. The clerk says you registered from there, sir. But he kept this telegram. It was in your box, and the day clerk forgot to give it to you this afternoon."

The captain tore open the envelope. The telegram was from his lawyer, Mr. Peabody. It was dated a week before and read as follows:

Come home at once. Important.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE blizzard began that night. Bayport has a generous allowance of storms and gales during a winter, although, as a usual thing, there is more rain than snow and more wind than either. But we can count with certainty on at least one blizzard between November and April, and about the time when Captain Cy, feverish and ill, the delayed telegram in his pocket and a great fear in his heart, boarded the sleeper of the eastbound train at Washington, snow was beginning to fall in our village.

Next morning, when Georgianna came downstairs to prepare Bos'n's breakfast—the housekeeper had ceased to "go home nights" since the captain's absence—the world outside was a tumbled, driving whirl of white. The woodshed and barn, dimly seen through the smother, were but gray shapes, emerging now and then only to be wiped from the vision as by a great flapping cloth wielded by the mighty hand of the wind. The old house shook in the blasts, the window panes rattled as if handfuls of small shot were being thrown against them, and the carpet on the floor of the dining room puffed up in miniature billows.

School was out of the question, and Bos'n, her breakfast eaten, prepared to put in a cozy day with her dolls and Christmas playthings.

"When do you s'pose Uncle Cyrus will get home?" she asked of the housekeeper. She had asked the same thing at least three times a day during the fortnight, and Georgianna's answer was always just as unsatisfactory:

"I don't know, dearie, I'm sure. He'll be here pretty soon, though, don't you fret."

"Oh, I ain't going to fret. I know he'll come. He said he would, and Uncle Cy always does what he says he will."

About 12 Asaph made his appearance, a white statue.

"Godfrey scissors!" he panted, shaking his snow plastered cap over the coal hod. "Say, this is one of 'em, ain't it? Don't know's I ever see more of a one. Drift out by the front fence pretty nigh up to my waist. This'll be a nasty night along the Orham beach. The life savers 'll have their hands full. Whew! I'm about tuckered out."

"Been to the postoffice?" asked Georgianna in a low tone.

"Yup. I been there. Mornin' mail just this minute sorted. Train's two hours late. Gabe says more'n likely the evenin' train won't be able to get through at all if this keeps up."

"Was there anything from"—

Mr. Tidditt glanced at Bos'n and shook his head.

"Not a word," he said. "Funny, ain it? It don't seem a bit like him. And he can't be to Washin'ton, because all them letters came back. I—I swan to man, I'm beginnin' to get worried."

"Worried? I'm pretty nigh crazy! What does Phoebe Dawes say?"

"She don't say much. It's pretty tough, when everything else is workin' out so fine, thanks to her, to have this happen. No; she don't say much, but she acts pretty solemn."

"Say, Mr. Tidditt?"

"Yes—what is it?"

"You don't s'pose anything that happened betwixt her and Cap'n Whittaker that afternoon is responsible for—for his stayin' away so, do you? You know what he told me to tell her—about her not comin' here?"

Asaph fidgeted with the wet cap.

"Aw, that ain't nothin'," he stammered—"that is, I hope it ain't. I did say somethin' to him that—but Phoebe understands. She's a smart woman."

"You haven't told them boardin' house tattletales about the—Emmie, you go fetch me a card of matches from the kitchen, won't you—of what's been found out about that Thomas thing?"

"Course I ain't. Didn't Peabody say not to tell a soul till we was sure? S'pose I'd tell Keturah and Angie? Might's well paint it on a sign and be done with it. No, no! I've kept mum, and you do the same. Well, I must be goin'. Hope to goodness we hear some good news from Whit by tomorrer."

But when tomorrow came news of any kind was unobtainable. No trains could get through, and the telephone and telegraph wires were out of commission owing to the great storm. Bayport was buried under a white coverlet three feet thick on a level, which shone in the winter sun as if powdered with diamond dust. The street shoveling brigade, meaning most of the active male citizens, was busy with plows and shovels. Simmons' was deserted in the evening, for most of the regular habitues went to bed after supper tired out.

Two days of this; then Gabe Lumley, his depot wagon replaced by a sleigh, drove the panting Daniel into the yard of the Cy Whittaker place. Gabe was much excited. He had news of importance to communicate and was puffed up in consequence.

"The wire's all right again, Georgianna," he said to the housekeeper, who had hurried to the door to meet him. "Fust message just come through. Guess who it's for?"

"Stop your foolishness, Gabe Lumley!" ordered Miss Taylor. "Hand over that telegram this minute! Don't you stop to talk! Hand it over!"

Gabe didn't intend to be "corked" thus peremptorily.

"It's pretty important news, Georgianna," he declared. "Kind of bad news too. I think I'd ought to prepare you for it sort of. When Cap'n Obed Pepper died I"—

"Died! For the land sakes! What are you sayin'? Give me that, you fool head! Give it to me!"

She snatched the telegram from him and tore it open. It was not as bad as it might have been, but it was bad enough. Lawyer Peabody wired that Captain Cyrus Whittaker was at his home in Ostable sick in bed and threatened with pneumonia.

Captain Cy, hurrying homeward in response to the attorney's former telegram, had reached Boston the day of the blizzard. He had taken the train for Bayport that afternoon. The train had reached Ostable after 9 o'clock that night, but could get no farther. The captain, burning with fever and torn by chills, had wallowed through the drifts to his lawyer's home and collapsed on his doorstep. Now he was very ill and at times delirious.

For two weeks he lay, fighting off the threatened attack of pneumonia. But he won the fight, and at last word came to the anxious ones at Bayport that he was past the danger point and would pull through. There was rejoicing at the Cy Whittaker place. The board of strategy came and performed an impromptu war dance around the dining room table.

"Whe-e-e!" shouted Bailey Bangs, tossing Bos'n above his head. "Your Uncle Cy's weathered the Horn and is bound for clear water now. Three cheers for our side! Won't we give him a reception when we get him back here!"

"Won't we!" crowed Asaph. "Well, I just guess we will! You ought to hear Angie and the rest of 'em chant hymns of glory about him. A body 'd think they always knew he was the salt of the earth. Maybe I don't rub it in a little, hey? Oh, no, maybe not!"

"And Heman!" chimed in Mr. Bangs. "And Heman! Would you ever believe he'd change so all of a sudden? Bully old Whit! I can mention his name now without Ketury's landin' on to me like a snowslide. Whee! I say wh-e-e-e!"

He continued to say it, and Georgianna and Asaph said what amounted to the same thing. A change had come over our Bayport social atmosphere, a marvelous change. And at Simmons' and—more wonderful still—at Tad Simpson's barber shop plans were being made and perfected for proceedings in which Cyrus Whittaker was to play the most prominent part.

Meanwhile the convalescence went on at a rapid rate. As soon as he was permitted to talk Captain Cy began to question his lawyer. How about the appeal? Had Atkins done anything further? The answers were satisfactory. The case had been dropped—the Honorable Heman had announced its withdrawal. He had said that he had changed his mind and should not continue to espouse the Thomas cause. In fact, he seemed to have whirled completely about on his pedestal and, like a compass, now pointed only in one direction—toward his "boyhood friend" and present neighbor, Cyrus Whittaker.

"It's perfectly astounding," commented Peabody. "What in the world, captain, did you do to him while you were in Washington?"

"Oh, nothin' much," was the rather disinterested answer. "Him and me had a talk, and he saw the error of his ways, I cal'late. How's Bos'n today? Did you give her my love when you phoned?"

"So far as the case is concerned," went on the lawyer, "I think we should have won that, anyway. It's a curious thing. Thomas has disappeared. How he got word or who he got it from I don't know, but he must have, and he's gone somewhere, no one knows where. And yet I'm not certain that we were on the right trail. It seemed certain a week ago, but now"—

The captain had not been listening. He was thinking. Thomas had gone, had he? Good! Heman was living up to his promises. And Bos'n, God bless her, was free from that danger.

"Have you heard from Emmie? I asked you," he repeated.

He would not listen to anything further concerning Thomas either then or later. He was sick of the whole business, he declared, and now that everything was all right didn't wish to talk about it again. He asked nothing about the appropriation, and the lawyer, acting under strict orders, did not mention it.

Only once did Captain Cy inquire concerning a person in his home town who was not a member of his household.

"How is—er—how's the teacher?" he inquired one morning.

"How's who?"

"Why, Phoebe Dawes, the schoolteacher. Smart, is she?"

"Yes, indeed. Why, she has been the most"—

The doctor came in just then, and the interview terminated. It was not resumed, because that afternoon Mr. Peabody started for Boston on a business trip, to be gone some time.

And at last came the great day, the day when Captain Cy was to be taken home. He was up and about, had been out for several short walks and was very nearly his own self again. He was in good spirits, too, at times, but had fits of seeming depression which under the circumstances were unexplainable. The doctor thought they were due to his recent illness and forbade questioning.

The original plan had been for the captain to go to Bayport in the train, but the morning set for his departure was such a beautiful one that Mr. Peabody, who had the day before returned from the city, suggested driving over. So the open carriage, drawn by the Peabody "span," was brought around to the front steps, and the captain, bundled up until, as he said, he felt like a wharf rat inside a cotton bale, emerged from the house which had sheltered him for a weary month and climbed to the back seat. The attorney got in beside him.

"All ashore that's goin' ashore," observed Captain Cy. Then to the driver, who stood by the horses' heads, he added: "Stand by to get ship under way, commodore. I'm homeward bound, and there's a little messmate of mine waitin' on the dock already, I wouldn't wonder. So don't hang around these waters no longer 'n you can help."

But Mr. Peabody smiled and laid a hand on his shoulder.

A LONG, COLD GLASS OF

"SALADA"

Iced Tea will be found most refreshing in hot weather: as cooling as a summer breeze.

Sealed Lead Packets Only.

Allow the tea to steep for five minutes and then pour off into another vessel to cool gradually. Never use artificial means of cooling until ready to serve; then add sugar, ice and lemon.

Saving Surplus Potatoes.

An attempt is being made in Germany to save the 5,000,000 tons of potatoes lost annually in that country through lack of immediate market by desiccating, or drying the vegetable, so that it may be preserved in usable form.

Pressure is used to withdraw the bulk of the water from the potato and artificial heat dries the resulting "meal." This meal has one-quarter of the original weight and occupies one-eighth the space. It tastes and smells somewhat like newly made bread. It may be used or kept in this condition for considerable periods. Pressed into cakes, it is used for animal food. In practice three and eight-tenths tons of potatoes yield about one ton of potato meal at a cost of about 56 cents a ton. Twelve cents a ton added for pressing makes the cost of the cake 68 cents, which is not high for fodder of such quality.

Oderous Explosives.

The suggestion is made that a law be passed compelling all manufacturers of explosives, especially nitroglycerine, dynamite and others of this class used for bombs, to impregnate these materials with some strong smelling substance. It is believed that the presence of the explosive would be revealed to everybody near it and that it would be impossible to store, manufacture, transport or manipulate it in any way secretly. It would be its own detective in case of crime committed with it. It is suggested that something of the nature of iodoform would answer.

At least 95 per cent. of the O.A.C. students return to the farm.

A CHANGE IN THE SITUATION

Firemen Had Two Calls Last Evening and One This Morning

In yesterday's issue it was stated that the firemen were not very busy but the paper was hardly off the press till they were rushed.

At 4.55 a telephone call summoned them to a fire in a barn at the rear of 220 King street, belonging to John Clancy. It is supposed that the cause of the blaze was children playing with matches. The firemen laid two strings of hose from nearby hydrants and succeeded in extinguishing the blaze and confining the damage to about $100.

While this fire was at its height a call came from box 48 for a grass fire on Water street near Hilliard street. The grass was burning as was also a fence and the people around thought it might set fire to the frame house in the vicinity. The Chief dispatched three men in the buggy and they succeeded in extinguishing the blaze.

This morning at 8.15 an alarm was sent in from box 23 for a fire at 411 1-2 George street. The property is owned by Mr. Jas. Long and Mrs. E. Lee is the tenant. The tenant is a dressmaker and last night when finished with the electric iron she failed to uncouple the plug from the socket. The result was that enough current leaked through to heat the iron and the iron set fire to the ironing board and table. There was very little damage.

A JOB FOR THE POLICE

Strange Actions of Man in Victoria Park

The residents near Victoria Park are very indignant over the actions of a man whose behaviour and mysterious actions in the park yesterday afternoon caused several residents along the park to become convinced that the man was fit for an asylum. The man who is described as of medium height, clean shaven, dressed in a blue suit, straw hat and tan shoes was recognized as the same person who visited the park last year. His actions are also similar.

Besides his behaviour in the park he also entered a yard and commenced writing on the fence across from the park, but was ordered out by the lady occupant of the house. The police have been notified.

THE RULES OF THE ROAD

Points Worth Knowing When Driving on the Public Highway

The rules of the road imposed by the statutes of the Province of Ontario are of interest to highway engineers in that they represent the most reasonable as well as the most modern solution of a difficult and contentious problem. The main features are:

1. When two vehicles meet on the highway, each driver shall turn to his right-hand side, allowing the other vehicle one-half of the road.

2. A vehicle or horse when overtaken on the highway shall turn out to the right and allow the overtaking vehicle or horseman to pass on his left-hand side.

2. A person overtaking a vehicle or horseman in passing shall turn to the left-hand side sufficiently far to avoid collision, the person overtaken to leave at least one-half of the road free.

4. In the case of a bicycle or tricycle the foregoing rules apply, except that the bicycle or tricycle can require only sufficient room on the travelled portion of the highway to pass; also when overtaking a vehicle, the person on the bicycle or tricycle is to give audible warning of his approach before attempting to pass.

5. When a vehicle is so heavily loaded, that, when meeting or being overtaken the driver finds it impracticable to turn out, he shall immediately stop, and, if necessary for the safety of the other vehicle or if so required, he is to assist the person in charge to pass without damage.

6. A portable or traction engine is required, if practicable, to give half of the road, and to remain stationary until a horseman or horse-drawn vehicle has passed. The engine is to stop at a distance of not less than one hundred feet from the vehicle, and assistance is to be given to the driver of the horse, if so required.

7. Between sunset and sunrise, a traction engine on the highway is to be preceded by a person carrying a light.

8. Between sunset and sunrise a red light is to be carried on the front of an engine, and a green light on the rear.

9. The speed of motor vehicles is restricted to 15 miles an hour within a city, town or village, and to 20 miles an hour on country roads.

10. Motor vehicles are not to be driven recklessly at any speed or in any manner dangerous to the public, having regard to all circumstances and the amount of traffic on the highway at the time.

11. The driver of a motor vehicle is to exercise every reasonable precaution to prevent frightening of horses driven on the highway.

12. A motor is not to pass a horse drawn vehicle outside of the limits of a city or town at a greater speed than 7 miles an hour.

13. Should a horse appear to be frightened, or upon signal to do so, the driver of a motor vehicle is to stop and take such steps as will enable the horse-drawn vehicle to pass in safety.

It is well for the highway engineer to be not only familiar with his road, but with the laws controlling the traffic thereon.

AT STONEY LAKE

Dr. Willoughby and family are located for the season at their new cottage, "Boschink." They have a new gasoline yacht, "Ilgowego" powered with a three-cylinder, eighteen horse-power motor, which drives it about twelve miles an hour.

Mr. Robert Neil has a new gasoline yacht, built after the model of the "Black Arrow," and powered with a Peterborough engine of six horsepower.

Next to Peterborough, Toronto sends the largest number of visitors to Stoney Lake. This part of the Kawarthas is becoming more popular each year with an increasing number of residents from the Queen City.

Mrs. Weller and family, of Jersey City, have opened their cottage on "Wee Island" for the season.

Rev. Mr. Bingham and family, of Toronto, are occupying Mr. H. W. Stock's cottage, "Stockholme," for the month of July. Last season they resided at "Ivanhoe."

CHARGED WITH TRESPASSING

Seven Havelock Youths to Appear in Court

Information has been laid before Magistrate Dumble by a C.P.R. detective against seven Havelock youths charging them with trespassing on C.P.R. property and also for setting fire to the grass. The case will be tried in Havelock some time next week.

OBITUARY

The seventh of July, nineteen thirteen, marked the passing of one of the world's pioneers of industry in the person of Joseph Storrs Fry, of Bristol, England.

Mr. Fry was born in 1826 in the historic City of Bristol. As a business man of remarkably comprehensive breadth of view and sagacity of detail, Mr. Fry's death will be a matter of sincere regret to his world-wide business associates. For 70 years, without a break, he applied his successful endeavours to the building up of a business which is now second to none in the Cocoa world. As a philanthropist, Mr. Fry exhibited a generosity of the highest order—indeed it would be difficult to judge the full extent of his beneficence. In private life he was distinguished by his kindly oldworld courtesy which was extended to rich and poor alike, a quality which is unfortunately fast disappearing in the stress of modern business and social life.

IMPROVEMENTS AT MAY'S SCHOOL

REV. J. R. BLACK HAS RESIGNED

His Statement Came as Big Surprise to Congregation

Last Sunday Rev. J. R. Black intimated to his congregations at Harwood and Roseneath that he had submitted his resignation of the pastoral charge to the Presbytery at Peterborough. His act caused surprise and much regret in both places. Mr. Black has labored in this field for the past four and a half years, and during this period much has been accomplished. At the Bethseda church a large closed-in shed, costing nearly $1,000, has been erected. Steel roofs have been placed on the church and manse, new fences have been built, and the manse grounds greatly improved. All for so that the property is to-day for so that the property is to-day free from debt. Side by side with these outward improvements, the congregation has steadily held its own numerically, notwithstanding the drift towards the west and the towns. We understand that it is Mr. Black's intention to return to journalism, a sphere in which he passed several successful years prior to coming to Harwood.—Hastings Star.

MR. R. R. HALL INTERVIEWED FOR VANCOUVER PAPER

Eastern Mauufactures in Canada Will be Benefited by the Panama Canal, He Says

"It is a mistake to think that only the people of Western Canada are interested in the completion of the Panama Canal, and that they alone among Canadians will reap benefits from the opening of that waterway. It will confer a benefit on the Eastern manufacturers and all business men who have interests in the West. All water competition is bound to have an effect in lowering transcontinental rates, and no doubt many products of the East and West of the Dominion will be interchanged via the canal."

The above observations were made by Mr. R. R. Hall, ex-M.P., of West Peterborough, in an interview with The Vancouver News-Advertiser. He has extensive lumber interests in this Province, being president of the Big Bend Lumber Company, which has limits on the Columbia River and Arrow Lakes, and an investor in several other lumber enterprises.

BENEFIT LUMBER.

"The opening of the canal," he continued, "should be of especial advantage to the lumbering industry of British Columbia. I am informed by no less an authority than the editor of The American Lumberman that the saving of freight rates on lumber shipped from the Pacific Coast to the Atlantic seaboard via the Panama Canal will be about $13 per thousand. This is on fir lumber. On cedar the saving would be somewhat less. The figure quoted will be the difference between the canal rate and the present railway haul. The cut will be from 75 cents to 80 cents per hundred pounds.

INSURANCE IS HIGH.

"The rate around the Horn is about 30 cents per hundred, but there is a very long and dangerous trip. Insurance on the cargo is high. Most of the risk will be obviated via the Panama Canal. Then again the latter route means that orders can be received much later and filled earlier than via the Horn. That is a consideration which will mean much to Eastern consumers. I look for a big impetus in the lumbering industry of this Province as soon as the canal is finished. Our saw mills on the Arrow Lakes were destroyed by fire some time ago. They will be rebuilt in time for the Panama Canal trade."

PLAY GARMENTS.

Sensible Hat and Frock For Child.

CHILD'S GINGHAM DRESS.

The play frock illustrated here is a substantial affair of plaid gingham with buttons down the front under a wide leather belt. The deep collar and shield of embroidery simulate a boy's sailor collar. The hat with its neat band and bow shades the face very sensibly.

Hats of all descriptions, from the simple sailor to the fancy straws trimmed with flowers and feathers, are being shown for little folks. The most desirable are the tailored hats, like the one shown here, trimmed with a small bow of choux of ribbon. For very young children many of the hats are faced in lace, chiffon or soft silk, which is considered very becoming.

Pressing a Suit.

To press a suit lay the article smoothly on the ironing board. Place over it a piece of goods that has no lint or fuzz on it. Lay this on dry. Have a basin of water. Use a sponge or soft brush with a handle, dip in water and rub over the cloth. Now iron. If upon lifting the cloth you find any shine put cloth on again wet and iron again, taking off the cloth this time before it is dry, and there will be no shine.

Pressing too dry will leave the shine, so be sure to take off the cloth while still damp. Never press wool goods of any kind on the right side without the damp cloth.

Collar and Cuff Sets.

Adjustable collar and cuffs, printed in colors on crepon and heavy linen, are smart accessories to dresses of plain color. Carrying an air of chic is a set of coarse gray linen, bordered with gay little flower bouquets.

TIME HAS BROUGHT GREAT CHANGES IN RIFLE RANGES

Many Years Ago the Local Volunteers Used Wooden and Iron Targets—Some History in Shooting

With the completion of the new rifle range to the east of the Lift Lock and the handing over of the same to the Militia Department, the Peterborough Garrison comes into possession of one of the finest ranges in Ontario, and it can be expected that interest in shooting will be revived and that the local regiment will once more win laurels.

Peterborough marksmen have done exceedingly well in the past. In the early days of the volunteers, local marksmen took second place to none, and, in many keen competitions at the crude targets of by-gone days, the local shots made a name for themselves and brought glory to the town. With new inventions which brought improvements to the targets and rifles, their progress increased accordingly, and representation at Bisley was finally accomplished and continued for some years. Of late there has been comparatively no shooting in the open, but the lessons learned through competitions at the armories will be a great help to the members of the regiment as they shoot at the new range.

THE FIRST TARGETS.

According to Col. Miller, the first targets used in this locality were located at Milburn's hill, in Smith. These targets were of wood. Later wooden targets were used at Armour's hill and the volunteers shot from the vicinity of the Norwood Road. In those days the marker used his hat to designate the spot found by the marksman. There was no system of signalling, as is the case to-day. Pegs were also used and the points counted up by this means. Some time later, the members of No. 1 Company subscribed sufficient funds to buy iron targets and shooting continued at Armour's hill.

"And let me tell you," remarked the Colonel, "we had some mighty fine shots in those days."

Col. Miller relates one laughable incident which occurred during a shoot near Downer's Corners. Close to the targets was a large stump of a tree upon which a farmer had placed a large boulder. The marker, a man whom they called Joe, decided that the stump and stone was excellent protection. He could also watch the movements of the marksmen through the roots of the stump. One of the party undertook to scare Joseph, and fired at the boulder. Joe heard the music of the bullet as it glanced off the stone, and the guilty man had the time of his life trying to explain to Joe that it was all a mistake—a wide shot.

Targets were also placed in the gully now bounded by the Normal School and the Margaret Cox Home for Girls, and the men shot from the north. On more than one occasion a cow would wander along and put a stop to the shooting for the time being. Col. Miller remembers, on one occasion, when shooting with Col. Harry Rogers, they were stopped by a cow, which was on the line of the target. Neither cared to make the trip and chase the animal, so Col. Miller decided on a rare shot. Col. Rogers was against taking the chance of killing the cow, but Col. Miller decided on the shot, and the result was that all positions were such that the whistle of the bullet frightened the cow and also hit the bulls-eye.

Next the property east of Curtis' brickyard was secured and shooting continued till the range was condemned in favor of travellers on the highway, who were not any too safe. Since that action the regiment has been without a range.

Now the Government, through the efforts of the local member, has provided the property and constructed a rifle range at considerable cost. It remains for the regiment to see what use will be made of it.

TEACH THE SENIOR CADETS TO SHOOT.

Col. Miller is in favor of giving the senior boys of the Collegiate Cadets a taste of shooting at the range. It is all very well, he observes, to go through formations and manoeuvres, but the one essential is shooting.

In the words of the Colonel, it's the man behind the gun and the man who knows how to use it properly, who would be the most effective, should the call come at any time. Of course the Colonel would not give this experience to the boys unless they were in charge of a thoroughly capable instructor.

A CONFESSION

Story of a Reckless Young Man

By F. A. MITCHEL

I was born all wrong for what was expected of me. My father founded a business which grew to be very profitable and produced a large fortune. I being my father's only son—indeed, his only child—his chief rejoicing at my birth was that one day I would succeed him in his business, for, though he had not then reaped much benefit from it, he saw great possibilities ahead. But he was doomed to be disappointed in me. As a boy I developed a taste for roving, for danger, for anything, in short, incompatible with a humdrum life.

At nineteen I was in jail under sentence of death for participation in a Central American revolution. My father came and bought my life with money. He took me home, telling me that I was a fool, but he hoped I would grow wiser with age. But there is an old adage, "Bray a fool in a mortar and he is still a fool." One year later, while climbing a mountain in Switzerland, I was carried down into the valley by an avalanche and was the only one of the party to come out alive.

One would suppose that this second escape would have cured me of incurring great risks. But, no. The day I came of age I fought a duel with a French army officer in Algiers and was wounded nigh unto death.

At this time my grandfather on my father's side was living, a hale and hearty man of seventy-five. My father, being taken suddenly ill and not having time before his death to lay any plan for his estate, left all he possessed to his father. What instructions went with the will I did not know, but later my grandfather informed me that if I settled down before his death he was to leave the property to me.

Unfortunately for me, my predisposition for getting myself killed was not sufficiently affected by this situation to induce me to go home and live an ordinary life. Finding myself in Rome when the Italians were sending troops to north Africa to fight the Mohammedans, I enlisted in an infantry regiment and was shot down by an un-Christian dog and lay in a hospital three months. When I recovered I went to Paris, where I received a letter announcing that my grandfather had died and had been married only a few hours before his death, leaving my estate to his wife.

"I WAS TRANSFIXED WITH ASTONISHMENT."

Being still young, without common sense and by no means cured of my absurd predisposition, I was not very sorry that I should no longer be restrained from incurring dangers, especially since my new grandmother had been instructed by the will to send me a hundred dollars a month on which to live till I should get killed. The only inducement for dissatisfaction was the belief that some woman who had nursed the old gentleman had prevailed upon him to leave the property to her. This, I confess, made me feel a bit ugly. The widow wrote me that if I would come home and settle down she would double my allowance.

I was not minded either to settle down or to be beholden to the woman who had robbed me of my inheritance and wrote her to that effect. I received no reply to my letter and from that time considered the matter dropped. My fortune had passed into other hands than mine, and I considered it irretrievably lost. But it was not long—I by this time having passed out of the unthinking age—before I began to realize that I had been the fool my father had called me. It was now too late to mend matters, but I was losing my taste for danger, and another taste which it had dominated began to show itself. This was a taste for art. I went to Florence, Italy, and became infatuated with the treasures in painting and sculpture to be found there.

Tourists, especially Americans, occasionally came to my studio, and one of them, a very pretty girl, Miss Alice Beale, seemed not only pleased with my work, but with me. I had lived such a wild life that the fair sex had not had much charm for me, and ladies especially seemed altogether too formal for my bohemian tastes. If I had paid any attention to women it had usually been to some ordinary person of the country I happened to be in at the time.

Miss Beale, though a perfectly modest girl, did not strive to conceal her preference for me. Moreover, she threw off enough of that conventionality which I disliked to make my enjoyment of her society easy. A man of my kind, once becoming interested in a woman of his own social sphere, becomes an easy prey. It was not long before Miss Beale had me heels over head in love with her.

I put it in this way because the young lady, as I have said, though modest and unassuming as our affair proceeded, gave me every encouragement, and there was good reason to believe that her fancy for me was not a matter of worldly interest, for, while she seemed to have all the money she needed to spend. I soon made her aware of the state of my own affairs, nor did it change her manner toward me one whit.

One evening we emerged from the Uffizi gallery together and walked slowly along the bank of the Arno. The lamps that light the streets on either side of the river had just been lighted, and there is no more beautiful city scene in the world than the Arno banks at the twilight hour. Carried away by the surroundings, after confessing to my companion briefly how by my folly I had thrown away a fortune, I told her that I had now come to a realization of it since my loss deprived me of a hope of possessing her.

We had turned upon one of the bridges that span the river and were looking down upon the flowing waters. She responded that there was still a hope that we might be happy together. That hope depended upon my abandoning my nomadic life, returning to America and settling in some business or profession. I believed that it was too late for me to do this, but I consented to her terms.

"Possibly," I said, "I might find means of making that confounded grandmother of mine disgorge something of my estate."

She smiled at my optimism and advised me to look to the future rather than the past. Suits to recover property left by will out of the natural channel were expensive, dragged on from year to year and had a bad effect on the contestant.

It is evident from this that Miss Beale was just the woman I needed for a wife. She infused into me a practical common sense that no one had ever been able to force into me before. It was agreed that we should both return to America, where I was to make good my promises of reformation, and our future union was conditional upon my carrying them out.

We sailed from Naples on a warm afternoon, when the sea breeze, tempering the heat, was delightful. Standing on deck, I looked upon the high ground back of the city, Vesuvius towering on the south, Ischia in the bay on the other flank. The water, the hue of which is ever changing, was a deep green. Filled with the beauty of the scene, I could not but repress a regret that I must give up lingering in this artistic country, as well as my artistic instincts. I felt that but one thing would hold me down to my promises—the possession of the girl I loved.

Miss Beale told me that her home was in New York, while mine was in Philadelphia. I desired on arrival to see her to her home, but she would not permit it. She advised me to go at once to Philadelphia and call upon my grandmother, who owned a controlling interest in the business my father had built up with a view to obtaining a position there. I demurred to this, but Miss Beale insisted upon it, saying that if I were unable to "put my feelings in my pocket" and avail myself of the only chance open to me I might as well give up the whole matter and return to my roving. This settled it, and I promised to do as she advised.

The evening after my arrival in Philadelphia I got myself in condition to eat humble pie by going to the house in which I had been born to solicit a position in the business my father had intended I should manage. My love alone enabled me to swallow the pill. I rang the bell and, having been admitted, sent up my card. While I waited I was mentally picturing the woman who would come down to receive me. I fancied her to be of middle age, a crafty looking woman, thin and bony, with piercing eyes. I hated her before I saw her.

Presently I heard a footstep on the stairs and the rustle of skirts. When the descending figure reached the last step she was revealed to my view. I was transfixed with astonishment. I saw Alice Beale!

"What? Who"— I began and stopped.

"Your grandmother," she said, smiling in every feature of her face.

"You! My"—

"Yes. The day your grandfather died, being too far gone to make a will, he married me with the understanding that if possible I was to become your wife. The plan had already been arranged, I promising to take care of your interests, provided you mended your ways and became a steady man. Since you would not come to me for regeneration I went to you under my maiden name. Now that I have got you where I can influence you for your good we will do what seems best for you."

I married my grandfather's widow and from that time settled my affairs as I pleased, but always after conference with her. I did not return to Italy. I am now manager of the business my father established.

Petticoats on Seal Figure.

The Royal Society of Canada has a new role, that of a champion of virtue, as represented by discreet drapery in art.

At its general session recently the new seal of the society was on exhibition. Dr. W. H. Ellis, of Toronto, probably moved by the fact that the society had just voted to admit women to its membership, moved that "the designer of our new seal put petticoats on one of the figures therein."

Upon which the members of the society took the seal into serious consideration.

The sporting editors are also in trouble. The Royal Society passed a resolution to call the attention of the press and educational institutions to the widespread use of defective English, one member of the society stating that sporting pages of the present day were absolutely unintelligible to him. It was also lamented that the "the" sound is disappearing among the lower classes.

STUDIES OCEAN STRATA.

Nansen Says Only Real Gulf Stream Is That Passing Florida.

Dr. Nansen gave a summary of his investigations on the subject of the gulf stream before the Academy of Science in Christiania recently. After having acknowledged his indebtedness to the observations which had been made by Norwegian, Danish and German expeditions, Dr. Nansen said that he had arrived at the conclusion that the gulf stream had very little or nothing to do with the real gulf stream passing through the Straits of Florida.

Dr. Nansen maintained that by a closer study of the position and inclination of the layers (strata) in transverse sections of the ocean it was possible to obtain reliable information about the direction followed by the water masses at different depths and in the different regions of the ocean. The inclination of the strata in the eastern part of the north Atlantic, and in the region between Ireland and the Canary Islands, proved that there existed a deep current between the surface layers and a depth of 800 fathoms, flowing northward from the region between Madeira and the Azores and along the west coast of southern Europe.

Some part of the water masses flowing in southerly and southeasterly directions joined the northward-flowing current west of Madeira, while the northward-flowing water masses northwest of the Azores found, to some extent, their way eastward as a surface current across the ridge in about 50 degrees latitude, and the waters of this surface-current joined along the southern southwest coast of Europe. Thus arose the warm Atlantic current west of the British Islands, which passed between the Shetlands and the Faroe Islands into the North Sea.

How Girl Students Vary.

An English woman with experience of girl students in many European countries, summed them up thus recently. French women she found much more literary than English. One could hear French girl students discussing among themselves English authors about whom English girls know nothing. English girls, she thought, have ability, "but they appear to be far less developed from a literary point of view than the French. They are not so fond of argument and discussion either. The Scottish girls are more like the French as regards intellectual curiosity, and the desire to probe to the bottom of things. Scandinavian students are very good—steady and persevering.

"Russians and Poles, on the other hand, are somewhat badly balanced, and are inclined to go to extreme. At first, as a rule, when they begin they are full of enthusiasm and ambition, eager to learn everything at once, but at the end of a month you will find them in a state of despair, and talking about throwing the whole thing up. The Russian character is extraordinarily difficult to understand.

"German students are very docile and amiable."

FAMOUS CLERIC GONE

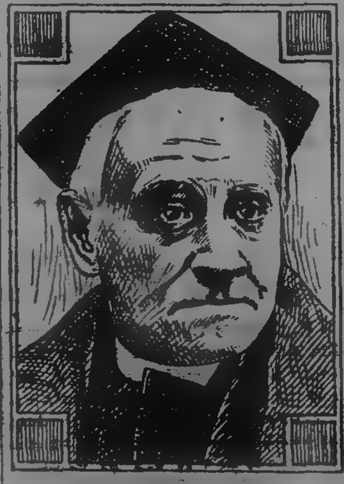
FATHER STANTON WAS WIDELY BELOVED IN ENGLAND.

High Church Anglican Clergyman Had a Stormy Career and His Adherence to Ritualism Occasioned Many Bitter Attacks—Nonconformists and Established Churchmen Alike Testified to His Work.

One of the most magnetic personalities in London has been lost by the death of the Rev. A. H. Stanton (Father Stanton), curate of St. Alban's, Holborn, Eng., which occurred in his 75th year, recently. The great knowledge of human nature that he possessed was one of the elements of his wonderful popularity. He knew the inmost secrets of unnumbered souls; indeed, there are few priests in the metropolis who have heard more confessions than have been uttered to his ears. He was certainly the most picturesque preacher of the age. He was very good-looking, with deep-set, flashing eyes and striking features; he had a fine voice and knew how to manage it with superb effect. Numberless women — young, middle-aged, and elderly — adored him. Mr. Stanton had been curate of St. Alban's since the church was opened in 1862, the year in which he was ordained. Throughout that period he never received any stipend. His death follows with dramatic suddenness upon the official recognition of his untiring devotion and labor for the Church by the offer, a few days previously, of a prebendal stall in St. Paul's Cathedral. The offer was declined on grounds of ill-health and old age.

St. Alban's, Holborn, was built 50 years ago by Lord Addington, formerly John Gellibrand Hubbard, with the co-operation of William Henry, second Lord of Leigh, and Alexander Heriot Mackonochie, of Oxford, the first vicar. Lord Addington's great purpose was to do something for the poor of the City of London, and so he decided to build a beautiful church in the centre of a slum. Holborn, then one of the most squalid and unsavory localities in all London, was chosen. The site of the church in Brooke street is of historical interest. There the thieves' kitchen, immortalized by Dickens in "Oliver Twist," is supposed to have stood. Brooke street itself is named after that Lord Brooke who, in Elizabeth's day, was an author and patron of literature. It was in Brooke street, too, that Chatterton, the boy poet, died by his own hand at a house which has now disappeared. The extreme character of the ritual adopted at St. Alban's caused controversies to rage round the church for many years. Indeed, Father Stanton was accused by some of being a Papist in disguise. The idol of one side and the bugbear of the other, he was at one time prevented from preaching in four dioceses.



FATHER STANTON.

An address presented to Mr. Stanton some years ago was the tribute of no fewer than 3,600 men who wished to place on record their gratitude for the preaching, especially in Advent and Lenten courses, that had been of so much spiritual service to them. Such prominent Nonconformists as the Rev. Silvester Horne and the Rev. F. C. Spurr joined in the presentation of this address. When Dr. Temple was Bishop of London he paid a surprise visit to St. Alban's, and after the usual Sunday morning service had the clergymen before him in a row. "Gentlemen," he said, "the organisation of this parish is second to none in my diocese. But I can, and will, not stand your incense." "But, my lord," urged Mr. Stanton, "our incense is the best in the market. Why, do you know, we pay as much as 8s. 6d. a pound for it?" Mr. Stanton was gifted with a strong sense of humor. One of his stories concerns a sermon he once preached in a slum district, dealing with present-day social conditions among the rich. "I tell you, my friends," said Mr Stanton, in the course of his address, "that, figuratively speaking, the road to perdition is paved with flowers and diamonds and motor-cars." A voice from the back of the church said softly, "O, Death, where is thy sting?"

Perfumes of Divorce Court.

The troubles of a divorce court judge were thus summed up on one occasion by the late Lord Gorell. He was suffering from a rather bad headache, which he attributed to the result of scent. "The ladies of the divorce court love perfumes," he remarked. "It has been a hot and tiring day for me, for each of the witnesses has come into court and waved about a handkerchief saturated with scent. I have inhaled patchouli, white rose, heliotrope, and half-a-dozen other perfumes since breakfast, and unfortunately the more emotional ladies become the more they wave their pretty scraps of scented cambric and apply them to their eyes."

PARK ONCE WAS SWAMP

ST. JAMES', LONDON REACHED ZENITH A CENTURY AGO.

Most Interesting of Imperial Metropolis Open Spaces Was Once the Site of a Home For Leprous Maidens and Later Henry VIII. Turned It Into a Tilting Yard—In Early 1900's It Was Fashionable Resort.

Nearly one hundred years ago when the brilliant assemblages in the "Mall" represented the elite of London, St. James Park was the finest promenade in the metropolis, but times have changed and the gallantry and beauty that were wont to throng its highway are now no longer to be seen. It is a matter of conjecture if such a spectacle will ever again be witnessed in the park that has the most interesting history in London.

Far back in the beginning of its career, the site was a swamp, liable to spring tides of the river, and was situated on the outskirts of an extensive forest, and it was because of its excessive isolation that at some remote period, a hospital was founded there for fourteen leprous maidens which was dedicated to St. James, hence the name. However, when Henry VII. came to Whitehall he decided to do away with it. So the hospital and sisterhood were suppressed in 1532, the patients were pensioned, the swamp drained, the site surrounded with a wall of brick and stone, and a tilting yard—now the famous Horse Guards Parade—together with a bowling green, were formed inside. At the same time the King reconstructed the old hospital and made it a Manor House, which was subsequently St James' Palace.

It was here that Queen Mary died and also Charles I. slept the night before his execution, and also Charles II., the Old Pretender, was born. When Whitehall was burned in 1697, St. James' became the regular London residence of the British sovereigns, and it continued so until Queen Victoria's time.

When James I. came to the throne, he altered the name to Westminster Park, and kept a wonderful menagerie, which was reckoned among the curiosities of England. Little is known of the park in the reign of Charles I., beyond the fact of the King and his brothers having planted some elms, which Cromwell is credited with wishing to cut down in 1653 when the metropolis was suffering from a scarcity of fuel.

The Republicans did not sell St. James' Park like Hyde Park and various other royal ones, for the benefit of the Commonwealth, but they abolished the "Saint" and at the same time re-stocked the park with deer.

It was, however, when Charles II. returned to London that saw a great transformation in the historic old park. In 1660 he employed Le Notre, the famous architect of the grottoes at Versailles, and Dr. Morison, formerly landscape gardener to the Duke of Orleans, to replant and beautify the space. Broad gravel walks took the place of the previous narrow paths, trees were planted in even ranks. All save one of the ponds were thrown into an artificial canal, a decoy for ducks was built on an island, and a small fence for deer erected.

In the summer of 1660, the park was, for the first time, thrown open to the public. The principal walks were the "Green Walk" between the Mall and the North Wall; the "Long Lime Walk," terminating at Spring Gardens, and the "Close Walk" at the head of Rosamond's Pool in the southeast corner. This sheet of water was long "consecrated to love and elegiac poetry," but was filled up in 1770 and a road carried across it to Great George street. Charles' flocks of all sorts of wild fowl, together with deer, elk, antelopes, guinea goats and Arabian sheep, which he introduced, proved a never-failing source of attraction to visitors.

The park was arranged in the years 1827-29, as it stood until within the last ten years. The brick wall was replaced by an iron railing in 1764. Chairs were first introduced in 1785, and the park was lighted with gas in 1822, though there must have been some artificial illuminant at an earlier period. A temporary bridge, surmounted by a Chinese pagoda, was erected across the canal for a display of fireworks on the arrival of the allied sovereigns in 1814, and remained till 1825. The present suspension bridge was erected in 1857. The Wellington Barracks were begun in 1834. The area of the park is roughly about fifty-eight and a half acres, of which Charles II. added thirty-six acres.

Such is the brief history of the most historical park in the greatest city in the world, and time alone will prove if the "Mall" will see a recurrence of the pomp and brilliancy of the old-time days, or if its glory has departed for good.

Golf In Scotland.

As a national Scottish pastime golf may take for its date approximately the middle of the seventeenth century. It was at this time that the game received the patronage which has led to its popular sobriquet, "the sport of kings." James VI. had a special "clubmaker to his hienes." It was while playing the game on the links at Leith that Charles I. received the news of the Irish rebellion in 1642, and the Duke of York, afterward James II., together with a shoemaker of Edinburgh, participated in the first recorded international match when they successfully upheld the honor of Scotland against the best golfers of England.

Cheap Block of Stores.

A block of five leasehold shops in Sydenham, Eng., with nearly twenty years to run, has been sold by auction for $25. Two of the shops are let and produce $525 per annum. The property was offered with reserve on instructions of a firm liquidating an estate, and only one bid was made.

SOME FACTS ABOUT THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC PROPOSITION

It is less than two years since the Hon. Adam Beck came to Peterborough and presented the case for the taking over of the city lighting by the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission and the Council passed a bylaw to that effect.

Since then the scheme has been slowly but surely materializing, and now the work of installation is getting under way.

In an interview with Alderman Johnston, chairman of the Power Committee, our representative learned much about the inner working of the scheme.

Very few people have a clear understanding of the enterprise upon which the city has entered. Not a few people have the notion that the coming of this new power will be a source of danger to the public, and that it will affect the rates.

Others are asking why go to all this trouble when we already have the Peterborough Light and Power Company which can supply us with all the power we need.

All of these impressions disappeared under the illuminating talk of Alderman Johnson, whose enthusiasm alone would be sufficient to run our street cars if it could be attached to wires.

The bare facts are, that the city has decided to go into the light and power business itself, and to that end has engaged the services of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission to initiate it into the business.

The first requisite of anyone entering into any business is money—how is the city to get the money to carry out its proposal? It must borrow it.

Debentures will be issued and with the money thus borrowed the commissioners will pay for the lamps, poles, wire and power plant, and are engaging expert skill to direct and carry out the scheme.

When the work is completed the whole of the city will be uniformly lighted by electricity supplied by the commissioners and eventually the city may buy the street railway which along with the whole of the Peterborough light and power plant would belong to the municipality.

Some impression exists that the Hydro Electric Commission is to get the power from Niagara Falls. This is not so, the power will be generated in or near Peterborough. There is sufficient water power in the neighborhood to supply light and motor service to a city many times as large as Peterborough if properly regulated and controlled.

The lamps which have already arrived are of the latest kind, more up-to-date than the cluster light used in Toronto. The Magnatype Arc lamp is very powerful and these will be attached to the combination poles along the chief streets of the city where the lines are at present or are likely to run in the future.

These combination poles are, of course, intended to carry both the light and the supporting wires for the trolly cable.

It will be seen that this is no small undertaking and needs a great amount of fore-sight and executive ability and the city is fortunate in having the matter in such efficient hands.

FIREBUG IS CAUGHT

Boy Wanted to Be Hero so He Started Fires

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 12.—Desire to be a hero, and his fascination for observing firemen at work, was the reason for his starting numerous fires on the north side, given in the confession of Raymond Raab, aged 15, who is under arrest charged with arson. Young Raab enumerated fires he started, one of them being the Library office building, which was destroyed with a $50,000 loss last December.

Raab had been suspected for some time, as it was observed he was often among the first on the scene of a fire when an alarm was sent in. He was arrested Thursday night and under severe questioning confessed.

Four fires he started last week, according to his confession. While employed in a store for one day he tried to destroy it twice. He wanted to "see the firemen come," he said. Last Monday he fired mattresses and papers in a large furniture house, which sustained a $700 loss. Tuesday he obtained employment as elevator boy in an apartment house, and had been at work but a few hours when he threw a lighted match into a box of waste paper in the basement and then rung in an alarm.

His latest attempt was Thursday, in the same apartment house he tried to destroy Tuesday. He ran the car to the sixth storey, placed paper in the shaft on the greased upright guides of the shaft, and after lighting these called the fire department by telephone.

The boy is being held by the police for further investigation.

ROWELL AT OWEN SOUND.

Liberal Leader Says Government Is Out of Touch With People.

OWEN SOUND, July 12.—N. W. Rowell addressed his second meeting in the present campaign in North Grey last night. About two thousand were present in Riverside Rink and gave the Liberal leader an enthusiastic welcome. Mr. Rowell, in his address, dealt chiefly with the workmen's compensation bill and charged the Government with utter failure and disregard for the needs of the industrial classes by its "tinkering" with the matter. He set forth the policy of the Liberal party on the temperance issue, and in matters of tax reform and factory legislation and declared that the Government was entirely out of touch with the requirements of the province.

BULGARIA FAILS

And is Now Anxious for Terms With Other Powers

LONDON, July 12.—Having failed in her hazardous coup, Bulgaria is now showing herself anxious for peace. No formal armistice has yet been arranged, but it is believed that hostilities are virtually ended. It is feared, however, that the settlement of the peace conditions will prove a long task, many new elements having entered to complicate matters. Bulgaria's decision not to oppose Roumania's occupation of Silistria and the strip of territory she desires, removes one difficulty. But other developments, such as the Greek occupation of Kavala, to which Bulgaria is expected to offer very bitter resistance, are calculated to lead to troublesome negotiations, especially as both Servia and Greece, on the outcome of their campaign will be certain to demand possession of the territory they occupied previous to the war.

Russia is already taking steps in the Balkan capitals to arrange for a cessation of hostilities.

The British Chancellor of the Exchequer, David Lloyd George, addressing the bankers at a dinner at the Mansion House last night, referred to Balkan affairs. He said that the first trouble was over and he was hopeful that the powers, who had started so well together, would be able to effect a lasting settlement among these hapless provinces.

So long as the Balkan States did nothing to upset the decisions already agreed to among the powers, continued the Chancellor, it was to be hoped that no power would find it necessary to take any action likely to give rise to difficulty among the great powers themselves.

Prominent Greeks Slaughtered.

SALONIKI, July 12.—A deputation from Seres, arrived here yesterday and applied to King Constantine to despatch Greek troops to occupy the town. The deputation asserted that before evacuating Seres the Bulgarians slaughtered a large number of prominent Greeks, who had been imprisoned since hostilities began. Among those killed were M. Papapavlos, director of the gymnasium; M. Stamoulis, manager of the Orient Bank, and Dr. Charissevis.

Garrison Surrendered.

BUCHAREST, Roumania, July 12.—The Bulgarian garrison of Silistria, composed of only a few hundred men, surrendered to the Roumanians. The invading force subsequently penetrated for a distance of nine or ten miles into Bulgarian territory.

No Armistice, Says Greeks.

LONDON, July 12.—An Athens' despatch to The Daily Telegraph says that Greece refuses to agree to an armistice.

BULGARIANS RETREATING TO THE NORTH MAY BE TRAPPED BY THE TROOPS OF KING CONSTANTINE.

QUEEN SOPHIE

KING CONSTANTIME

The Balkan war having now been regularized by formal declarations, it is understood the Powers will make no attempt to mediate.

The agreed neutral zone between the Greeks and Bulgarians was:—Beginning from the harbor of Eleftheru, extending thence northwest to Pagion Mountain, thence through Achinou Lake, then following the Strimena River to the village of Mekas, thence north to Nigritas, to Nicolan, to the Agion River, following that stream to Gevgelis, and then to Ispik. The Axios River was to separate the Servians and Bulgarians. Bulgaria should keep faith with the Servians and the Greeks and not order her troops to cross the lines, as it is reported.

Servian despatches admit that a strong Bulgarian column has invaded Servia at Konagevatz, which town they occupied after setting fire to the adjacent villages. Cholera has been taken to Belgrade by the wounded.

Official Greek despatches claim a great victory at Doiran, where the Bulgarians, recently reinforced, were in superior strength to the Greeks. The latter assert that a whole division of Bulgarians was destroyed and that the Bulgarians fled in such a precipitate manner that they even left loaded guns behind.

Federal Grant of $195,000 Will Be Employed This Year In Extending and Making Permanent the Training of Public, Separate and High School Teachers and Inspectors—Bonuses To Aid Work.

TORONTO, July 12.—Following consideration by the Provincial Government it has been decided to utilize the larger portion of this year's Federal grant for agricultural aid in amplifying and making permanent the summer school for teachers at the Guelph Agricultural College. For this purpose the Departments of Education and Agriculture are co-operating in the holding of special courses for public and separate school teachers, for public and separate school inspectors, and for teachers of natural science in high schools and collegiate institutes.

In order to stimulate interest in this branch of educational enterprise the Department has decided to pay to every School Board employing a teacher certificated in agriculture an initial grant of $50, and an annual grant of $30 when the work is carried on throughout the year, while the teacher's salary will be supplemented by a personal annual grant of $30 from the Department.

The course provided for inspectors is an interesting innovation aimed at advancing the interests of agricultural education in the rural schools, and as an inducement to these officials to attend the course the Department has decided to allow them traveling expenses with board and lodging. As many as possible will be accommodated at the college residences.

In connection with the course for high school science teachers, the Education Department has announced its intention of authorizing a course of study in agriculture for the high schools and collegiate institutes before they open next September, the examinations in which may be taken as bonus options for entrance to the Normal schools and the faculties of education. All institutes are to be provided with suitable plots of ground, where experiments and demonstrations may be carried on. Plots will be allotted to the various students, and the kind of farming carried on in the locality will determine the nature of their work.

Among the branches of work suggested by the Ministers of Education and Agriculture are: Variety tests of vegetables and grains; fertilizing experiments with potatoes; comparing two methods of growing tomatoes; demonstrating new kinds of vegetables; growing trees for home, park or street planting; propagating shrubbery, small fruits, etc., from cuttings; growing fruit trees, for pruning and spraying experiments; demonstrating methods of cultivating strawberries, tests of fodder crops, etc.

Annual special grants of $100 will be paid to high school or collegiate institute boards taking up this work, and of $75 each to qualified teachers engaging in it. It is provided that, until a teacher is qualified, the county representative of the Department of Agriculture may conduct the course.

In the part of the course taken the first year the work will be in agricultural chemistry, physics, botany, bacteriology, entomology, bee-keeping, poultry husbandry and will comprise both lectures and practical work. In the part of the course taken the second year, the work will deal more with horticulture, field husbandry, dairying and animal husbandry. While the outline of studies for the first part is restricted to special branches, there will be opportunity to become acquainted with other branches of work carried on at the college or on the Government Experimental Farm.

The Government has appointed Mr. S. B. McCready, M.A., director of elementary agriculture at the Ontario Agricultural College, as head of the new branch of educational work. This year's Federal grant has been already received and amounts to $195,000.

X-Ray Inventor Dead.

HARTFORD, Conn., July 12.—Burton E. Baker, inventor of the Baker x-ray tube and other machines of that type, is dead at his home here yesterday, following an illness since last September, since which time no less than nine operations were made by scientists in Philadelphia, New York and Hartford in a vain effort to save his life. He was virtually a victim of constant exposure to the x-rays, and despite warnings of his danger four years ago, he had kept at his work until he had perfected one of the very best machines on the market.

Mayette Is Acquitted.

SARNIA, July 12.—Eugene Mayette and his girl companion, who were detained here as a result of the refusal of the American immigration officials to allow them to go through to Chicago, were brought before the police magistrate yesterday morning with the charge against them of violating the immigration laws, was withdrawn and he was formally discharged.

His companion returned to Toronto yesterday in charge of her sister, who arrived here Thursday evening. Mayette left on the afternoon train for Toronto.

Little Grains of Sand.

KINGSTON, July 12.—For selling adulterated pepper, four grocers were fined $5 and costs each in the Police Court yesterday. Grocers claimed they purchased the pepper from wholesalers understanding it was pure and it was labeled, but the law holds the seller responsible.

A Government inspector called at the stores and made the tests.

BISHOP HONORED.

Rev. Dr. Bidwell of Kingston Gets Title From Mohawks.

DESERONTO, Ont., July 12—A very interesting and impressive service was held yesterday in the Anglican church on the Mohawk reserve when Lord Bishop Bidwell of Kingston delivered an instructive address prior to the confirmation of forty-one candidates, and it was his first visit to the parish since his election as bishop.

A unique and impressive service took place in the afternoon, when the Mohawk Council conferred an honorary title upon Bishop Bidwell, giving him the Indian name Tehonikonrathe, which, being translated, means "The Bright Mind." Besides the resident clergymen Rev. A. H. Creegan, Rev. W. E. Kidd of Napanee, and Rev. Mr. Spencer of Camden East were present at the service, part of which was conducted in the Mohawk language.

Mr. Robert Gibbs, the well-known Water street liveryman, is having a new cement floor constructed in his livery barn.

WANTS POLICE SHAKE-UP.

Moral Reformer Says Montreal Police "Out-Beckers Becker."

MONTREAL, July 12.—That the city police here are in league with a gang of hoodlums, who on Monday night almost killed John H. Roberts at the close of an open air temperance meeting, is one of the serious charges made by the Grand Lodge of Quebec, Independent Order of Good Templars, in a letter forwarded yesterday to Sir Lomer Gouin, the provincial Premier, who is asked to control the Montreal police force and put it under a competent head.

Mr. Roberts, himself, in an interview, says that the local police administration "out-Beckers Becker" and values prudence and cavior faire more than honor, justice and right.

Mr. Roberts traces the alleged animosity of the administration to him to accusations denied by the parties concerned, he has lodged that Chief Campeau and other police officials are connected with the Frisco Soda Water Co., whose products hotels and houses of ill-fame buy for "protection."

WAS TARGET SHOOTING.

Nun's Island Tragedy Solved by Girl's Admission.

MONTREAL, July 12.—By the explanation yesterday of Miss Mathilde Beriault that she was practicing target shooting with a gun in the neighborhood of Nun's Island, the mystery of the fatal wounding, on Tuesday night of a man named William Leslie, camping out at this spot, was cleared up.

While Miss Beriault was not firing in the direction in which Leslie's camp was located, the bullet appears to have glanced off a tree.

Leslie died from a wound in the breast Thursday, and at the inquest yesterday the coroner's jury brought in a verdict of excusable homicide. Leslie was to have been married yesterday, and his intended wife, who was on the island when Leslie was shot, suffered an attack of hysteria, during which she attacked the young woman who fired the shot.

YORK LOAN

May be Another Dividend Before End of Year

Toronto, July 12.—Immediately after the long legal vacation an attempt will be made to clear up the loose ends of the liquidation proceedings, which have been in progress over the remains of the York Loan and Savings Company since 1905, and it is possible, it is stated, that the losers in that concern will receive a third and last dividend before the end of the present year.

Shareholders have already received two payments of 25 cents on the dollar each, and a lawyer in touch with the situation states that the third payment should be about 5 or 6 cents, making a total of about 55 cents on the dollar.

On the other hand A. E. Herrington, who has been in charge of the York Loan affairs for the National Trust Company, refuses to make any statement as to the possibilities of the last payment. "Shareholders will do very well," he said.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT FROM HON. COL. SAM HUGHES

Minister Entertains Halifax Garrison at Dinner and Takes Occasion to Tell Officers of the Permanent Force That There is Too Much Idling

HALIFAX, July 12.—Col. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, entertained the permanent and active militia of the Halifax garrison at dinner last night and created somewhat of a sensation by roundly lecturing the regular officers for idling and neglecting their duties. He declared that the permanent forces were no places for men who desired to spend their time in idleness, profligacy and social gayety and any men who failed to do their work could look for little sympathy. He referred to friction which had existed between the active militia and the permanent forces all over the Dominion and defended his policy of appointing men from active forces to positions which men of the permanent corps were qualified to fill.

Col. Hughes said this condition had been met with all over Canada, but he had refrained from speaking of it until he could do so in Halifax, the largest Canadian garrison. He impressed on the permanent corps officers that their force existed purely for instructional purposes, and that they were nothing more than military schoolmasters.

Sir Ian Hamilton, inspector-general of the overseas forces, paid high compliments to the local militia, declaring that the Halifax regiments were fully up to the standard of the best corps throughout the Empire.

Campey will be looked into by the City Council Monday next. ### Remains of Three Victims Taken From Water Near Niagara.

BUFFALO, July 12.—A hydro-aeroplane skimming the surface of Lake Erie and the Niagara river yesterday afternoon played a prominent part in the search for the bodies of the five canoeists who were drowned off Windmill Point last Sunday. The flying machine rapidly eliminated outlying territory from the necessity of further search and boatmen confined their efforts to a comparatively small stretch with the result that three bodies were recovered.

The bodies found were those of Carl Goodrich, Reginald McMahon and Albert M. Kayner, all of Niagara Falls. Two were found in the lake and one in the river. The body of Thomas Brophy, recovered Thursday, was yesterday identified. The body of Edward Reichert is missing.

A CHARGE OF HERESY

Against Prof. George Jackson Formerly of Toronto

LONDON, July 12.—A charge of heresy has been preferred against Rev. Prof. George Jackson, until recently of Victoria College, Toronto, and will come before the Wesleyan conference at Plymouth. Dr. Jackson arrived in England only about a month ago to assume his new position on the faculty of Didsbury Theological College, near Manchester.

George Armstrong Bennett, a leading conservative Wesleyan divine, demands the recision of Jackson's appointment and his expulsion from the Wesleyan ministry. Bennett has written and distributed a pamphlet to every Wesleyan minister, entitled "The Doctrinal Crisis in Wesleyan Methodism," charging Jackson mainly with teaching that the early chapters of Genesis and many Old Testament miracles are unhistorical.

The southern branch of the expedition will be in contact nearly all the time with Eskimo tribes that have an abundance of dogs.

LOVE IS PERMISSIBLE.

Christian Endeavorers Would Not Cut It Out of Drama.

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—The question "Should religion be taught in the school?" was answered affirmatively yesterday by the conference of ministers attending the twenty-sixth international convention of Christian Endeavor societies. So also was that as to the teaching of sex hygiene, but the clergymen registered it as their opinion that sex knowledge should not be taught school pupils by the regular teachers, but by physicians especially appointed for the purpose.

To strengthen the influence of Protestantism it was recommended that the churches join a federation and work in unison.

Dr. Charles M. Sheldon of Topeka, Kan., recommended the compilation of a Bible text book for use in the schools. He spoke vigorously against colleges and high school fraternities as a menace to democracy. Dr. Sheldon, who once undertook to edit a daily newspaper "as Christ would do it," declared the press would be greatly improved if it eliminated stories of crime, gave more church and religious news, and published editions every other day, so that it would not have to pad and "play up" sensational matter.

With regard to the theatre and the drama, the clergymen in the conference acquiesced in the opinion that the love element in plays was permissible.

DRANK 23 BOTTLES.

And Four Per Cent. Beer Did Not Make Him Drunk.

QUEBEC, July 12.—Because the beer sold by a number of St. Romuald temperance hotelkeepers contained not more than 4.3 per cent. of alcohol, Judge Charles Langelier has dismissed the charge laid against them of selling liquor without a license.

Dr. Valle, an analyst, in response to a question, declared that the temperance beer sold by defendants was not intoxicating, and that a person could drink it in sufficient quantities to make himself ill without being intoxicated. One of the defendants swore that he had seen a man drink twenty-three bottles of it within the space of a few hours, and yet not become drunk. After the judgment the Collector of Provincial Revenue declared that he intended to petition the Superior Court for leave to issue a writ of certiorari to determine whether a liquor which contained more than two and a half per cent. of proof alcohol was a temperance drink or not.

ALL THROUGH THE DRINK

The Balkan States are not the only "allies" who are having little "differences" and generally knocking one another about.

Toronto is at present the scene of a "scrapping match" between two journals of the same political persuasion. The little Christian Guardian has put up its fists to the Globe and the Globe as tuned its bagpipes to the air of "The Macdonald's are coming."

The trouble commenced, as most troubles do, over the liquor. Not that Dr. Creighton and Dr. Macdonald have been guilty of drinking together, by no means. The fight did not begin in the barroom although it was all over the bar-room; it began quietly in the office at Wesley building with the writing of an article. In this article the editor of the Guardian condemned the Globe for publishing a full page advertisement of somebody's beer, and accused the Globe of hypocracy in advocating in its editoraials the policy of Mr. Rowell to abolish the bar, and at the same time receiving money from the brewers and booming their business in another part of the paper.

The Guardian was SHOCKED.

The Globe in reply prints the Guardian's article in full and goes for its editor full tilt. It says it has accepted liquor advertisements for sixty-nine years, and has at the same time been an uncompromising supporter of temperance reform. It cites the case of the recent decline of the Montreal Witness as the nemesis of all newspapers that live up to their principles. Then it comes down on the Guardian and denounces its editor as a traitor to the liberal cause in the North Grey contest, and goes on to say; "Why does the Guardain dodge the North Grey issue? Can it be that this pillar of righteousness lacks the courage to say a few plain words that would indicate the duty of temperance Methodist of North Grey next Monday, and by raising a side issue seeks to cover up its own cowardice?"

So you see the Balkans is not the only "cock-pit" just now.

A LOCAL LITERARY CRITIC

It has been said that a critic is a writer who having failed to mount Parnassus himself stands at the foot deriding those who are making the attempt.

It would seem that Peterborough is not without such soured and disappointed people, for in our esteemed contemporary the other day a writer had a good time potting off modern poets and consigning all their productions to oblivion.

It may be true that poets are not as good as they used to be—they never were!

Shakespeare was an object of derision to men like Greene, and Ben Jonson was inclined to patronize him. There were many people who could have given Milton some excellent advice as to the futility of writing "Paradise Lost." They could have told him, and no doubt did tell him, that there was no money in poetry, that there was "nothing new under the sun," and that all this rubbish about Adam and Eve was a mere re-hash of the Biblical narrative interspersed with Greek mythology and that it would never sell.

And this candid critic is quite right; all that he says is very true. Poetry, looked at from the Stock Exchange, or from the city editor's bench with the 'phone and the typewriter ringing in your ears, is "wind on the brain," an "intellectual collic" or spasm, a "metrical microbe."

This self-appointed monitor of modern bards, confesses that in the callow days of love he may have committed himself to poetry, but that he has survived the infection, and from this we are to presume that he has survived the "love" that craved such poetical expression.

If this be so, and he at present is satisfied with the mere mundane and matter-of-fact, that he has got rid of all his early delusions as to the existence of the super-sensual, that his poet's eye no longer rolls in that "fine frensy, looking from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven," then no one will envy him his disillusionment.

If, "when somebody dies," he can no longer turn to Gray or Tennyson, or like them turn a sad, sweet note on his private lyre, he is of all men most miserable.

But what troubles the writer in question most of all is the fact that people will persist in making bad rhymes and rhythms instead of saying what they have to say in prose.

No man was ever a philosopher from choice, and no one ever chose to sit down and write poetry, it is an effervescence with most people and slopps over, but it is the real thing none the less, and can no more be set down in prose than it can be dictated unpremeditated to a typewriter.

Alfred Austin, whom this writer is inclined to despise, did write poetry, not all that he wrote was poetry, but, as Byron said, the heavens are not all stars. A few poems of Austin were of a high lyrical order, and the fact that he was not a financial success, is no reason why the British people should cease to recognize the existence of the immortal Nine by preserving the Laureateship.

It is a pity Dr. Friedman ran away home so soon, there is an excellent field for experiment in Peterborough, where there are so many tubercular cattle. Mr. Spence, our Sanitary Inspector, might inform the doctor, or himself try the effect of the verum on a piece of consumptive beef.

Yet another combatant has joined in the melee in the Balkan States; it is allied to none of the "allies," but is fighting on own. It is called cholera.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON

GOD'S INSTRUMENT IN PREPARATION.

—July 13.—Exodus 2:11-25.—

'Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth."—Matthew 5:5.

THE education of Moses is briefly summed up in the Biblical statement that he "was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians." Legend tells us something of his schooling in the philosophies of that time, and declares that he was a successful Egyptian general; but it is for us to follow the Bible account. The time was nearing when God intended to bring the Israelites out of Egypt into the Land of Promise—an illustration of the still more wonderful deliverance by the Greater than Moses, which now is nearing.

God's providences may be noted in respect to the experiences of Moses, who is credited by the Lord with having been "the meekest man in all the earth." God wanted a meek man for the important position which He intended Moses to fill. Moses' lessons and experiences helped to make him meek. Who cannot see that, if he had been proud and arrogant, he would have been unfit for the duties and responsibilities devolving upon him as leader of his people? Perhaps no man had a more difficult task than that represented in Moses' forty years with Israel in the wilderness. We may be sure that he was prepared for the ordeal only by the experience of the preceding eighty years.

The adopted son of the Egyptian princess, Moses must have been a court favorite, and in danger of cultivating pride. As an offset, he continually had before him the fact that his features were Jewish, and that thus every one had knowledge of his identity with the despised and oppressed people. The tendency would naturally be toward one of two courses. Either he would seek to ignore the Hebrews and to become more and more identified with the Egyptians, or else he would exercise faith in the special promises of which his people were heirs as children of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Moses threw himself into the scuffle.

St. Paul notes that Moses was a victor in this test. He chose to suffer affliction with the people of God rather than to enjoy the honors which might have been his as an adopted member of the royal family. (Hebrews 11:24-26.) To Moses the Promise which God made to Abraham, and repeated to Isaac and Jacob, and which still awaits fulfilment, was more to be desired than all the riches and honors of earth.

Moses Discouraged, Heartbroken.

Trusting in the Lord's Promise, Moses believed that the time had come for the deliverance of the Israelites from bondage. He knew well of his miraculous preservation, and had the assurance of God's Promise that this signified that God had a special work for him to do. He was anxious to begin that work. He knew not of his own unreadiness—that he would require forty years of special schooling. Supposing that the time had come to strike for liberty, he was on the alert.

An occasion to show his zeal for his brethren came when he saw an Egyptian abusing one of them unjustly. Moses threw himself into the conflict. The Egyptian was killed in the scuffle. Moses perceived that none of the Egyptians knew of the matter, so he buried the victim in the sand. He doubted not that his brethren would pass the word along that he was their friend and defender, and would look to him with confidence as their leader, when God's providence would open the door for them to leave Egypt. But all his dreams faded when, next day, he perceived that there was no such loyalty among his brethren, and that they were ready to deliver him to the Egyptian authorities.

Moses helped them.

Thoroughly discouraged and fearing for his life, Moses fled to the wilderness of Midian. It looked as though his education and development had gone to waste. He had supposed that he was being prepared to be the captain of the Lord's host, and to lead it forth. In one hour all of his hopes were dashed, and he was a fugitive.

Moses Jethro's Shepherd.

As the fugitive sat upon the casing of a well, shepherds brought their flocks for water. Amongst the sheep-tenders were Jethro's daughters; and opposing them some ungallant shepherds, who hindered them. Moses took their part, and drew water for their flocks. Incidentally he walked with them toward their home. Jethro was appreciative of the stranger, who did not at the time disclose his identity. Moses was thoroughly crestfallen, meek, teachable.

God's dealings with Moses illustrate the general principles of His dealings with those whom He would make special servants prepared for special services. Our Lord Jesus in the Heavenly courts testified His fidelity to the Almighty. The opportunity was given Him of becoming the Saviour of humanity. Through suffering even the death of the cross our Lord demonstrated His worthiness of high exaltation.

a minute, captain," he said. got another passenger. She o the house last evening, but e thought this would be an ex- ay for you, and you must sleep aration for it. So we kept her background. It was something , but— Hurrah! Here she is!" Peabody, the lawyer's wife, the front door. She was laugh-

YRUS!" SHE SCREAMED JOYOUSLY.

next moment a small figure her down the steps and into the carriage like a red hooded bombshell.

"Uncle Cyrus!" she screamed joyously. "Uncle Cyrus, it's me! Here I am!"

And Captain Cy, springing up and, shedding wraps and robes, received the bombshell with open arms and hugged it tight.

"Bos'n!" he shouted. "By the big dipper, Bos'n! Why, you little—you—you"—

CHAPTER XXIII.

THAT was a wonderful ride. Emily sat in the captain's lap—he positively refused to let her sit beside him on the seat, although Peabody urged it, fearing the child might tire him—and her tongue rattled like a sewing machine. She had a thousand things to tell—about her school, about Georgianna, about her dolls, about Lonesome, the cat, and how many mice he had caught, and about the big snowstorm.

"Georgianna wanted me to stay at home and wait for you, Uncle Cy," she said, "but I teased and teased, and finally they said I could come over. I came yesterday on the train. Mr. Tidditt went with me to the depot. Mrs. Peabody let me peek into your room last night, and I saw you eating supper. You didn't know I was there, did you?"

"You bet I didn't! There'd have been a mutiny right then if I'd caught sight of you. You little sculpin! Playin' it on your Uncle Cy, was you? I didn't know you could keep a secret so well."

"Oh, yes, I can! Why, I know an ever so much bigger secret too. It is— Why, I most forgot! You just wait."

The captain laughingly begged her to divulge the big secret, but she shook her small head and refused. The horses trotted on at a lively pace, and the miles separating Ostable and Bayport were subtracted one by one. It was magnificent winter weather. The snow had disappeared from the road, except in widely separated spots, but the big drifts still heaped the fields and shone and sparkled in the sunshine. Against their whiteness the pitch pines and cedars stood darkly green and the skeleton scrub oaks and bushes cast delicate blue penciled shadows. The bay, seen over the flooded, frozen salt meadows and distant dunes, was in its winter dress of the deepest sapphire, trimmed with whitecaps and fringed with stranded ice cakes. There were a snap and a tang in the breeze which braced one like a tonic. The party in the carriage was a gay one.

"Getting tired, captain?" asked Peabody.

"Who? Me? Well, I guess not. Most home, Bos'n. There's the salt works ahead there."

They passed the abandoned salt works, the crumbling ruins of a dead industry, and the boundary stone, now half hidden in a drift, marking the beginning of Bayport township. Then, from the pine grove at the curve farther on, appeared two capped and coated figures, performing a crazy fandango.

"Who's them two lunatics," inquired Captain Cy, "whoopin' and carryin' on in the middle of the road? Has anybody up this way had a jug come by express or— Hey! What? Why, you old idiots you! Come here and let me get hold of you!"

The board of strategy swooped down upon the carriage like Trumet mosquitoes on a summer boarder. They swarmed into the vehicle, Bailey on the front seat and Asaph in the rear, where, somehow or other, they made room for him. There were handshakings and thumps on the back.

"What you doin' way up here in the west end of nowhere?" demanded Captain Cy. "By the big dipper, I'm glad to see you! How'd you get here?"

"Walked," cackled Bailey, "frogged it all the way. Soon's Mrs. Peabody wired you was goin' to ride, me and Ase started to meet you. Wan't you surprised?"

"We wanted to be the fust to say howdy, old man," explained Asaph. "Wanted to welcome you back, you know."

The captain was immensely pleased.

"Well, I'm glad I've got so much popularity, anyhow," he said. "Guess 'twill be different when I get down street, hey? Don't cal'late Tad and Angie 'll shed the joyous tear over me. Never mind; long's my friends are glad I don't care about the rest."

The board looked at each other.

"Tad?" repeated Bailey. "And Angie? What you talkin' about? Why, they— Ugh!"

The last exclamation was the result of a tremendous dig in the ribs from the Tidditt fist. Asaph, who had leaned forward to administer it, was frowning and shaking his head. Mr. Bangs relapsed into a grinning silence.

West Bayport seemed to be deserted. At one or two houses, however, feminine heads appeared at the windows. One old lady shook a calico apron at the carriage. A child beside her cried "Hurrah!"

"Aunt Hepsy h'istin' colors by mistake!" laughed the captain. "She ain't got her specs, I guess, and thinks I'm Heman. That comes of ridin' astern of a span, Peabody."

But as they drew near the center flags were flying from front yard poles. Some of the houses were decorated.

"What in the world"— began Captain Cy. "Land sakes! Look at the schoolhouse, and Simmons', and—and Simpson's!"

The schoolhouse flag was flapping in the wind. The scarred wooden pillars of its portico were hidden with bunting. Simmons' front displayed a row of little banners, each bearing a letter. The letters spelled "Welcome Home!" Tad's barber shop was more or less artistically wreathed in colored tissue paper. There, too, a flag was draped over the front door. Yet not a single person was in sight.

"For goodness' sake," cried the bewildered captain, "what's all this mean? And where is everybody? Have all hands"—

He stopped in the middle of the sentence. They were at the foot of Whittaker's hill. Its top, between the Atkins' gate and the Whittaker fence, was black with people. Children pranced about the outskirts of the crowd. A shout came down the wind. The horses, not in the least fatigued by their long canter, trotted up the slope. The shouting grew louder. A wave of youngsters came racing to meet the equipage.

"What—what in time?" gasped Captain Cy. "What's up? I"—

And then the town clerk seized him by the arm. Peabody shook his other hand, Bos'n threw her arms about his neck. Bailey stood up and waved his hat.

"It's you, you old critter!" whooped Asaph. "It's you, d'you understand?"

"The appropriation has at last gone through," explained the lawyer, "and this is the celebration in consequence. And you are the star attraction, because, you see, every one knows you are responsible for it."

"That's what!" howled the excited Bangs. "And we're going to show you what we think of you for doin' it. We've been plannin' this for over a fortni't."

"And I knew it all the time," squealed Bos'n, "and I didn't tell a word, did I?"

"Three cheers for Captain Whittaker!" bellowed a person in the crowd. This person—wonder of wonders!—was Tad Simpson.

The cheering was, considering the size of the crowd, tremendous. Bewildered and amazed, Captain Cy was assisted from the carriage and escorted to his front door. Amid the handkerchief waving, applauding people he saw Keturah Bangs and Alpheus Smalley and Angeline Phinney and Captain Salters—even Alonzo Snow, his recent opponent in town meeting. Josiah Dimick was there, too, apparently having a fit.

On the doorstep stood Georgianna, and—and—yes, it was true—beside her, grandly extending a welcoming hand, the majestic form of the Hon. Heman Atkins. Some one else was there also, some one who hurriedly slipped back into the crowd as the owner of the Cy Whittaker place came up the path between the hedges.

Mr. Atkins shook the captain's hand and then, turning toward the people, held up his own for silence. To all outward appearance he was still the great Heman, our district idol, philanthropist and leader. His silk hat glistened as of old; his chest swelled in the old manner; his whiskers were just as dignified and awe inspiring. For an instant, as he met the captain's eye, his own faltered and fell, and there was a pleading expression in his face, the lines of which had deepened just a little, but only for an instant; then he began to speak.

"Cyrus," he said, "it is my pleasant duty, on behalf of your neighbors and friends here assembled, to welcome you to your—er—ancestral home after your trying illness. I do it heartily, sincerely, gladly. And it is the more pleasing to me to perform this duty because, as I have explained publicly to my fellow townspeople, all disagreement between us is ended. I was wrong—again I publicly admit it. A scheming blackleg, posing in the guise of a loving father, imposed upon me. I am sorry for the trouble I have caused you. Of you and of the little girl with you I ask pardon—I entreat forgiveness."

He paused. Captain Cy, the shadow of a smile at the corner of his mouth, nodded and said briefly:

"All right, Heman. I forgive you." Few heard him. The majority were applauding the congressman. Sylvanus Cahoon, whispering in the ear of Uncle Bedny, expressed as his opinion that "that was about as magnaminious a thing as ever I heard said—yes, sir, mag-na-min-ious—that's what I call it."

"But," continued the great Atkins, "I have said all this to you before. What I have to say now—what I left my duties in Washington expressly to come here and say—is that Bayport thanks you, I thank you, for your tremendous assistance in obtaining the appropriation which is to make our harbor a busy port, where our gallant fishing fleet may ride at anchor and unload its catch, instead of transferring it in dories, as heretofore. Friends, I have already told you how this man," laying a hand on the captain's shoulder, "came to the capital and used his influence among his acquaintances in high places, with the result that the $30,000 which I had despaired of getting was added to the bill. I had the pleasure of voting for that bill. It passed. I am proud of that vote."

Tremendous applause. Then some one called for three cheers for Mr. Atkins. They were given. But the recipient merely bowed.

"No, no," he said deprecatingly—"no, no; not for me, my friends, much as I appreciate your gratitude. My days of public service are nearly at an end. As I have intimated to some of you already, I am seriously considering retiring from political life in the near future. But that is irrelevant; it is not material at present. Today we meet not to say farewell to the setting but to greet the rising sun. I call for three cheers for our committee of one—Captain Cyrus Whittaker."

When the uproar had at last subsided there were demands for a speech from Captain Cy. But the captain, facing them, his arms about the delighted Bos'n, positively declined to orate.

"I—I'm ever so much obliged to you, folks," he stammered. "I am so. But you'll have to excuse me from speechmakin'. They—they didn't teach it afore the mast, where I went to college. Thank you just the same. And do come and see me, everybody. Me and this little girl," drawing Emily nearer to him, "will be real glad to have you."

GIRL SUFFERED TERRIBLY

At Regular Intervals—Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured her.

Adrian, Texas.—"I take pleasure in adding my testimonial to the great list and hope that it will be of interest to suffering women. For four years I suffered untold agonies at regular intervals. Such pains and cramps, severe chills and sickness at stomach, then finally hemorrhages until I would be nearly blind. I had five doctors and none of them could do more than relieve me for a time.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took seven boxes of it and used two bottles of the Sanative Wash, and I am completely cured of my trouble. When I began taking the Compound I only weighed ninety-six pounds and now I weigh one hundred and twenty-six pounds. If anyone wishes to address me in person I will cheerfully answer all letters, as I cannot speak too highly of the Pinkham remedies."—Miss JESSIE MARSH, Adrian, Texas.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Will Succeed Lyttleton.

LONDON, July 11.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Sir Alex. Henderson, chairman of the Great Central Railway, who formerly represented West Staffordshire eight years, is expected to become M.P. of St. George's, Hanover Square, vice the late Alfred Lyttleton. Sir Alexander's son, Major Henderson, represents Abingdon. A contest in St. George's is improbable, the constituency being impregnably Unionist.

SUMMER HEAT HARD ON BABY

No season of the year is so dangerous to the life of little ones as is the summer. The excessive heats throws the little stomach out of order so quickly that unless prompt aid is at hand the baby may be beyond all human help before the mother realizes he is ill. Summer is the season when diarrhoea, cholera infantum, dysentry and colic are most prevalent. Any one of these troubles may prove deadly if not promptly treated. During the summer the mother's best friend is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels, sweeten the stomach and keep baby healthy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

KING'S SIX THRONES.

Most Unique Is Throne at Windsor, the Gift of Princes of India.

King George has six thrones. One would naturally suppose that the King would "sit upon his throne" at Windsor—that which, so to speak, would be the "official throne." While, however, there are both a throne and a throne room in that ancient palace, the Windsor throne is probably the very last one of all whereon one might find the English sovereign.

The throne at Buckingham Palace is the more generally used, inasmuch as the greater amount of ceremonial functions occur there.

The King of England may be said to have a set of thrones. In the case of one throne — the coronation chair at Westminster Abbey—he certainly uses it but once. This is the worm-eaten, battered, lion-footed, old oak settle that contains the "Stone of Destiny." Upon it since the days of Edward II. have been crowned all the rulers of England. This chair might very well be called the "throne of the British Empire," since it is by far the most ancient of the English thrones. To be crowned the ruler must sit upon this throne, and no other.

One may be sure of one thing, however, in this connection—no King of England, or anyone else for that matter, would voluntarily seek a seat on this ancient throne more than once, since it is a decidedly uncomfortable resting place. It stands, year in and year out, in the chapel of Edward the Confessor, and it is removed only on the occasion of a coronation. Then, covered with gold brocade, it is set under the lectern between the choir and the altar.

The throne with which the British public is most familiar is that which stands upon a dais in the House of Lords. The Houses of Parliament contain another throne — that in the King's robing room. This is employed by the King when he is donning his regal garb prior to entering the House of Peers to read his speech.

Another throne is that at St. James' Palace, which is a very ordinary looking building at the foot of St. James street. This throne is a very handsome one, standing under a magnificent and ornate canopy. It is here that the foreign ambassadors who are credited to the Court of St. James are received.

The throne at Windsor is unique in one respect. It is constructed entirely of ivory. It was a gift from the princes of India.

When Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cured her Chronic Liver Complaint

Mrs. R. Smith, of Winnipeg, Man., tells an interesting story of relief from almost intolerable sufferings:

Hearing of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, I thought they were worthy of a trial. My surprise was indeed great. From the very first I experienced relief. Continuing with them I found my troubles were slowly but surely leaving me, and before long I once more knew what it was to be free from the harassing effects of the ailments that had long sickened and weakened me. So great is my faith in Dr. Morse's Indian Pills that I shall never on any account be without them."

PETES WON DOUBLE BILL AND TOOK FIFTH PLACE

Rowanites Took Eight Runs in the Fourth of Second Game, and the Saints Got Six in Their Seventh.

Peterborough fans are still talking about that double victory of the Petes at St. Thomas yesterday. It is a long time since more interesting sporting news came over the wires.

To beat Bill Baker, the premier twirler of the Saints, on his own lot, was a big feat, and then to win again in the second bill was something extra.

As a result of the double win, the Petes moved up to fifth position, the standing being, won 29, lost 27, or a percentage of .518, ten points ahead off Hamilton. Sterling started with the Petes, but gave way to Tracey, who performed so well that Manager Rowan sent him in against the Saints for the seven innings go. There must have been some woe in St. Thomas. Brodie did the heaving.

The score of the first game was 7—5, and that of the second contest 9—6. The score was given out as 1—0 at the end of the sixth, but when the summary was received, the correction also came. The Petes had scored eight runs in the fourth, while St. Thomas counted six runs in the seventh.

ATHLETIC EVENTS AT THE Y.M.C.A. BOYS CAMP

The results of the athletic events held yesterday at the annual camp of the Y.M.C.A. Boys, at Sandy Point, are as follows:

BUSINESS BOYS.

Gray, 16 1-2 points.
Soden, 15 1-2 points.
Head, 6 points.

SENIOR EVENTS.

Hamilton, 22 points.
Williamson, 13 points.

JUNIOR EVENTS.

Burns, 16 points.
Patterson, 12 points.
Thompson, 8 points.
Flowers, 6 points.

The camp breaks to-day and the boys are expected home sometime this afternoon, after one of the most successful outings in the history of the "Y" annual camp at Sandy Point.

---

A merry battle will be put up over the game at Petesboro which was lost by Umpire Evan's decision. The conduct of Manager Rowan, of the Petes', when he is said to have threatened Evans with corporal punishment via the olfactory organ, was almost enough to make an umpire decide to end things abruptly, especially in view of the fact that the crowd was surging on the field, and also showing a tendency to mix things.—Brantford Courier.

MANY FARMERS WITNESS PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATION BY TRACTION DITCHER

A practical and most interesting demonstration by a traction ditcher was held yesterday afternoon at the farm of Mr. J. Matchett of the 16th concession of Otonabee.

The demonstration was held under the auspices of the Ontario Agricultural College and was attended by some 150 farmers, including a large number of ladies, whose interest in the proceedings were as keen as the men. That the demonstration was a success could be easily evinced by the attitude of the farmers who were highly pleased, and with the discussions that followed.

Mr. E. S Hopkins, District Representative of the O.A.C., was chairman. He had been connected with the Department of Agriculture some time and assured the gathering that the machine in question was one of the best he had seen in use.

"Mr Matchett hasn't had a crop on this field for some 12 years," said the speaker, "but just wait until next year."

Mr. E. A. Peck, M.L.A., the next speaker said he was sure that the O.A.C was a great benefit to the farmers. The district representatives also deserved great praise for their work.

Mr. U. S. Spry, lecturer at the Agricultural College, in a short address to the gathering, spoke of great benefit and the good results obtained by the use of the traction ditcher. The machine cost somewhere in the neighborhood of $1,900 and would easily pay for itself in a couple of years.

In 1881 Otonabee had some 6,000 acres drained so the drainage system was not new in Otonabee.

"Good drainage, averages an increase in crops of 11-3 per cent," said the speaker, "and you can always get your crop in two or three weeks sooner every spring."

Mr. R. Clements, a graduate of O. A. C., spoke a few words on the physics department and drainage system of the O.C.A. Mr. Clements had operated the machine for some time and was confident of the ditcher's power. He also claimed crops could be put in earlier and far better results obtained.

"Next year we'll hold a meeting here and then everybody can see what the [illegible] we have," concluded Mr. Clem

Warden Carbutt was present at the meeting and expressed himself that the ditcher was an excellent investment.

"It would be a good idea for townships to borrow money to purchase a ditcher," said Ald. Gillespie, who also addressed the meeting.

THE LIFE OF A MARTYR

Was In Agony For Years And Nothing Gave Him Relief Until He Used "Fruit-a-tives" The Famous Medicine Made From Fruit.

ALFRED FERRIS, ESQ.

PENETANGUISHENE, ONT., March 4th, 1913

"I want to inform you of what your remedy "Fruit-a-tives" did for me.

"For years, I was a martyr to Dyspepsia and Constipation, often having to leave work from the agonizing pains of Acute Indigestion. Doctors treated me continually, but without satisfactory results. It seemed to me that I tried every advertised medicine on the market, and got no relief.

"On one of the days that I was compelled to absent myself from work, a neighbor came to my house to whom I told of my suffering, and he said to me that all I had to do, if I had Dyspepsia, was to take "Fruit-a-tives". They would cure me. He had cured himself. I immediately procured a 50c box and continued taking them until cured. I suppose I took in all, about eleven boxes and I am glad to be able to say that I have been free of Indigestion for nearly two years. They cured the Constipation also. They were worth their weight in gold to me and I will be glad to have you publish this letter, along with my photo, if it will induce another dyspeptic to take the right road to a permanent cure."

Yours truly, ALFRED FERRIS.

Don't suffer any longer. To-day—right now—get "Fruit-a-tives" and cure yourself. "Fruit-a-tives" will sweeten the stomach—strengthen the stomach muscles, increase the quantity of digestive juices, regulate Kidneys and Bowels, and make the digestion as sound as a bell. "Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure every case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Belching Gas, Bloated Feeling after eating, and all other disorders of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Mr. Herb Dicks Attended Funeral of His Father

Mr. Herbert Dicks, 509 Patterson street, returned last night from attending the funeral of his father, Mr. Geo. Dicks, of Washington, P.A. ### Pillar Stamp Vendors.

The new postal pillar boxes, which are likewise a stamp-vending machine, will soon be an established institution in Canada.

The company will start out at the first installation with 1,500 boxes. These will in all likelihood be established in the cities of Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa, where negotiations have gone on. They will replace the ordinary letter box in time, and ought to prove a big convenience.

The original inventor of the mechanism in the box, is supposed to have been a New Zealand postal clerk. It works in principle like gum slots, candy boxes and so forth. It has been on trial in England, France, and the United States.

OFFICERS REPORTED AS ABSENT FROM THEIR BEATS

P. C. McGinity is Granted Two Months' Leave of Absence

Afterwards it was learned that the meeting was adjourned to Monday afternoon. Action will then b taken.

The two officers, P. C. Bullied and P. C. Gamble, were reported to Chief Thompson for violation of the rules and regulations of the police department.

The report was made by Acting Sergeant Brown, who found the two officers absent from their respective beats while on night duty.

P. C. Bullied is on the regular force, but P. C. Gamble is a probationer.

BIG CHANGES TO BE MADE AT CRESSMANS

Necessitated by the ever-increasing business, the Cressman Company are enlarging their store by building an addition to the back of the third and fourth floors, and by taking out partitions on these two flats and also on the second floor. The re arrangement and building will increase the selling space about 25 per cent.

The ground floor will be fitted up with new counters and cases which will give about one-third more space. Several new departments will be added, including an up-to-date furniture department on the third and fourth floors and a children's department on the second floor. The new departments that will be placed on the ground floor have not yet been decided upon.

Henry Thuber Has Dispute With His Daughter-in-law

A general family misunderstanding was aired in Police Court this morning when Henry Thuber, Clifton street, was charged with assaulting his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Emily Page, of 194 Clifton street. After the evidence was taken, the case was thrown out, as Magistrate Dumble contended that misunderstanding existed on both sides.

The complainant charged that Thuber slapped her on the face during a dispute, but Thuber claimed it was an accident. It seems his wife has resided with the daughter-in-law and Thuber wishes her to return to his home.

DIVIDED OPINION ON QUESTION OF ANNEXING BROWNTON TO THE CITY

What Prominent Residents of "Little Peterboro" Have to Say on the Subject---Would be a Hardship for the Workingmen

To present to the city of Peterborough a new $9,000 school, and taxes for some years, without receiving anything other than what they have already got, is the offer made to the residents of Brownton, or, as it has been known, Byersville. The laying of a water main for the use of the Henry Hope and Son plant has placed a water service very near the houses of the people in the above mentioned district, and these people waited on the Council and Fire Chief Howard to see, if, for the same rate the citizens pay they might have fire protection, too.

The city fathers have, for some time been trying to get these people to annex with the city, but unsuccessfully, and now that the residents of Brownton have asked a favor, the City Fathers have deemed it advisable not to grant the same unless they are willing to join the city.

It is of course, not the people of the above mentioned district that bear the burden of expense for the various public works, but it is the citizens of Peterborough. therefore the residents of the little suburb have no right to the advantage. At the same time they are invited to join the city, and on this question they are somewhat divided.

ONE OPINION.

There are two classes of people in Byersville. There are those who are in business and have a number of houses, and there are the men who are struggling to get a start in life. The division on the subject of annexation, finds these two classes running in opposite channels. Mr. J. W. Byers has a good business worked up, and also has a very fine house, which in case of fire would be burned down. He is in favor of annexation, for the simple reason, that while it would cost him a little more, yet for the comforts of sewer connection, water service and fire protection, he would readily pay the extra amount of taxes. Being inside the fire protection limits would also decrease the cost of fire insurance. This would more or less cover some of the extra expense. Mr. Byers stated that if a set rate of taxes could be made for the residents of Brownton for a number of years, he was sure that a number of who are at present opposed to the step, would be willing to join the city.

AN OPPOSITE VIEW.

Mr. A. Saunders, the other business man in the village, takes another view of the affair. He, not being the first grocer in the district, has had a rather hard time to work up trade. If annexation took place he would have a large business tax to pay, which, along with the other taxes, would amount to quite a large amount. At present he pays eight dollars a year taxes, so it can be easily seen that such a step would mean a lot more expense. When asked if he did not think that the city advantages he could obtain, would not more than make up for the extra expense, he had the following explanation to make: The City of Peterborough is having a rather hard time to make the necessary improvements in the districts that have been in the city for years. Before Brownton could be equipped with a sewer, the great sewer question which at present confronts the city must be threshed out and it is easy reckoning that it will be a good five years before this can be completed. How much longer would it take to get the council to place a sewer in Brownton? This question is hard to answer. Mr. Saunders thinks that the residents should wait till the city is ready to give them some improvements and then annex. His closing remarks were "What is the use of presenting the City of Peterborough with five or six years' taxes when they cannot give us anything other than what we have got."

MR. GEORGE MAY.

Mr. George May, also a resident of Brownton, and a member of the North Monaghan Council, had the same views as Mr. Saunders.

He said that there were a large number of heads of families who were not in a good position, financially. They had come to Brownton and invested in alot and borrowed the money to build a house. They were paying this money back in monthly payments. Now, if the sewer did come down there they could not afford to have the connection made and plumbing installed. Therefore, why should these people be called upon to pay a tax of 25 mills and not reap anymore benefit than they are getting now when they are paying only eight?

Another reason why Mr. May did not want annexation is this: Recently it was decided to enlarge their school and the cost will be between nine and ten thousand dollars. The debenture is signed by the people of the district and if annexation takes place this debt will not be taken over by the city but it will have to be paid by the residents along with their taxes. If Brownton had been annexed prior to the building of this school the city would have had to pay for it, so by annexing now, the residents of this village would be making a present of this new school to the city of Peterborough which it is claimed has never accomplished anything for Brownton.

Mrs. John King's Father Made First Drum Used by Orangemen

To-day is the 223rd anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, and perhaps no truer Orange heart beats than that of Mrs. John King, 610 Bethune street. Just seventy years ago to-day Mrs. King, then a tot, three years old, had her first view of Peterborough. Coming from England via Cobourg and Rice Lake, she went over a journey which few living can equal. Settling in Peterborough she has never been absent longer than a month.

Her father was a staunch Orangeman and he made the first drum that was heard on the streets of Peterborough. He presented it to the L. O.L. which then had a membership of 12 men.

Her father died on the 12th of July, 30 years ago, and in memorium Mrs. King sends the following:

CAMP MEETINGS AT THE GROVE

Will Continue Till Next Tuesday Evening

The camp meeting in Edward's Grove, near Jackson Park, will continue until Tuesday evening, 15th inst. People have been arriving daily since the 7th, and a large camp now occupies the grove. The meetings are increasing in interest and power. The preaching is of the radical, evangelical type, and carries conviction to the conscience of the hearer. A number have been at the mercy seat, seeking the favor of God. These people contend that the Bible is the inspired word of God, and that its authority is the same as it was nineteen hundred years ago. They teach that it is the privilege of every person to be consciously right with God, and that persons enjoying such an experience, will bear fruits by living a consistent life. The doctrine and experience of entire sanctification as held by Methodism from its incipiency is strongly proclaimed. The people of Peterborough are invited to attend these services which are in progress daily.—Com.

IRISH GUARDS BAND

Most Popular of all the British Bands That Have Visited Canada

The Band of the Irish Guards, who feature the music at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, need no introduction to Canadian music lovers. They were brought over to the Canadian National Exhibition in 1905 and so enthusiastically were they received that it was decided to tour them from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The tour was carried out and its success marked the Irish Guards as the most popular of the splendid British Military Bands that have visited Canada.

Visitors to the Exhibition that year will still remember the selection from Il Trovatore and the cornet solo that came floating in from a distant part of the grounds. The same Soloist, Sergeant Hunt, is still with the band. Then you'll remember "Baby Sweetheart." The whole country was whistling and humming it.

SERVIA AND GREECE REFUSE TO AGREE TO AN ARMISTICE; NO SIGNS OF PEACE YET

Stories of Bulgarian Atrocities Are Repeated and Bulgarian Soldiers Are Said to Have Been Found With Pieces of Fingers and Ears Bearing Jewels—Russia Expected to Intervene.

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, July 14.—Roumanian war vessels are blockading all Bulgarian ports and Bulgarian gunboats and torpedo boats have sought refuge in Sebastopol.

Roumanian detachments have occupied a number of bulgarian towns having crossed the Danube at several points. The Roumanians seem about to advance on Sofia and dictate peace from the Bulgarian capital. Despatches from Saloniki confirm previous reports of Bulgarian outrages at seres which was bombarded and then burned after being pillaged. Not even the foreign consulates and business places were spared. The Sacking of the place was accompanied by atrocities committed on men and the outrage of women.

LONDON, July 14.—The Balkan states appear to be again in the melting pot. There is no sign of peace at present. Greece and Servia have declined so far to agree to an armistice. The Turkish army is advancing by forced marches from Tchatalja and Bulair, apparently with the consent of Greece and Servia, to attempt the recapture of Adrianople and Thrace. Roumania is said to be proceeding to occupy a much larger extent of Bulgarian territory than she previously claimed, and Greece is burning to avenge the Bulgarian massacres, concerning which horrifying details continually appear in the official reports issued from Athens and Saloniki. According to these reports, ears and fingers of Greek women still bearing earrings and rings were found in the packets of Bulgarian prisoners.

There is still talk of Russian interference, and it is reported from St. Petersburg that the powers in concert have notified the Sublime Porte that they will not permit military operations beyond the Enos-Midia line fixed by the London conference. But the European concert is slow in moving.

No fresh fighting is reported, and it appears that the rumors regarding a revolution in Sofia are without foundation.

The Bulgarian Government accuses Greece of circulating false accounts of Bulgarian atrocities, with a view to preparing the ground for future territorial claims, and expresses itself as willing to submit the whole matter to an international intervention.

An active campaign of recrimination regarding which side began the hostilities, and of accusations and denials of atrocities, is going on between Bulgaria on the one side and Servia and Greece on the other.

In Bulgarian official circles in London it is announced that an agreement has been reached with Turkey to regard the Enos-Midia line as a provisional frontier, pending final delimitation by the international commission.

A Vienna despatch to The Exchange Telegraph Co. says: "It is rumored here, but not confirmed, that a revolution has broken out in Sofia, and that King Ferdinand has been assassinated."

Cause of Defeat.

VIENNA, July 14.—A high Austrian military authority attributes the defeat of the Bulgarians to the indecision of the Government's policy. This reacted against the plan of campaign, destroying its efficiency and causing a lack of unity between the Cabinet and military staff. Contradictory orders resulted, which had a dispiriting influence on the army.

Another important cause of the defeat was a shortage of officers and the presence of inexperienced recruits on the firing line.

Turkey Makes Hay.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 14.—The Turkish troops at Tchatalja and Bulair have received orders to march for the re-occupation of the Ottoman territory now held by the Bulgarians. Preparations are being hastily made for an advance toward the Ergeni line.

The Bulgarian delegate, N. Natchovitch, last night expressed regret at the failure of his mission, which he had hoped would result in a Turco-Bulgarian alliance.

The mission of the Servian delegate, M. Pavlovitch, has proved successful. It is said that an agreement between Turkey and Servia will be signed today.

TELLS ON HIS PALS.

State Senator Stilwell Informs on Albany Legislators.

NEW YORK, July 14.—Ex-State Senator Stephen J. Stilwell, convicted recently of soliciting a bribe and sentenced to from four to eight years in Sing Sing, turned over to District Attorney Whitman yesterday what is said to be a statement involving members of the Senate and Assembly, in connection with alleged irregular acts with reference to legislation enacted at Albany last year.

Stilwell's sentence was purposely delayed by the district attorney, and for days it had been rumored that he would supply the prosecutor with evidence against certain of his former colleagues in the hope of gaining immunity. Counsel for Stilwell would not confirm yesterday the report of the alleged disclosures.

No New Trial For Becker.

NEW YORK, July 14.—Charles Becker's application for a new trial on the charge of murdering the gambler, Herman Rosenthal, was denied by Supreme Court Justice Goff Saturday. Counsel had sought to reopen the case on the ground of newly-discovered evidence.

Justice Goff, who was the trial judge in the Becker case and in the case of the four gunmen also convicted, held that the former lieutenant had had a fair trial before him, and in a 17-page opinion, denied the plea. If relief comes to Becker now it must be through the higher courts. For months he has been in the death house at Sing Sing.

NO SHADOW OF CHANCE FOR SEPARATE SCHOOLS

Will Not be Introduced in Manitoba Says Hon. G. R. Caldwell

BRANDON, Man., July 14.—In reply to questions asked him at the annual celebration of the Orange Order, Manitoba provincial section, held here Saturday, Hon. G. R. Caldwell, Minister of Education, stated positively that, so far as he was concerned, the question of separate schools in the province was not an issue. "There is not a shadow of a chance of separate schools being introduced in Manitoba," said the Minister.

The discussion came up when Jas. Willoughby, Manitoba grand master and ex-alderman of Winnipeg, asked what the Government proposed to do in regard to separate schools and whether the amendments to the Schools Act, passed at the last session of the Legislature, were not in that direction.

Mr. Caldwell took exception to what he termed the questionable task of introducing local political issues before such a gathering, and pointed out that the amendments passed had been received with equal favor by Liberal and Conservative members of the House. The vote for the amendments had been unanimous.

He also read to the meeting two communications to the school board which had an important bearing upon the point under discussion. They were from the Roman Catholic school management and from the Grand Lodge of the Orange Order, both of them asking that the Roman Catholic private schools in Winnipeg should be taken over by the city school board and operated as public schools.

He suggested that if Mr. Willoughby wished to discuss school matters as a political issue it should be done at the proper time and in the proper place. An attempt had been made to have such a public discussion, but without avail. He felt that it was contrary to the best principles of the Orange Order to jump to a conclusion without proper consideration of a question.

In closing Mr. Caldwell said that before separate schools could be introduced into the province he would resign, and there were others of the Cabinet who were with him in that position.

Rain greeted the Orangemen on their arrival here to take part in the celebration of the twelfth Saturday morning. In all twelve special trains carried visitors into the city.

BANANA DUTY OPPOSED.

New Yorkers Say It Is the "Fruit of the Poor Man."

NEW YORK, July 14.—President Wilson will be deluged with hundreds of letters from New Yorkers in defence of the banana as the "Poor man's fruit," if those present Friday night at a meeting in Cooper Union follow the advice of speakers in protest against the proposed tax of one-tenth of one per cent. per pound on bananas imported into this country.

Mrs. Julia Peath, president of the Housewives' League, and other women spoke, urging that all present send to President Wilson a personal letter of protest.

Resolutions were also passed calling upon Congress to reject the proposed tax, declaring that "Such a tariff was not within the purview of the voters who elected the Democratic party to power."

Three Years and Ten Lashes.

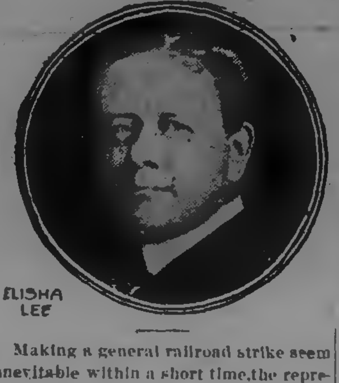
BERLIN, Ont., July 14.—Henry Trupp of Conestoga was Saturday sentenced by Judge Chisholm in the County Criminal Court to three years in the provincial penitentiary and to receive ten lashes for having seduced a young girl under the age of fourteen years.

The court delivered a scathing rebuke to the prisoner f[illegible] crime he had committed, call[illegible] selfish, low, base and vile.

GREAT RAILWAY STRIKE NOW SEEMS INEVITABLE.

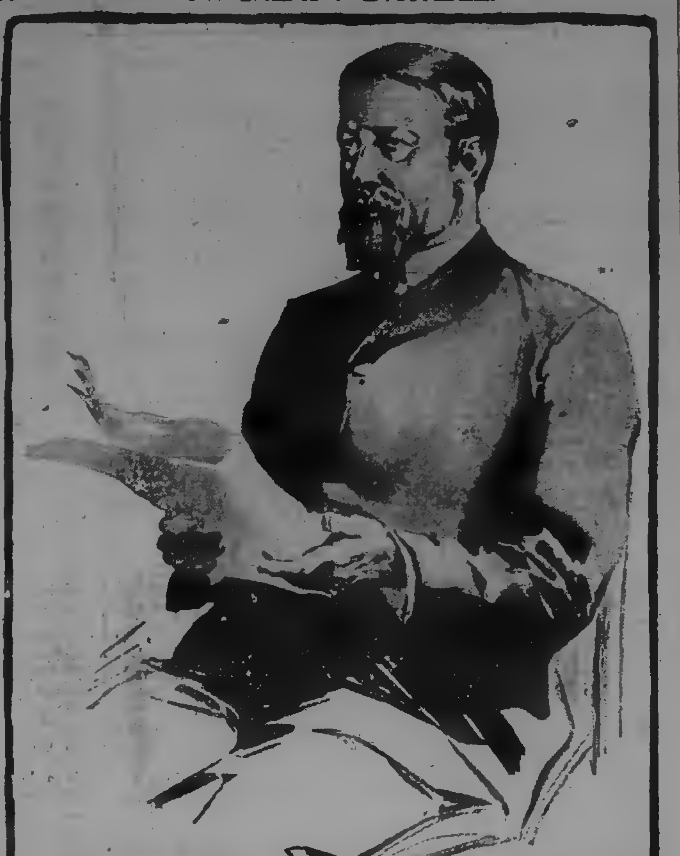


ELISHA LEE

Making a general railroad strike seem inevitable within a short time, the representatives of the forty-two railroads east of Chicago broke off all further negotiations with the representatives of the conductors and trainmen. The latter sent out a call for the general committeemen of the Eastern railroads to meet Saturday to vote on the date of the strike to begin. The vote by all the men involved, which was announced, showed that 76,683 had voted for a strike and only 4,210 against a strike.

When Elisha Lee, chairman of the Managers' Committee, refused to consider uniform increases of wages the 150 representatives of the conductors and trainmen's locals withdrew to prepare for a strike.

George F. Baer, president of the Reading Railroad, leaving to-day for Europe, asserted that in case of a general strike there would be no tie-up of the railroads, as the railroad companies were prepared for the emergency.



GEORGE F. BAER.

PETERBORO ORANGEMEN AT PORT HOPE CELEBRATION

Twelfth of July Walks Marred by Rain in Many Localities

The Glorious Twelfth was celebrated in the usual manner in Port Hope on Saturday, when that lake-side town was thronged with thousands of Orangemen and their friends.

Peterborough did nobly in the work of celebrating the annual demonstration by sending some 2,500 Orangemen from around the surrounding country. Each lodge was accompanied by their bands and with the fife and drum the day was celebrated in the usual style. The residents of Port Hope had gone to a lot of trouble in decorating their streets to receive the guests, but, alas, the weatherman failed to keep his promise and sent a heavy downpour of rain. Despite the rain the "Glorious Twelfth" saw its usual monster parade pulled off. The length of the procession was so great that it required nearly two hours to pass. Unfortunately the early departure of the trains for Peterborough cut short all attempts to listen to the speeches, which were strong and patriotic. The parade was one of the largest ever held in Port Hope and never before did the pretty little lake side town see such an influx of visitors.

At Hastings

Preparation had been made at Hastings for a large crowd and a successful celebration. Rain, however, interfered with the programme, but the people were delighted as that part of the country was much in need of rain.

The members of East and West Peterborough were the only speakers.

Mr. Burnham said that the fight now on in the world was between the people and those who thought that the people were not the ultimate human authority. It took a very wide range of view to understand the full extent of the battle line on both sides. The line of battle may be said to extend over the entire world. Some people desired to subject themselves and their opinions to the sway of one man. Other people would not. The forces on each side had been gathering for four centuries and the battle was now actually taking place. Without thoroughly understanding all the whys and wherefore, it was nevertheless possible for the most casual observer to see that the atmosphere was charged with the excitement of the contest.

At Toronto

TORONTO, July 14.—Despite the day's terrific rainstorm over 5,000 Toronto Orangemen paraded from Queen's Park to the Exhibition grounds Saturday afternoon. Had the weatherman not saved his heaviest rainstorm of the year for the Glorious Twelfth, there is little doubt but that Saturday's demonstration would have eclipsed any Orange celebration yet witnessed in Toronto. Just when the mustering at Queen's Park was assuming enormous proportions the rain came down in sheets, and hundreds who proposed marching in line ducked for shelter, and those who did not leg it for home watched the parade from the shelter of doorways or umbrellas.

The chief speaker of [illegible] day was Lt.-Col. Scott of Walkerton, supreme grand master of the Loyal Orange Lodge.

"The platform of the Orange association is broad enough for even Roman Catholics to stand upon," he declared in the course of his address. "It is broad enough for every man, no matter what his nationality, sect or creed, to stand upon. Its aim is equal rights to all. We believe in one flag, one Empire, one school, one language. Up to recent years our association was not aggressive, but today it has a determined front against the enlargement of the privileges of the Roman Catholics, when they go beyond equal rights.

"We Orangemen have no special axe to grind. Our endeavor is to help in the building up of Canada and maintaining equal rights to all."

Rally at Stayner.

STAYNER, July 14.—The Orange demonstration held in this place on Saturday was a most enthusiastic and orderly one. The town was gaily decorated with arches, flags and mottoes. Nearly five thousand people were present and the parade, which comprised some 25 lodges, from Collingwood, Creemore, Craighurst, New Lowell, Thornbury, Ruskview, Glenhuron, Nottawa, Seaforth and other places, was a most imposing and well arranged one. Addresses were delivered by Hon. J. E. Duff, Minister of Agriculture; Col. J. A. Currie, North Simcoe, and others.

Good Weather at Cornwall.

CORNWALL, July 14.—The celebration of the 223rd anniversary of the battle of the Boyne by the local Orangemen of the County of Stormont, under the direction of Monroe L.O.L. No. 880, Cornwall, here on Saturday, proved an unqualified success in every respect. The weather during the passing of the procession was ideal, but during the afternoon and evening rain fell. The streets of the town were decorated with flags, banners, streamers, etc., and presented a gay scene. It is estimated that there were 15,000 strangers in town. The parade was fully 5,000 strong. Among those who spoke were: W. Galbraith, Thos. Gilday, Rev. Rural Dean Saunders of Montreal, James Berney of Kingston, and Rev. F. Woodcock of Brockville.

Guelph Breaks Record.

GUELPH, July 14.—The biggest Orange celebration held in western Ontario in many years was that in Guelph Saturday. From early in the morning until well in the afternoon Orangemen were pouring into the city, and it is a conservative estimate to state that 15,000 visitors were here.

The parade was easily the largest and best ever seen in Guelph and took one hour and fifteen minutes to pass under the arch at London road. Lodges from all over western Ontario were strongly represented, 125 lodges being present, which is considered a record.

The speakers included S. L. Ireland of Stratford, Mr. F. Dane of Toronto, grand master of Ontario West; Thos. Wallace, M.P. for West Ontario; Capt. Osborn of Berlin and several others.

Crowds at Beaverton.

BEAVERTON, Ont., July 14.—The anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne was celebrated here Saturday. The town was tastefully decorated with bunting and arches for the occasion, and there was a large representation from all parts of North Ontario.

Ten Thousand at Halifax.

HALIFAX, N.S., July 14.—The twelfth of July was celebrated by the Orangemen of Halifax, Cumberland, Colchester and Pictou counties at Stellarton Saturday. The visitors numbered 10,000. Morning trains brought holiday makers in hundreds from all parts of the country, and later on special trains bearing thousands rolled into the depot. A conservative estimate places the number of visitors at 10,000.

In Alberta.

EDMONTON, July 14.—Orangemen from every part of Alberta flocked into Edmonton Saturday to take part in the twelfth of July celebration, organized by the provincial grand lodge.

A special train brought a contingent of over seven hundred. Orangemen with their wives and families from Calgary.

Rain Spoiled the Show.

FORT WILLIAM, July 14.—The heaviest rainstorm of the year put a damper on the Orangemen's celebration and it was impossible to stage the large program of outdoor sports that had been arranged.

Federals Capture Town.

MEXICO CITY, July 14.—The town of Monclova, in Coahuila, was captured by the federal commander, Col. Maas, after two hours hard fighting Friday, according to Government advices.

No estimate of the dead is given, but it is reported that rebels met with large losses. Monclova has been the headquarters of Vestiona Carranza the leader of the constitutionalist rebels.

BAD FLOODS

Canadian Press Despatch.

BUDAPEST, July 14.—Floods in Transylvania have devastated fifteen villages with a loss of eighty lives.

MAY GO UNDER HAMMER.

Michigan Superior Company Must Pay Five Millions or Sell Out.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., July 14.—In the U. S. District Court Saturday morning a decree of foreclosure was ordered in the case of the Real Estate Trust Co. of Philadelphia against the Michigan Lake Superior Co. of Soo, Mich., whereby the power company must pay $5,285,000 with interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum from May 1, 1913, and costs. In default of payment the property of the power company will be sold at public auction. The trust company was appointed trustee in the mortgage and the power company has not made any payment for the past ten years. The mortgage falls due in 1939. Those intimate with conditions declare the power company will be unable to meet the payment. According to the master in chancery, J. S. Lawrence, of Grand Rapids, a public sale of the property will be held within seven weeks in case payment is not made.

KING SAYS THE STORIES ARE NOT TRUE

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, July 14.—King Ferdinand wires the Evening News that stories about atrocities committed by Bulgarians are unfounded. Reports were circulated by the Servians and Greeks to create bad impressions and King Ferdinand makes counter charges against the Greeks.

Luck may be merely a case of not being found out.

HANNA MEETS PROUDFOOT; CHARGES ARE HEARD AGAIN

Entrance of Member for Centre Huron Into North Grey Bye-Election Merely Results in a Re-hash of the Accusations Made and Remade Last Spring—Mr. Hanna Lets Political Career Speak for Itself.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., July 14.—"I have been in public life for nearly twenty years, and there is not a man in the province, not a man living or dead, who can point to a dishonest act of mine in all this time."

So said Hon. W. J. Hanna at the joint meeting on Saturday night when W. H. Proudfoot, M.P.P. for Centre Huron, brought his well-worn charges into the bye-election contest in North Grey. About two thousand people came out looking for a sensation, but were disappointed. Mr. Proudfoot had nothing new to allege but repeated his previous speeches and accusations and then presented his inevitable list of questions — 17 in number—which he demanded that Mr. Hanna answer from the platform.

Mr. Hanna contented himself by pointing out that the charges had their origin in a dismissed employe who was seeking revenge. The questions were so framed that they contained inuendoes and insinuations which were absolutely false. The provincial Secretary then devoted the remainder of his time to the real issues of the bye-election, the performances and program of the Government.

Mr. Proudfoot, in presenting his case, gave a brief resume of the Taylor-Scott contract to do work at the Central Prison and the claim arising out of it.

He stated that there was a great lapse of time between the application and the granting of the fiat, and claimed that the fiat was allowed because of Taylor's charges.

"Thorne decided on the amount Taylor should receive within a week, without even calling a solicitor or a witness," said Mr. Proufoot. "He merely looked into the accounts."

Mr. Proudfoot then produced seventeen questions which he challenged the Provincial Secretary to answer. They were, in part:

"Taylor has sworn that he paid you $500 in November, 1907. There was no election then pending or immediately in sight. You admit you took the money. Why did you demand or receive at this time from a Government contractor, with unsettled claims pending before you for settlement?"

"How long did you keep this money, and to whom did you finally pay it?"

"Why did you not at once return Taylor's money and insist that he must at once prove or abandon his charges?"

"Did you confess to Sir James Whitney that all Taylor's charges were true, or only the one relating to the receipt of $500?

'Did you offer you resignation to Sir James Whitney?

"Do you know that the acceptance of the money was an indictable offence, punishable by fine and imprisonment, and that a person convicted of the offence cannot hold office under the crown or Government?

"Why do you still retain the fruits of this criminal act?

"Do you approve of the action of the public accounts committee in blocking the investigation?

"Until a full investigation is made nothing will be satisfactory to the people, and we will fight on till we get it," said Mr. Proudfoot in conclusion.

"I heard that story first upwards of a year ago," said Mr. Hanna, in his reply, "it came from Harry Maisonville. This man was discharged from his position in the Public Works Department for stealing a private letter. He left with a grievance and his one thought was to get vengeance on me, because he thought that I should have protected him.

"I have in my hand 17 questions which have just been given to me," continued the Provincial Secretary. "Every one contains insinuations, inuendo and recitals that are absolutely false. No one could have persuaded me a short time ago that there was a man who would so belittle himself and his ability in such a way.

"Contractors had made many political contributions to the Government over which the Liberal party had presided. Referring to the Taylor-Scott Co. contribution, he said that not one cent went to any illegal purpose, and it was disposed of before the claims were made.

"Thorne was asked on oath, 'Do you know of one transaction that has a mark of suspicion where I have been dishonest, where I have discriminated against the people?' His answer was 'absolutely none'."

Mr. Hanna then branched out in an account of the work in his Department. He mentioned the asylums and prisons, which, he said, could not be surpassed anywhere, which were models for the world.

In concluding, the Provincial Secretary said that it was an unjust thing on the part of Mr. Proudfoot to charge Sir James Whitney with corruption. "I hesitate to think," he said, "that the author believes that that is possible against the Premier."

Mr. Proudfoot then replied and Mr. Hanna spoke again, after which the Liberals withdrew.

YOUTHS' PRANK CAUSES MANY DEATHS AND INJURIES

Canadian Press Despatch.

LOS ANGELES, July 14.—Mischievous youths blowing a whistle on an excursion train at Venice, sixteen miles from here yesterday, are responsible for the death of twelve passengers, all residents of Los Angeles and vicinity, and injury to two hundred more.

Three excursion trains fully loaded had stopped at a curve. The last train commenced to move and then as the passengers say, the boys pulled a whistle which was taken as a signal to proceed. The car at full speed drove into the rear of a preceding train, crushing those standing on the platform and completely telescoping the train. Many of the injured will die.

TWO ARE DROWNED.

Barge Annabel Wilson Founders Off Dunkirk, Pa., In Storm.

DUNKIRK, Pa., July 14.—Captain Bernard McIntyre and his wife Elizabeth, lost their live Saturday afternoon when the barge Annabel Wilson, bound from Erie, Pa., to Port Colborne, Ont., foundered in Lake Erie off this city. The crew of the barge clung to a small boat and were rescued. They are James Mullin, of Kingston; Henry Simmons of Erie, Pa., and Albert Blundell of Port Robinson, Ont.

It is also reported that John Eddy of 29 Salisbury avenue, Toronto, who is said to have been a passenger on the barge, was drowned.

The barge, one of the largest in her class, had been used for several years in the coal-carrying trade. On Sunday morning she cleared from Erie in tow of the tug Meteor, with 1,000 tons of coal in her hold.

Just before noon a wind and rainstorm was encountered off this city. The barge made heavy weather, and finally with the mountainous seas sweeping the decks, Captain McIntyre signalled the Meteor that he needed assistance.

The crew of the tug, notwithstanding the danger of swamping their own craft, put about and made back for the barge. Before they reached her the forward deckhouse of the coal carrier plunged beneath the waves.

Mullin, Simmons and Blundell had shoved the barge's tender from the stern and shouted to the captain to come with them. Captain McIntyre called back that he wanted to get his money from the cabin. Mrs. McIntyre waited for him on the deck of the barge.

Before the captain reappeared from the companionway, the barge foundered. Mrs. McIntyre was carried beneath the waves. She quickly reappeared, however, and the crew dragged her into the small boat.

Captain McIntyre was sixty years old, and his wife was about the same age. She was taken to Dunkirk harbor, where she died an hour later.

War on Grasshoppers.

DODGE CITY, Kan., July 14.—Farmers of Western Kansas planned to begin a campaign Saturday to exterminate the herds of grasshoppers which for several days have threatened to destroy the growing crops of that section.

A carload of bran, mixed with 2,500 pounds of poison, has been distributed among the farmers. This mixture will be scattered over every green field in which the pests are found. Two state entomologists are here to superintend the work.

Threatened Her Life.

MONTREAL, July 14.—Miss Beatrice Walker had Antonio Cardasco arrested Saturday morning on a charge of threatening to plunge a knife into her heart. In the warrant she said he threatened her life, but made no endeavor to carry his plan into execution. Cardasco denied the charge point blank, but was held for trial.

IN THE CAUSE OF SCIENCE

It will no doubt interest a majority of our readers to know what Prof. R. L. Mulveney does with the countless tapeworms and other internal parasites which daily come into his possession. He wishes to inform the public that he loans them to the various medical and surgical institutes, in the cause of science. The Professor has sent specimens of these monsters to some of the world's greatest seats of learning, including Trinity College, the Medical Convention, Buffalo, N.Y., and has on file a request for samples to be lectured on at the Paris, France, Exposition. He will probably grant this also as he has several hundred rare and uncommon species of these internal demons, at his offices in Peterborough and Toronto. 28

PETERBOROUGH TO THE FORE

Peterborough is keeping well to the front in the building of factories. As is well known, there are already in process of erection two of these hives of industry in the south end of the city. The De Laval Dairy Supply Company's buildings and equipment, represent a preliminary investment of $200,000. The Company's separator factory will be moved from Montreal about September 1st, after which they expect that their output will reach $500,000 annually. They have fifteen acres of ground and will engage 150 employes.

Henry Hope & Sons Limited, are putting up a $65,000 factory in the same neighborhood, to manufacture steel sash, used for industrial buildings. 50 Employes will be engaged, and the estimated annual output will reach $2,00,000.

dAditions are also being made to the Canadian General Electric Company's buildings and also those of the Bonner Worth and G. Walter Green Companies.

All these, together with the enterprise of the Hydro Electric Commisson, go to make Peterborough one of the busiest and most go-ahead cities in Eastern Canada. The putting up of these works of course means that with the increase of labour there comes the need of more dwelling houses, and these are going up rapidly; new streets are being laid out and Peterborough will soon have to enlarge its borders.

A FISHY STORY

All fishermen tell lies, or rather stories. The tendency to exaggerate seems to possess those who have to do with the water. The sailor comes home after much voyaging and spins his yarns, the angler returns from his angling and entertains his friends with descriptions and dimensions of monsters that never were on land or sea.

An account of the catching of a gigantic sturgeon weighing 430 lbs. and measuring nearly ten feet in length comes from Littleport, Norfolk, England. The fish was caught on a hook and was five feet in girth and took five men to land it.

These fish pass the greater part of the year in the sea, but periodically ascend the rivers; some varieties attain the age of 200 years.

It is not suggested here that this fish story is not true, for the writer has good authority for believing that a sturgeon over six feet in length was caught in one of the rivers in the county of Hastings a few years ago.

But there are limits to human credence and the story which comes from the Antipodes must be taken with an unusually large pinch of salt. Here it is:

"Two men of Sydney, Australia, Oscar Davies and W. Harris were walking along the coast just before sundown on a calm day, when at a distance of about half a mile they noticed a dark object which surprised them by showing signs of movement.

"They advanced towards it, and finally came within gunshot. When about forty yards off it rose suddenly and rushed down into the sea. After getting out about thirty yards it stopped and turned round, showing only the head about five seconds, and then withdrew under the water and disappeared.

"The characteristics are summarized as follows:—

"It was 15 feet long.

"It had a very small head, only only about the size of the head of a kangaroo dog.

"It had a thick, arched neck, passing gradually into the barrel of the body.

"It had no definite tail and no fins.

"It was furred, the coat in appearance resembling that of a horse of chestnut color, well groomed and shining.

"It had four distinct legs.

"It travelled by bounding—i.e., by arching its back and gathering up its body, so that the footprints of the fore feet were level and also those of the hind feet.

"It made definite footprints. These showed circular impressions, with a diameter (measured) of 9 inches. * *

"There was no evidence for or against webbing. * * The creature travelled very fast. A kangaroo dog followed it hard in its course to the water, a distance of about 70 yards, and in that distance gained about 30 feet. When first disturbed it reared up and turned on its hind legs. Its height, standing on the four legs, would be from 3 feet 6 inches to 4 feet.

"Both men are quite familiar with seals and so-called sea leopards that occur on this coast. They had also seen before and subsequently pictures of sea lions and other marine animals, and can find no resemblance to the animal that they saw."

Wm. Condor (this may be a misprint for Codder), who relates the story, testifies to the "intelligence and sobriety" of the two men who saw the monster; he says nothing of their imagination. But he adds, philosophically, that "no one is asked to believe the story."

EDITORIAL NOTES

The London bobbies are said to be exulting over the smashing of the suffragettes. A year ago, two hundred women were under sentence for militant outrages, to-day there are only twenty-one.

The British Isles has to pay pretty dearly for the Gulf Stream blanket which protects them from the Arctic blast to which we are exposed in the winter. All last summer they scarcely had a fine day, and now, in July, London cannot go out without its overcoat.

About 4,000 men are employed under ground in the Province of Ontario, their hours of labour vary from eight to ten per day. Surface men are more often harder to obtain than underground men. It is cool down below on warm days.

A Massachussets man attempted to commit suicide rather than meet his wife. We wonder if she had joined the militants.

Mr. T. M. Humble laments the absence of wit and humor in Canadian journalism. We would bet he has not been reading the REVIEW lately for we have made a desperate attempt to be really witty in these notes.

"Sleep is a necessity for human beings as much as hunger and thirst," says a very informing writer in "Saturday Night."

A lady in Evanston, who has a lovely baby, has discovered that she has an all-absorbing love for herself, and having none left to bestow upon her husband, she is seeking a separation and asks him to support her in her self adoration. This is even better "logic" than sweet Sylvia's.

A man who lives near Zealand in North Frontenac has had a round with a she-bear while on his way through the woods. He carried an axe with which he kept Bruin at bay until his shouts for help brought assistance. Bears in the vicinity are doing a great deal of damage. Mr. Roosevelt should be informed of this, he might be tempted to emigrate, and as his hopes of the Presidency are shattered, he would have a chance of succeeding Sir Wilfrid some day. This is merely a suggestion.

SHE IS NOT FAIR

She is not fair to outward view
As many maidens be;
Her loveliness I never knew
Until she smiled on me;
O then I saw her eye was bright,
A well of love, a spring of light.

But now her looks are coy and cold,
To mine they never reply;
And yet I cease not to behold
The love-light in her eye:
Her very frowns are fairer far
Than smiles of other maidens are.

—Hartley Coleridge.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, July 12.—A heavy drop in wheat prices occurred on lower Liverpool cables, lower European markets and improved crop conditions over the winter and spring wheat areas, which caused considerable liquidation. ## PANIC IN COMMONS.

Suffragette Fires Toy Pistol and Scatters Pamphlets.

LONDON, July 12.—The report of a pistol shot fired from the strangers' gallery in the House of Commons yesterday, accompanied by a yell of "Justice for women," caused a panic among the members who were in session.

Simultaneously with the report a shower of pamphlets rained down on the members. They were printed with the words "Votes for women."

Two persons pointed out as the perpetrators of the outrage were seized by the officials, hustled from the gallery and detained pending investigation. It was later discovered that the weapon was merely a toy pistol.

Mrs. Beatrice H. Saunders, the financial secretary of the Woman's Social and Political Union, was liberated from prison last night for the second time. Her first release on license occurred June 23, and she was rearrested only two days ago. Abstention from food and water so greatly weakened her that it became necessary to set her at liberty.

Mrs. Saunders' term of imprisonment is fifteen months.

More Windows Smashed.

LIVERPOOL, July 12.—Militant suffragettes started a window smashing demonstration during King George's visit here yesterday. Armed with pokers, squads of women shattered several large windows along the route of the procession, but the police quickly rounded them up and order had been restored before the arrival of His Majesty.

SEVEN DEADLY SHERLOCKS.

They Meet at Scotland Yard to Solve Big Crimes.

Scotland Yard is like an enormous spider's web, with threads stretching to every part of the metropolis, and to every corner of the world, ready to enmesh the pickpockets in Hyde Park or bring back the murderer who has fled to the uttermost limit of civilization.

The middle of this web is a large, barely furnish room, in which, at regular intervals, sit the mysterious Council of Seven. From this room every quiver of every thread of the police web is felt and responded to immediately, and from it the most efficient detective force in the world is controlled.

Supposing a mysterious murder has taken place. As soon as it is discovered the news is at once sent up to Scotland Yard from the division in which the body has been found, and in a few minutes a motor-car moves swiftly out of the Yard bearing a tall, grey-faced, grey-haired man. It is Sir Melville Macnaghten, head of the famous C.I.D., and leader of the Council of Seven.

Sir Melville Macnaghten keeps in close touch with the developments of the mystery, and if it presents unusual difficulties he calls in Supt. McCarty and the five chief inspectors at the Yard, thus forming the famous "Council of Seven."

Such a council was held when the dismembered remains of Mrs. Crippen were discovered in Hilldrop Crescent. From that time until Inspector Dew arrested Crippen in Canada, the Seven were sending out their threads in all directions, picking up the clues here and tracking down the movements there, which finally landed Crippen on the scaffold.

The council deals with everything which presents unusual difficulties, deep mysteries of all kinds, from that of the Dublin jewels to the disappearance of Mr. Martin. In five short minutes they can, by means of an ingenious tape machine, circulate orders, news, or descriptions to the chief divisional stations simultaneously.

Sir Melville Macnaghten, who has been the chief of the C.I.D. for about ten years, looks very little like a Sherlock Holmes. Altogether, however, he has been over twenty-three years at the Yard, and has been one of the chief movers in solving hundreds of criminal mysteries. While he has been head of the Council of Seven, they have been called together by him to solve such difficult mysteries as the Moat Farm, the Merstham Tunnel murder, Crippen, and the murder of Miss Barrow by Seddon.

His right-hand man, when the Council of Seven meets, is Supt. McCarty, who has risen from a uniformed constable patrolling his beat in Islington to second in command of the most famous detective force in the world.

John McCarty joined the force when he was twenty, and a few years later he was sent to Havre on special service work, where he was one of those invisible watch-dogs that are set all round the ports of Europe to keep a look-out for criminals on the "wanted" list.

In 1903 he became chief lieutenant to Supt. Quin, who is head of the Special Service branch of Scotland Yard. At that time he dealt with Indian seditionists, high political offenders, and Nihilists, guarding the safety of kings, princes, and well-known people. He was at Madrid when the bomb was thrown at the King and Queen of Spain on the occasion of their marriage.

The most recently appointed of the Council of Seven is William Gough, who succeeded Chief Inspector Divall at the beginning of April. It was Inspector Gough who worked up the case against Goudie, the famous absconding bank cashier.

At the moment of writing, the Council of Seven is really only a Council of Six, owing to the appointment of Chief Inspector Bower to be Chief Inspector of the Criminal Investigation Department of the Port of London. Inspector Bower's most recent big case was the arrest and conviction of Williams the "hooded man," for the murder of Inspector Walls at Eastbourne last October.

LIFE INSURANCE

THE pessimist and the prophet of woe have no rightful place in any consideration of the expediency of insuring life. But certain hard facts should be squarely faced by every man of moderate means who has anyone dependent on him. Hundreds of men are yearly rejected for life insurance who would have been accepted had they not delayed their applications until ill health had come upon them. Why do men in good condition take such a long chance of remaining well? It is an impressive fact that out of 8549 holders of policies in a leading life insurance company who died in the past year, only 64 died of old age. The remainder were carried away by disease or accident. Hence the wisdom of insuring early in life. The best years for saving are from 20 to 40, and no man should let that period pass without taking out an insurance policy. For that part of his career an endowment policy, which is likely to mature while he is still living and can secure the proceeds of it himself, is to be preferred.

There will probably always be poor old men, their ranks will be recruited from the successful men of an earlier date, and fortunate is he who has made certain provision by means of endowment insurance in the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada.

The sitting room and dining room were gay with evergreens and old fashioned flowers. Our living room windows in the winter time are usually filled with carefully tended potted plants, and the neighbors had lent their geraniums and fuchsias and heliotropes and begonias to brighten the Whittaker house for its owner's return. Captain Cy, who was sitting in the rocker with Bos'n on his knee, looked about him. Now that the first burst of excitement was over he seemed grave and preoccupied.

"They look mighty pretty, Georgianna," he said, "fine enough. But what was that you just said? Did"—

"Yup," interrupted Miss Taylor, who had scarcely ceased talking since breakfast that morning. "Yes, 'twas teacher that helped fix em. Not that I wouldn't have got along without her, but I had more to do than a little cleanin' and scrubbin' up. So Phoebe she come in, and— Oh, yes, as I was sayin', she was out front with me, but the minute your carriage drove up with that lovely span— Ain't that a fine span? I cal'late they're"—

"What become of teacher?" broke in Bailey.

"Why, she run off somewheres. I didn't see where she went to; I was too busy hollerin' at Cap'n Whittaker and noticin' that span. I bet you they made Angie Phinney's eyes stick out. I guess she realizes that we in this house are some punkins now. If I don't lord it over her when I run acrost her these days, then I miss my guess. I"—

"Belay!" ordered Captain Cy, his gravity more pronounced than ever. "How does it happen that you— See here, Georgianna, did you tell Ph—er—Miss Dawes what I told you to tell her when I went away?"

"Why, yes, I told her. I hated to dreadful, but I done it. She was awful set back at fust, but I guess she asked Mr. Tiddit— Where you goin', Mr. Tiddit?"

The town clerk, his face red, was on his way to the door.

"Asked Ase?" repeated the captain. "Ase, come here! Did you tell her anything?"

Asaph was very much embarrassed.

"Well," he stammered, "I didn't mean to, Cy, but she got to askin' me questions, and somehow or 'nother I did tell her about our confab, yours and mine. I told her that I knew folks was talkin' and I felt 'twas my duty to tell you so. That's why I done it, and I told her you said—well, you know what you said yourself, Cy."

Captain Cy was evidently much disturbed. He put Bos'n down and rose to his feet.

"Well," he asked sharply, "what did she say?"

"Oh, she was white and still for a minute or two. Then she kind of stamped her foot and went off and left me. But next time she met me she was nice as pie. She's been pretty frosty to Angie and the rest of 'em, but she's been always nice to Bailey and me. Why, when I asked her pardon she said not at all, she was very glad to know the truth; it helped her to understand things. And you could see she meant it too. She"—

"So she has been comin' here ever since. And the gossip has been goin' on, I s'pose. Well, by the big dipper, it'll stop now! I'll see to that."

The board of strategy and the housekeeper were amazed.

"Gossip!" repeated Bailey. "Well, I guess there ain't nothin' said against her now—not in this town, there ain't! Why, all hands can't praise her enough for her smartness in findin' out about that Thomas. If it wan't for her he'd be botherin' you yet, Cy. You know it. What are you talkin' about?"

Captain Cy passed his hand over his forehead.

"Bos'n," he said slowly, "you run and help Georgianna in the kitchen a spell. She's got her dinner to look out for, I guess likely. Georgianna," to the housekeeper, who looked anything but eager, "you better see to your dinner right off, and take Emmie with you."

Miss Taylor reluctantly departed, leading Bos'n by the hand. The child was loath to leave her uncle, but he told her he wouldn't give a cent for his first dinner at home if she didn't help in preparing it. So she went on happy.

"Now, then," demanded the captain, "what's this about Phoebe and Thomas? I want to know. Stop! Don't ask another question. Answer me first."

So the board of strategy, by turns and in concert, told of the drive to Trumet and the call on Debby Beasley. Asaph would have narrated the story to the upset sulky, but Bailey shut him up in short order.

"Never mind that foolishness," he snapped. "You see, Cy, Debby had just been out to Arizona visitin' old Beasley's niece. And she'd fell in with a woman out there whose husband had run off and left her. And Debby she read the advertisement about him in the Arizona paper, and it said he had the springhalt in his off hind leg, or somethin' similar. Now, Thomas, he had that, too, and there was other things that reminded Phoebe of him. So she don't say nothin' to nobody, but she writes to this woman askin' for more partic'lars and a photograph of the missin' one. The partic'lars come, but the photograph didn't; the wife didn't have none, I b'lieve. But there was enough to send Phoebe hotfoot to Mr. Peabody. And Peabody he writes to his lawyer friend in Butte, Mont. And the Butte man he"—

"Well, the long and short of it is," cut in Tiddit, "that it looked safe and sartin that Thomas had married the Arizona woman while his real wife, Bos'n's ma, was livin' and had run off and left her same as he did Mary. And the funny part of it is"—

"The funny part of it is," declared Bangs, drowning his friend's voice by raising his own, "that somebody out there, some scalawag friend of this Thomas, must have got wind of what was up and sent word to him, 'cause when they went to hunt for him in Boston he'd gone, skipped, cut stick. And they ain't seen him since. He was afraid of bein' took up for a bigamist, you see—for bein' a bigamy, I mean. Well, you know what I'm tryin' to say. Anyhow, if it hadn't been for me and Phoebe"—

"You and Phoebe!" snorted Asaph. "You had a whole lot to do with it, didn't you? You and Aunt Debby 'll do to go together. I understand she's cruisin' round makin' proclamations that she was responsible for the whole thing. No, sir-ree! It's Phoebe Dawes that the credit belongs to, and this town ain't done nothin' but praise her since it come out. You never see such a quick come-about in your life unless 'twas Heman's. But you knew all this afore, Whit. Peabody must have told you."

Captain Cy had listened to his friend's story with a face expressive of the most blank astonishment. As he learned of the trip to Trumet and its results his eyes and mouth opened, and he repeatedly rubbed his forehead and muttered exclamations. Now, at the mention of his lawyer's name, he seemed to awaken.

"Hold on!" he interrupted, waving his hand. "Hold on! By the big dipper, this is—is— Where is Peabody? I want to see him."

"Here I am, captain," said the attorney. He had been out to the barn to superintend the stabling of the span, but for the past five minutes had been standing, unnoticed by his client, on the threshold of the dining room.

"See here," demanded Captain Cy—"see here, Peabody, is this yarn true? Is it, now—this about Phoebe and all?"

"Certainly it's true. I supposed you knew it. You didn't seem surprised when I told you the case was settled."

"Surprised! Why, no! I thought Heman had— Never mind that. Land of love, she did it—she!"

He sat weakly down. The lawyer looked anxious.

"Mr. Tiddit," he whispered, "I think perhaps he had better be left alone for the present. He's just up from a sickbed, and this has been a trying forenoon. Come in again this afternoon. I shall try to persuade him to take a nap."

The board of strategy, its curiosity unsatisfied, departed reluctantly. When Mr. Peabody returned to the sitting room he found that naps were far indeed from the captain's thoughts. The latter was pacing the sitting room floor.

"Where is she?" he demanded. "She was standin' on the steps with Heman. Have you seen her since?"

His friend was troubled.

"Why, yes, I've seen her," he said. "I have been talking with her. She has gone away."

"Gone away! Where? What do you mean? She ain't—ain't left Bayport?"

"No, no! What in the world should she leave Bayport for? She has gone to her boarding house, I guess. At all events, she was headed in that direction."

"Why didn't she shake hands with me? What made her go off and not say a word? Oh, well, I guess likely I know the why!" He sighed despondently. "I told her never to come here again."

"You did? What in the world"—

"Well, for what I thought was good reasons; all on her account they was. And yet she did come back and kept comin' even after Ase blabbed the whole thing. However, I s'pose that was just to help Georgianna. Oh, hum! I am an old fool."

The lawyer inspected him seriously.

"Well, captain," he said slowly, "if it is any comfort for you to know that your reason isn't the correct one for Miss Dawes' going away I can assure you on that point. I think she went because she was greatly disappointed and didn't wish to see you just now."

"Disappointed? What do you mean?"

"Humph! I didn't mean to tell you yet, but I judge that I'd better. No one knows it here but Miss Dawes and I, and probably no one but us three need ever know it. You see, the fact is that the Arizona woman, Desire Higgins, isn't Mrs. Thomas at all. He isn't her missing husband."

"What?"

"Yes, it's so. Really it was too much of a coincidence to be possible, and yet it certainly did seem that it would prove true. This Higgins woman was apparently so anxious to find her missing man that she was ready to recognize almost any description, and the slight lameness and the fact of his having been in Montana helped along. If we could have got a photograph sooner the question would have been settled. Only last week, while I was in Boston, I got word from the detective agency that a photo had been received. I went to see it immediately. There was some resemblance, but not enough. Henry Thomas was never Mr. Higgins."

"But—but—they say Thomas has skipped out."

(To be Continued.)

A woman's idea of a good husband is one who never feels sorry for himself.

Two Little Sons of the Crown Prince of Sweden.

The two little sailors shown in the photograph are the sons of Gustaf Adolf, duke of Skania, the crown prince of Sweden. Princess Margaret, their mother, is a daughter of the Duke of Connaught, brother of the late King Edward VII. of England. The oldest boy standing to the left is named Gustaf Adolf after his father. He is seven years old, and his title is Duke of Westerbotten. The other boy is named Sigvard. He will be six next July, and his title is Duke of Upland. They are charming little fellows in appearance, as they probably are in fact. Sweden comprises the eastern half of the Scandinavian peninsula, as all good geography scholars know. It has a population of 5,521,000 and is separated from Norway by the Kolen mountains.

Sun-dry Reflections.

The sun in summer has a way
Of rising in the day,
Although there need not be such haste,
For mother's son has time to waste.

In winter mother's son's awake
When morning light begins to break,
But really it is most surprising
How late the other sun is rising.

RHEUMA DRIVES OUT RHEUMATISM

After 25 Years of Misery, this Man Walks, Works and Feels Fine Again

Right away—the first day you start to take RHEUMA—the Uric Acid poison begins to dissolve and leave the sore joints and muscles. Its action is little less than magical.

RHEUMA works so speedily you actually can feel the Rheumatism leaving the body. A bottle costs but 50 cents, and if you are not satisfied Warne Drug Co. will return your money. Read this:

"I wish to state to you the facts and nothing but the facts. I bless the day a friend brought me a 60-cent bottle of RHEUMA. I used one-half of it, and it did me more good than all the other medicines I ever tried. I had been afflicted with Rheumatism all over my body for more than 25 years; I could not walk, and was a broken-down man. During that time I spent a small fortune trying to be rid of the horrible disease, but without help. However, Rheuma reached my case, and I thank God I can again use my feet and do my work.

"Before taking your medicine I was staying with a daughter on her farm, and despite her loving efforts to tempt my appetite, I could not eat. After I had taken RHEUMA two days my appetite returned. Yours for prosperity."—Prof. H. H. Kolling, 7 S Ninth St., Richmond, Ind., Oct. 10, 1912.

YOU CAN EASILY MAKE "SALADA" Iced Tea. First make the tea in the usual way and set it aside to cool. Then some chipped ice, a slice of lemon, a little sugar, and you have summer's best beverage.

Allow the tea to steep for five minutes and then pour off into another vessel to cool gradually. Never use artificial means of cooling until ready to serve; then add sugar, ice and lemon.

Straightening Walking Sticks.

Walking sticks as they grow are often crooked and have to be straightened. A heap of sand is provided on the top of a hot stove, into which the sticks are plunged until they become pliable. The workman takes the crooked stick while it is still hot and inserts it in a notch cut in a stout board, placed at an angle inclined from him, where he bends and straightens it. When it has become perfectly straight it is thrown down to cool, after which it becomes rigid and permanent in its lines.

Ireland's Wild Dogs.

Wild wolf-like dogs are still found in the remote parts of Ireland. They have soft, round ears, rather pleasant, broad faces, and can easily be tamed if they are caught young. They do not hunt in packs, like wolves, but usually live and hunt apart with their mates. In bodily conformation they are much like the Eskimo dog, but of slighter build.

PETES AT HAMILTON TO-DAY; HOW THEY SCORED EIGHT

The grounds were wet at St. Thomas on Saturday and the Petes were idle. To-day finds them at Hamilton for the usual three games series. Regarding the performances of the Rowanites on Friday the St. Thomas Times has the following to say of the second game;

The second game was a regular nightmare beside which the first game was a regular made-to-order, fitted-while-you-wait dream. Steve Brodie at one time wore a Peterborough uniform, and probably it was this fact that made him so generous with his hits in the fourth. If this is a regular habit of Steve's, we don't hesitate a 'steenth of a second in announcing that Steve's sojourn with the Saints will be short and sweet.

Tracey felt in pretty good form after the first slaughter and his blood-thirstiness being still unappeased, he again ascended the mound in the second conflict. He went along fine until the seventh when the Saints caused a large number of perfectly good suppers to spoil by pounding out six hits, which, mixed with a pass and two errors, contributed six perfectly useless runs.

A TERRIBLE SLAUGHTER

It was that awful fourth that hurt. Eight runs in one innings—the nicest slaughter we have witnessed in many a day, and here is the awful tale;

Trout opened the inning very inauspiciously flying out to Kopp. Hilliard, who had been striking out with clock-like regularity, pasted one on the nose for two bases, Swartz knocked an easy one to Wright, who had Hillard trapped between the bags, but Gurney's rotten muff gave them both a life. Ort then kicked Chapdelaine's grounder, loading the sacks, and Bryne promptly unloaded them with a peach of a double to centre. McNeal hit to Wright, and Gurney, with a beautiful chance to get Byrne off second, again mussed things all up by muffing Wright's throw. Tracey did the unexpected by dropping a Texas leaguer over third, Byrne scoring McNeal. Rowan then depopulated the sacks with a triple into the cornfield out in the right garden. Trout was safe on Forgue's error, Rowan scoring, but Hillard kindly grounded out, as did Swartz.

SPORTING GOSSIP

The surprise of the day was given by Peterborough. The Petes are in the second division, but they are playing first division ball, and this they demonstrated to St. Thomas, snatching both games from them in the Saints' own home. Sterling was hit harder than "Wild Bill" Baker, but was more effective in the pinches. Tracey out-pitched his old team-mate, Brodie and thus the Petes grabbed two.—Brantford Expositor.

FOR BETTER EGGS.

Movement on Foot To Improve the Production and Quality.

For many years eggs have been purchased by number without regard to quality. This is unfair to the farmer who markets good clean fresh eggs. To pay as much for good as for bad eggs is but one way of encouraging carelessness in the handling of this extremely perishable product. It is, in large measure the cause of the enormous loss which the Canadian egg trade now sustains—a loss or shrinkage varying between 15 to 20 per cent., which means that for every thirty dozen cases marketed, there is a loss equivalent to the value of about five dozen eggs.

This is a tremendous toll, and adds greatly to the cost of handling this product and has also the effect both of reducing the price to the farmer and increasing the price to the consumer. It therefore, is evident that the greatest boon to those concerned in the production, handling and consumption of eggs would be to eliminate this loss.

It has been long proven that the loss is entirely needless and could easily be overcome if the farmer and the handler would simply take better care of the product and get it to market more frequently. Heretofore, bad eggs have commanded the same price as good eggs. The question of quality has not been a consideration. It, therefore, is evident that so long as such an entirely antiquated and unbusiness-like system prevails there can be little or no hope for any improvement in the general quality of this product. Educational work alone would be entirely ineffective. To remedy this most unhealthy condition of the trade, it becomes imperative to hold out some financial inducement to the farmer and country dealer to place their eggs upon the market in as fresh a condition as possible. This can be done simply by paying more for good eggs than for inferior eggs and paying nothing for any which are absolutely bad and unfit for food.

Both the Ontario and Federal Governments have been for some time strongly endeavoring to induce the egg dealers to change their system of "case count" payment to that of "quality payment." Quality payment which involves the grading of eggs consists of paying for each separate grade according to its real value. At recent meetings, which were held to consider this question "quality payment" was not adopted but a step in the right direction was taken. The dealers committed themselves to buy eggs on a loss off basis which means that there will be no payment made for eggs which are bad and unfit for consumption.

This, indeed, will be welcome news to both the producer and consumer. By means of this measure production will be encouraged. The production and marketing of good eggs will be more profitable than formerly. It will also mean that following the elimination of unnecessary loss through bad eggs and other unnecessary charges against the cost of eggs, the consumer undoubtedly will get a cheaper article and one of better quality.

THESE WANT WAR.

Horse Dealers and Bootmakers Make Money When Europe Is at War.

There is an ugly rumor abroad in Germany that agents employed by a great firm of gun manufacturers have been deliberately stirring up trouble between Germany and France.

The story goes that one of these agents bribed a newspaper editor to declare that the French army was enormously increasing its artillery. If this be true, it is plain that the object was to induce the German Government also to order more guns.

Ask the average man in the street if he wants to set his country at war. Nine out of ten can find no terms strong enough to express their horror at such a suggestion. Even for the winning nation war means more taxes, increased prices for almost every necessary of life, and long drawn out anxiety for the fate of relatives and friends who are fighting for their country's battles.

But the tenth man, if he tells the truth, which he probably will not do, would confess that he wouldn't mind a good war. Yes, he admits all you say about taxes and high prices, but he can very easily put up with those when war is going to double his income.

The fact is that very few of us have any idea of the number of people who would benefit by war. Of these the makers of guns and the manufacturers of armor plate are by no means the only ones.

The horse dealers for instance. During the Boer war we sent 200,000 horses to the Cape. Their prices varied from $105 ahead paid for Argentine horses. Put them at $200 ahead, here was $40,000,000 sterling divided among horse breeders and dealers.

And as for the forage bill, well that was more than twice as much, and the money all went into the pockets of farmers here and elsewhere.

Farming in England was in a shocking state at the end of the last century. The Boer war sent up the price of wheat at $7 a quarter, and British farmers have never since looked back. So it is small wonder that the farmer thinks that war is no bad thing, especially as at such times the demand for fresh meat is at least equal to that for horses and grain.

Another business that booms in war time is that of the bootmaker. If you want proof, look back at the dividends paid by some of the big bootmaking concerns in the Midlands of England during the Boer war.

Soldiers must have boots and plenty of them. A pair that lasts six months in peace time are done for in six weeks of war. The hands work overtime, and get extra wages, and they, too, are among those who vote for war.

Manufacturers of clothing benefit in like fashion, and so do many others. Think what a boom the next war will cause in the aeroplane factories, and in the places where they make all sorts of electrical apparatus such as field cables, wireless machinery, searchlights, and the like.

Holders of Southwestern Railway shares made money during our last big war. Tens of thousands of troops and mou[illegible]ns of stores were pouring down the [illegible] to Southampton for more than two years. All the transport trades [illegible] a tremendous fillip from war.

Shipping companies charter their vessels for the transport of troops, sure that if anything happens to their craft they will be well recompensed, and their prosperity extends to seamen, stokers, marine engineers, as well as stevedors and dock laborers. There will be no ships laid up in war time unless, indeed, our navy is defeated and hostile cruisers swarm around our shores to prey upon our commerce.

Another huge industry which benefits by war is that of the coal-getter. Warships and transports alike are absolutely dependent on coal, and the big colliery owners can raise their prices all round, and be certain of fat Government contracts.

War hurts some things, such, for instance, as the sale of champagne and pate de foie gras, and it reduces the profits of theatres and football clubs. Yet, as we have shown, there is a very large minority who actually look forward to a European scrap on a large scale.

Seals Cut Climbing Steps In Ice.

How seals cut steps in the perpendicular sides of ice cakes in order to rise from the water for the purpose of breathing has been recorded by members of Capt. Scott's Antarctic expedition.

It was discovered that the seals, which formerly were supposed to leave the water by leaping, actually cut steps in the slippery surface with the great canine or eye teeth. As soon as the teeth are placed in position, the head is moved rapidly from side to side until the ice has been cut away sufficiently to afford a footing for the front flippers of the animal.

Each step has to be laboriously cut after this fashion until the body is far enough out of the water to be thrust up the rest of the way by a kick of the hind flippers.

A Medical Expert.

Once, when walking in a suburban district, Dr. Samson Gemmell, one of Glasgow's best known medical professors, happened upon a stalwart policeman who was strenuously endeavoring to support a youth in the throes of an epileptic seizure. "In my blandest tones," remarked the professor when relating the incident to his class, "I suggested that it might be better to permit the poor fellow to struggle on the pavement," but with a disdainful gesture the man in blue repelled the interference by intimating that he had recently won a first class certificate at an ambulance class!—Westminster Gazette.

FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

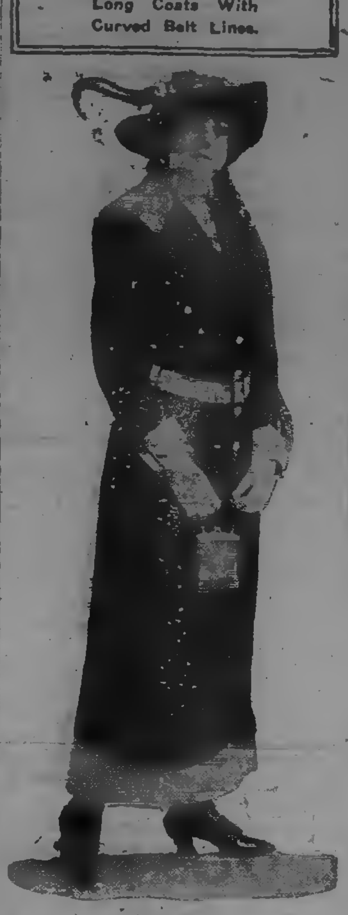
Long Coats With Curved Belt Lines.



GIRL'S COAT.

The curved belt worn with this long coat gives it very trim lines. The white of the belt is smartly matched by the collar and cuffs of white ratine. From underneath the young girl's short skirt peep very modish buttoned oxfords worn with black silk stockings.

Blouses of all kinds, cutaways and straight cut Chinese coats are all used for wash suits. The regulation blouse with the fullness drawn into the waist and the blouse with the belt placed several inches below the normal waist line with the fullness drawn in or with the fullness hanging over the belt are the favorites.

NEW HAND BAGS.

They Are Long and Narrow and May Be Handsomely Ornamented.

The vogue of the large hand bag hung from the shoulder or arm by thick cords and tassels seems to be over. This bag has been a favorite for many seasons. Gradually from quite small dimensions it grew to enormous proportions till women not only carried in its recesses all the vanity fittings, keys, money and handkerchief, but various articles of jewelry as well.

The latest bag goes to the other extreme in size. Made long and not very deep, it is shaped like a man's pocketbook, with an envelope flap forming the fastening on one side, while on the other there is a narrow strap fixed so that the bag may be carried on the hand. These bags, made of polished leather or moire, are lined with soft white kid or satin in some delicate coloring, and they are quite flat.

Some of the more expensive varieties of the flat bag are outlined in flexible gold and caught down with jeweled clasps, but the more ordinary makes have a simple fastening in plain gilt.

Thieves In Bank of England.

Although always a liberal employer, the Bank of England — as The Chronicle points out—has not always been fortunate in its officials. Little more than twenty years ago the chief cashier was summarily dismissed owing to defalcations, and narrowly escaped prosecution. In 1863 several of the bank employes were found to be implicated in a scheme for circulating notes forged on genuine paper stolen from the mills at Laverstoke. A still more serious fraud was perpetrated on the bank in 1803 by Robert Astlett, one of the cashiers, who managed to extract exchequer bills to the value of nearly $1,000,000. His theft was discovered before he had succeeded in cashing many of the bills. Astlett's offence was in those days a capital one, but he escaped with a term of imprisonment.

WOULD NOT ALLOW THE HINDUS TO COME TO CANADA

Peterboro Boy, Now Vancouver M.P., Declares the Hindu Has Done Nothing for Civilization.

VANCOUVER, B.C., July 14.—In an address before the Canadian Club H. H. Stevens, M.P., referred to the question of Hindu immigration problem and emphasizing the undesirability of the natives of India as settlers here. With regard to the plea of the Hindus that they be allowed to bring in their wives he referred to the "girl wives" of India and quoted statistics to demonstrate the evil of letting the bars be lifted.

"If the Hindu is to bring over his family," Mr. Stevens observed, "he might bring four girls as his daughters, who really would be his wives. The Hindu lives in the large centres of population; the Hindu does not pioneer; he has done nothing for civilization. Immigration is a privilege not a right."

It will be remembered that Mr. Stevens who is a native of Peterborough, gave an address along the same lines, before the Peterborough Canadian Club.

MAKING READY FOR START ON HYDRO-ELECTIC WORK

Supplies Are Now Here—Power Committee to Appoint Foreman.

The cable, poles, lamps and other supplies for the Hydro Electric have been received by the city and the operations may now be proceeded with.

The Power Committee will likely meet early this week to deal with such applications as may have been received for the position of foreman for the conduit work.

The Machine Telephone Company are removing their overhead wires and placing them underground.

Under the supervision of Mr. Wm. Lyttle this operation is started on George street from King street, to the C.P.R. tracks. The wires are placed about three and half feet below the surface and are enclosed by a wood fibre tube.

It would appear that the Machine Telephone Co. contemplate further operations in Peterborough, as the work now in hand means much expense.

Saskatchewan Farmer Sues Doctor For Damages.

SASKATOON, July 14.—What promises to be an action of unusual interest will be tried at the next sitting of the Supreme Court when Charles R. Elliott, a farmer, brings an action against Dr. H. E. Munro, a prominent physician for alleged negligence in connection with an operation he performed on plaintiff's leg. The plaintiff's claim is that in February, 1912, he engaged Dr. Munro to attend him in connection with a diseased leg. He avers that on March 20, 1912, while he was under Dr. Munro's care an operation was performed by Dr. Munro on his leg and that owing to the doctor's negligence plaintiff's left arm was allowed to come in contact with the operating table in such a way that the nerve in his arm was killed and in consequence he lost the power of the arm.

HORSE FRIGHTENED AND RAN AWAY

P. C. Reid Affected Its Capture at Brock Street Corner

A serious accident if not a fatality was narrowly averted on Saturday afternoon by the quick work of P. C. Reid. A few minutes after four o'clock, Howard Frise, the boy who drives for Mr. Minicola, the George street fruit dealer, was driving to to the store from Brock street and had Mr. Minicola's young son in the seat with him. Mr. T. Hooper's motor delivery was coming north on George street and seeing the horse in front of him, instead of lowering the speed or turning out, the driver of the car tooted his horn several times. The result was that the horse made a wild dash, the rig striking the pavement and throwing young Frise out. The little Minicola lad made a grab for the lines, but his strength was not sufficient to check the horse. The boy grasped the seat but the jolting of the rig had loosened it so he had to hang on to the umbrella that was fastened to the dash board.

Several by-standers yelled "Whoa" but not till the horse reached Brock street did any person attempt to catch the terrified animal. P. C. Reid happened to be at the corner of Brock and George street and he ran out and succeeded in bringing the horse to a halt.

THE GRIM REAPER

The Late J. N. McKenty

The death occurred on Sunday at the residence of Mr. Wm. Shea, 211 Reid-st., of Joseph Neal McKenty, aged 25 years. The deceased from his infancy had been a cripple, but was able to go about till recently, when he took ill and gradually grew weaker.

He was for six years an inmate of the House of Providence and some three years ago he left for the west. He returned a short time ago and has since resided with Mr. Shea. He is survived by two brothers, Arthur, of Norwood, and Hugh, of New York, and one sister, Mrs. R. McLaughlin, Montana.

The funeral mass will be sung tomorrow morning at St. Peter's Cathedral, after which the remains will be taken to Norwood via C.P.R. for interment.

Watters, who is well-known to the police has been intending to go home to the Old Country on several occasions. About a month ago, he appeared at the station and the members of the force took up a subscription for Jas. Anderson, a blacklister appeared before Magistrate Dumble on the charge of being drunk while on the prohibited list. He was assessed $10 to be paid in 10 days.

LINDSAY BONDS FOR CITIZENS

Keeping up the record of holding special meetings, even although this is the holiday season, the Town Council met again last night and discussed several matters of importance including the sale of bonds. In this regard it was on motion decided to give local residents a chance to buy bonds in $100, $200, $500 or larger amounts as they desired and the clerk was instructed to place advertisement in the local papers to this effect—Lindsay Warder.

A VISIT TO KNOX CHURCH

Vocal Organs—A Celt Who Does Not Gesticulate—A Young and Flourishing Church.

(By our Special Reporter)

(By Our Special Reporter.)

The Knox Presbyterian is one of the new churches that are springing up in the south of the city. It is of the modern type; the tower, which presumably was intended for a spire, finishes rather abruptly in a square roof. It is built of red smooth terra-cotta brick and very artistically designed.

The interior is very comfortably arranged with a good inclined floor and ample gallery. When I entered, the minister had not ascended the pulpit and the orchestra of stringed, brass and reed instruments were discoursing sweet music.

They have no organ at Knox church that is, no pipe-organ, although they have in building the church left a space behind the pulpit to receive one. I doubt if John Knox himself would have objected to the absence of the organ, and I fancy he would have dispensed with the orchestra. I may be wrong on this point, but in his day they depended largely on vocal organs for church music.

The service opened with the congregation rising and singing the Doxology followed by a short invocation by the pastor. The first hymn:

Come ye disconsolate where'er ye languish;
Come to the mercy seat, fervently kneel," struck a note of true worship and the congregation joined heartily in the singing.

The minister then read the lesson which was from Genesis, being the love story of Rebecka; then followed the hymn: "Jerusalem the Golden," that most exquisite of all devotional lyrics, both of these hymns were written by Roman Catholics, the first by Thomas Moore the second by a Monk, and that Mr. Keith chose them for the opening of his service showed his breadth of sympathies; but as if to prove that he was an evangelical he gave out that trumpet call to service: "Rescue the Perishing." This is as it should be. We all have souls to save and some of us have much difficulty in working out our own salvation. We are all looking toward "Jerusalem the Golden" but we must not forget those who have fallen by the wayside and to whom we can give a rescuing hand.

The Rev. Henry J. Keith, M.A., B.D., has been at Knox church six years. He has practically built up the congregation which is composed chiefly of young people, whose hearts he has won by his diligent pastorship and earnest preaching.

Mr Keith is of Celtic origin, fair and ruddy in face, but he has not, or did not show the fire that is generally associated with his kin. Perhaps there was no call for it as his sermon was descriptive and his theme the quiet love story—the sweetest of all love idyls—of Isaac and Rebecka.

But I should imagine that Mr. Keith is naturally easy and composed in his deliverances. Unlike most of the Presbyterians I have heard, he hardly gesticulates at all. John Knox, I should judge, especially when he was denouncing women monarchs, needed all the space he could get to swing his arms about and the pulpit would have to be of a substantial order.

Mr Keith's homiletical description was delivered in an even, flowing style, with a little eddy here and there and a slight suggestion of a rapid toward the close; but his discourse left the feeling of restfulness, and quiet musing on the ways of God with the lives of men and women.

After the service I went over the building with the pastor, and must congratulate the people upon having so beautiful and comfortable a home.

The church is in a prosperous condition, the congregation is growing, funds are increasing and a quiet and thorough work is being carried on in the neighborhood. Such churches are the moral backbone of a community.

SIR CLAUD SHUSTER, FIRST COUSIN OF MR. R. W. GRUBBE

Copies of the papers published at Cheltenham, Gloucestershire, Eng., received here refer to the King's birthday honor list, which includes Sir Claud Schuster. This is of interest to citizens of Peterborough as Sir Claud Schuster is a first cousin of Mr. R. W. Grubbe, 47 McDonnel street.

Sir Claud Schuster is the only son of Frederick Lee Schuster of Heysham House, Cheltenham, Gloucestershire, and grandson of the late Col. Wood of the Madras Infantry, by his wife Louisa, of the ancient house of Conwell. He was educated at Winchester and New College Oxford, and was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1895. His legal experience has lain almost entirely with official bodies. He was secretary to the London Government Act Commissioners from 1899 till 1902. In 1903 he was appointed legal assistant to the Board of Education, becoming in 1907 legal assistant and assistant secretary. In 1911 he was principal assistant secretary and left the Board during that year to become Chief Registrar of Friendly Societies. With the establishment of National Insurance he became secretary to the Commission. Lady Schuster is a daughter of that famous scholar, Dr. Merry, Rector of Lincoln College, Oxford, since 1884 editor of the plays of Aristophanes.

MANY PETERBORO BOYS ARE RETURNING HOME

Every day sees Peterborough boys returning from the American and Canadian West. From all reports business is very dull and it has become a custom in place of looking for employment when one is out of work to start back east.

The crops this year may be good, and if they are conditions will in all probability become brighter, but if the crops do not come up to expectations it will be some time before the west will regain its normal state of affairs.

It is said that in many cities and towns of the west, large building contracts have been held up on account of the money stringency that prevails.

DRY SWEEPING TO BE STOPPED

At the special meeting of the Town Council held last night Reeve Kylie gave notice of motion that he would introduce a by-law compelling the merchants to sprinkle the sidewalks in front of their stores in the morning before sweeping, thus preventing the pedestrians from becoming showered with dust as they go to work in the mornings.—Lindsay Warder.

NORTH GREY ANSWERS ROWELL; A VICTORY FOR CONSERVATIVES

Stronghold Which Liberals Have Kept for Fifteen Years Comes Over to the Government by a Majority of 278---Hon. A. J. MacKay's Pluralty Was 741--"Abolish the Bar" Policy Causes Defeat.

OWEN SOUND, July 15.—The part that the Proudfoot "charges" played in the North Grey bye-election, as well as the result of a certain section of the Liberal party in Ontario practically compelling A. G. MacKay to resign the leadership of the Liberal party in Ontario, was shown here yesterday in the bye-election to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. MacKay's resignation. Colin Cameron, Conservative nominee, was elected over John McQuaker, the Liberal candidate, by a majority of 278.

Others objected strongly to their party leaders making the issue a prohibition affair, when so many public matters of greater importance are uppermost. The progressive policy of the Whitney Government, however, was probably the most important factor even with life-long Liberals.

In any case the result of the election was in the nature of an earthquake to the Opposition forces, for North Grey has been a Liberal stronghold since the nineties.

Hon. A. G. MacKay's majority in the last election was 741.

North Grey has thrown back the slanders against the Premier of the province and the Provincial Secretary, into the teeth of the men who were so ill-advised as to take them. Also, it is a direct refusal of the Rowell policy.

The last days of the campaign were concentrated by both the candidates at Owen Sound and the immediate vicinity. On Friday night of last week Mr. McQuaker, the Liberal candidate, and Mr. Rowell, the leader of the Opposition, appeared before a mass meeting and set out their views on the public questions of the day. Then on Saturday night was the meeting of Hon. W. J. Hanna and William H. Proudfoot.

The vote in the country was not very heavy for the reason that the farmers are busy threshing, and did not wish to leave their work. The total rural vote, however, will be found to be somewhat greater than in the last election.

The first poll to be heard from in the evening was 8A, one in the central or business part of Owen Sound, a poll that is one of the smallest in the riding, but whose voice almost invariably predicts the result in North Grey. It gave Mr. Cameron a majority of 16, the vote standing 26 to 10. In Meaford the Liberal candidate made a considerable gain and emerged with a good majority.

The following are the majorities in the different municipalities:

Cameron—Owen Sound 290, Derby 13, Shallow Lake 40, Sarawak 33, St. Vincent 5.

McQuaker—Meaford 29, Keppel 7, Sydenham 67.

Leaders Express Opinions.

TORONTO, July 15.—The party leaders expressed their opinions of the result in North Grey in short interviews given to the press last night.

Sir James Whitney said: "It is a magnificent victory and a very far-reaching one, indeed."

Hon. W. J. Hanna said over the long-distance telephone from his home in Sarnia): "The electors of North Grey did what anyone would have expected. They were fully acquainted with the issues and the work of the Government, and the hypocrisy of the leaders of the Liberal party, who went in to North Grey to agitate the electors. There was no mistaking, from the time the electors got busy, what they were going to do."

N. W. Rowell, leader of the Opposition, said: "My information convinces me that the result in North Grey was due to the open combination between the Whitney Government and the liquor interests, with unlimited financial resources at their disposal. For the sake of Mr. McQuaker, who was an exceptionally fine type of candidate, and the workers who stood so valiantly by him, I regret the result. The loss of the seat, however, will have its compensations if it helps to awaken the people of the province to the undoubted fact of an offensive and defensive alliance between the Whitney Government and the liquor interests. When the people realize that this combination exists I do not believe that they will stand for it."

MONEY NO OBJECT.

U. S. Lobbyist Says $60,000 Was Spent In One Campaign.

WASHINGTON, July 15.—Martin M. Mulhall, professed field agent, strike breaker, lobbyist and political worker for the National Association of Manufacturers, yesterday continued his remarkable story before the Senate investigation committee. Mulhall was on the stand for six hours. In that time nearly six hundred letters, telegrams and scraps of memoranda were identified by him, with hardly more than a glance. He remembered apparently the first names of members of Congress, of lesser politicians, of labor leaders and underlings, and of all the men he had worked with through a year of most active campaigning in many parts of the country. His performance seemed so remarkable to lawyers present that they sat all through a long day intently watching the witness and listening closely to the letters and every word that the witness uttered in the brief cross-examination that accompanied some of them.

The Senate committee devoted yesterday largely to reading into the record the tale of Mulhall's political activities. There was an occasional reference to strikes in which the lobbyist had figured and allusion now and then to the inside workings of labor unions, but for the most part it was a story of politics as Mulhall played the game. Mulhall's correspondence told of efforts to re-elect former Congressman Littlefield of Maine, and defeat the present representative from that district, Daniel J McGillicuddy. Littlefield was to be supported by the National Association of Manufacturers, because of his stand against labor legislation. Mulhall said on cross-examination that he had been told that $60,000 was spent in that campaign. Littlefield was beaten.

MRS. PORTER CHARLTON.

PORTER CHARLTON

It was announced at the Italian Consulate that it is probable Porter Charlton will not be extradited for more than a month. Although the last legal obstacle is believed to have been swept away, the Italian government intends to abide strictly by the rules of procedure in such cases. It will send an agent of the Home Office to this country for the youthful wife slayer, according to a statement made by Acting General Consul Giuseppe Gentile.

TWO MEN KILLED.

Construction Camp Cook and Brakeman Dead at Whitby.

WHITBY, Ont., July 15.—When the cook car of a Dominion Construction Co. boarding train left the rails two miles west of Whitby at 5.30 Sunday night, Fred. Dunk, of Campbellford, the cook, was instantly killed and his helper received wounds which will keep him laid up for several weeks. The car was on a C.P.R. train coming into Whitby at the conclusion of construction work in that district.

The helper, whose name could not be ascertained Sunday night, was burned about the arms when the stove fell upon him, and his legs were badly scalded. He was also cut about the head, but his skull is unfractured. He is now in Oshawa Hospital and will recover.

Leaning from the caboose steps of a G.T.R. freight three miles west of Whitby Sunday night, J. E. Hooker, brakeman, fell to his death and was picked up by a train which followed shortly afterwards. It is thought that he was struck by the projecting girder of a bridge.

Service For Grosse Isle Victims.

QUEBEC, July 15.—The Ancient Order of Hibernians held their annual pilgrimage to the graves of the Irish immigrants who were buried on Grosse Isle, during the ship fever of 1847. Some 200 people attended. As there is contagious disease on the island, the party were not allowed to land. However, service was held on board the steamer, opposite the monument, conducted by Rev. Father Woods, rector of St. Patrick's Church, assisted by Fathers O'Hara and Healey.

An eloquent and most impressive sermon, suitable to the occasion, was preached by Father Healey.

RIOT IN TORONTO.

Jews Break Up Christian Convert's Meeting With Missiles.

TORONTO, July 15.—Bricks, stones, dinner plates, crockery and sharp slabs of slate shot through the atmosphere at the corner of St. Patrick street and Kensington avenue last night when four or five thousand Jews engaged in a riot with the police after an unsuccessful attempt had been made to drive Rev. Henry Singer, a Christianized Jew, from Kensington avenue and break up his missionary meeting. Pieces of granite rock, weighing as much as half a pound, was hurled through the air in the missionary's direction, and it was a miracle that he escaped unhurt. Twice he dodged the rocks that were accurately aimed and one of the same rocks struck a comrade in the chest and caused a severe wound.

The riot was one of the fiercest that the police of Toronto have been called upon to quell; but they were ready for it, and to this fact is due the escape of Mr. Singer and his followers. Five arrests were made.

Drowned Saving Children.

OAKVILLE, July 15.—George Ochterlony was drowned in Lake Ontario, off Howard avenue, Oakville, shortly before 12 o'clock yesterday while swimming out to save two children in a punt which was drifting out into the lake. The body was found.

He was married only a few months ago. He came here and bought property in the spring. The children were brought back in a boat.

Eleven French Miners Killed.

AUBIN, France, July 15.—Eleven workmen were killed and nine injured by a mine explosion here yesterday.

ASKS ABOUT WIRELESS

But British P. M. G. Tells Member Letters Are Confidential

LONDON, July 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The desire of many members of the House of Commons to have a full inquiry into the merits of the rival wireless systems was shown again in the House yesterday, when numerous questions were put as to the Goldschmidt system. Calling for amendments to the Canadian Government's agreement with the Poulson Company, Mr. George Touche asked Postmaster-General Samuel why he had not thought fit to disclose the negotiations to the House, and particularly any correspondence he had with Hon. Mr. Pelletier on the matter.

Mr. Samuel, replying said: "Mr. Pelletier inform me of the negotiations but it would have been abviously improper for me to have communicated to the House negotiations which had relevance to the proposal I had laid before Parliament and which were still proceeding between the Postmaster-General of Canada and a commercial syndicate. The Canadian agreement is of a wholly different character from that proposed for the Imperial wireless chain. The Imperial stations are to be state-owned. The Canadian Government does not propose to employ the Poulson Company to erect any station to be owned and worked by that Government. The station is to be erected by the Poulson Company at their cost. The obligations upon the Canadian Government are to grant the necessary lisenses, to secure certain facts from the Canadian patent laws relating to the manufacture of apparatus outside Canada, and to take measure to facilitate the transmission of the company's telegrams over land lines belonging to the Canadian telegraph companies.

Mr. Touche further asked that the correspondence be table, but Mr. Samuel refused to do so without Mr. Pelletier's consent.

WHY NOT PETERBORO?

Editor of the Review, Dear Sir—What's the matter with Peterborough that we are not getting some of the manufacturies that are coming to Canada from the United States? Toronto, Hamilton, Galt, Windsor, Berlin, Waterloo, all these places are getting large numbers, as well as the cities of the eastern provinces. Peterborough ought to have some. There should be some go about her and someone should be sent to the States, as we are losing big chances.

Yours truly,

"CITIZEN"

Peterboro, July 15, 1913.

Fighting In China.

PEKIN, July 15.—President Yuan Shi Kai has ordered reinforcements despatched to the Province of Kiangsi, where the cashiered governor and Gen. Hwanghsing are leading rebellious troops. Heavy fighting has been going on at Kiu Kiang, where the insurgent forces number 9,000. The blowing up of a fort and other acts, indicate that the "Young China" party is determined to force the issue.

PRESIDENT'S DAUGHTER TO WED IN NOVEMBER

FRANCIS BOWES SAYRE

Francis Bowes Sayre, whose engagement to the President's second daughter, Miss Jessie Wilson, is announced, is his father-in-law's double. Mr. Sayre's features and the outline of his figure, though more youthful, of course, bear a striking resemblance to the President. The wedding will take place in the East Room of the White House—the same room in which the marriage of Lizzie Tyler, Nellie Grant and Alice Roosevelt were solemnized. The marriage will take place on a Saturday, but the date has not been fixed any closer than "the middle of November."

JACK TARS NOT PLEASED WITH CANADIAN PEOPLE

Canadian Press Despatch.

MONTREAL, July 15.—Members of the crew of the Canadian cruiser Rainbow, who sailed for England on the Royal Edward this morning, say that the Canadian people treat their jack tars with contempt and that promises made to them by the government have not been kept. "The people in the west look down on us for wearing this coat," said one of the men. "They seem to think we are a class all to ourselves and that we will contaminate them. Why people here should be ashamed to be seen talking to or associating with us it is difficult for us to understand."

The men also contend that the pay was insufficient and that the promises of the government to supplement this pay with short jobs had not been kept.

MR. NEARY IS FOREMAN ON SEWERS

Paper Makes a Hit.

MONTREAL, July 15.—The Daily Telegraph and Daily Witness, the new Liberal paper here, the first issue of which appeared on Saturday, is receiving telegrams of congratulation from prominent Liberals and contemporaries all over the Dominion. It appears to have made an excellent beginning and unable to supply the demand for its first issue, nd in face of the steady inrush of subscriptions, the publishers have ordered new machinery, and until it arrives will get some of the work on the paper done in the offices of other local papers.

Hunter, immigration agent, to work for William Cope, farmer, Wolfe Island, who paid the sum of $30 for his passage, went to jail for eight days. He was charged with violating contract.

FOUR ARE RESCUED.

Lads on Capsized Yacht Have a Narrow Escape.

SARNIA, July 15.—Drifting down the river St. Clair, past Point Edward, late Sunday evening, four young men—James Johnson, Arthur Goodwin, Wm. Wilson and Charles Dupee were removed from their perilous position on the bottom of a big sailing yacht, which had been capsized out in Lake Huron. The boys had been enjoying the good wind and waves when a heavy gust turned the boat over, throwing them all into the water.

They succeeded in getting hold of the life-lines and getting on to the boat, where they were noticed by Captain Egbert of the Point Edward ferry.

POLICE DEFIED

Mrs. Pankhurst Flees, But is Caught by Detective

LONDON, July 15.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the leader of the suffragettes, and Miss Annie Kenney, one of the most ardent of the militants, are again in the hands of the authorities. Against the orders of the court they appeared at a meeting of the Women's Social and Political Union yesterday afternoon, where Mrs. Pankhurst announced that she would die rather than submit to the Government.

The police undertook to arrest both women, but Mrs. Pankhurst fled from the building and attempted to make her escape in a taxicab. She was pursued by a detective who eventually captured her.

The arrest of Miss Kenney precipitated a free fight in which well dressed men and women engaged in hand to hand fighting with the police. Umbrellas and sticks were freely used. The police succeeded in forcing Miss Kenney into an automobile and drove her to Holloway jail. Several other arrests were made.

Membership in the Ontario Plowmen's Association, which organization is aided by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, has increased from 80 to 1,200, and eleven branches held plowing matches last year.

GREECE AND SERVIA WILL NEGOTIATE PEACE ONLY ON THE FIELD OF BATTLE

Sir Edward Grey Says Balkan Warriors Will Have to Tire Out

LONDON, July 15.—That the Balkan struggle will end by a process of mutual exhaustion seems the only hope that Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, is able to hold out. In a statement in the House of Commons last night, he said that mere words were not likely to affect the situation, and it would be most difficult for the European powers to resort to force to impose peace.

Neither Servia nor Greece has paid any attention to Russia's proposal that they cease hostilities. They appear determined to negotiate peace with Bulgaria only on the field, without intervention by any third party, and unless Bulgaria proves amenable it is believed that an advance will be made upon Sofia to enforce acceptance of the Servo-Greek terms.

Serious fighting for the time being is suspended, but the advance of the Turkish and Roumanian troops continues without opposition.

A Belgrade report says the Servians on Sunday captured an important position eight miles west of Kustendil. According to the Athens correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, Greece and Servia signed a secret treaty last May, binding them to prosecute a war, which was then foreseen, with Bulgaria until the Bulgars acquiesced in the territorial arrangements laid down in the treaty. By these arrangements the eastern boundaries of Greece would be extended to the Mesta river, considerably to the east of Drama, and Servia would have access to the Aegean Sea at two points.

Ivanoff's "Splendid Retreat."

SOFIA, July 15.—It is reported that Gen. Ivanoff has affected a splendid retreat. Semi-officially statements have been issued, accusing the Greeks of setting fire to the Town of Seres, and declaring that the Bulgarians attempted vainly to get the fire under control. Other statements charging the Greeks with wholesale massacres and atrocities at Seres and elsewhere in Macedonia were issued.

Constantinople Scene of Bustle.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 15.—The greatest military activity prevails here, and troops, artillery and provision convoys are being brought across the Bosphorus from Asia Minor. Destruction of villages by the retiring Bulgarians has created a bitter feeling here.

The Porte is in communication with Belgrade, Athens and Bucharest, and is said to have received assurance that neither Greece Servia nor Roumania will conclude an armistice without consulting Turkey.

RADIAL CARS COLLIDE.

Fourteen Persons Are Dead In Los Angeles Disaster.

LOS ANGELES, July 15.—Fourteen persons are dead as the result of the wreck at Vineyard Station Sunday night, when two Pacific electric trains collided. The number of injured was said to exceed 150. Several of these are in a precarious condition. Two bodies, those of a man and a woman, have not been identified.

The revised list of the dead are as follows:

Edna Alter, secretary Associated Charities, Pasadena, Cal.; Ollie W. Axley, Bakerfield, Cal.; Jacob Barman, Los Angeles; Merle Evans, Los Angeles; E. C. Gonmiguchi, Japanese, Los Angeles; Sidney Johnston, Youngstown, Ohio; Miss Veronica Miller, Los Angeles; Edward Murray, Toronto, Canada; J. Carl Murray, Los Angeles; Mrs. C. G. Norman, Los Angeles; Irwin Platz, Los Angeles; William Taylor, Pasadena, Cal.; unidentified man about 35 years old; unidentified women, about 22 years old.

Among the injured are C. B. Craig, Detroit, Mich., internal injuries; Mrs. Irene Craig, Detroit, body crushed; Nellie Murray, Toronto, Canada, nose broken.

Officials of the Pacific electric road assert that the blame for the disaster lies between Conductor Emil Bartholomai of the standing train and Motorman Joe. Forrester of the train crashed into it. The conductor insists that he waved a red lantern in front of Forrester's train in plenty of time for the latter to have stopped, had he heeded the signal.

Forrester, who was found yesterday at his home, only slightly injured, declared that he did not seen the lantern until within 500 feet of the standing train. The distance, he asserts was too short and his brakes failed to stop the train. Before the state railway commission officials of the road stopped a train of cars of the same type within 500 feet. A coroner's inquest will begin to-day.

Society Extends Field.

LONDON, July 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—After carefully considering the request of the Archbishop of Rupertsland and Bishop Stringer of Yukon, and carrying on negotiations extending over several months, the council of the British Columbia Church Aid Society, have decided that it is their duty to add the Diocese of Yukon to the sphere of their work, and to do all they can to help Bishop Stringer and his staff. For the future, therefore, the society will be known as the British Columbia and Yukon Church Aid Society.

Celebrates Bastile's Fall.

QUEBEC, July 15.—The semi-military local French-Canadian corps, with bands, turned out Sunday morning to celebrate the fall of the Bastile. They marched from their respective headquarters to the upper town, where they saluted the monuments of Montcalm, Champlain and Laval. They then returned to the Church of Notre Dame du Chemin, where mass was celebrated and a sermon was preached by Father Ruhlman.

Two Saved From Lake Huron.

SARNIA, July 15.—Capsized from a canoe into Lake Huron Sunday evening about ten o'clock, Augusta Misch and his wife, were rescued just in time to save them from a watery grave.

Everett Bickley of Detroit noticed the accident and secured a boat. He rescued the pair, but the woman was so far gone that it took a quarter of an hour for the doctor to revive her.

"BLACKHANDERS" GOT AWAY.

Inspector Reburh's Posse Failed To Make a Capture.

ST. CATHARINES, July 15.—The theory that the "black hand" threat of extermination of Joseph McNulty, a Merritton hotelman, and his family, was a joke, was exploded early yesterday when two men successfully evaded arrest by Inspector Reburn of the provincial police and party of villagers, who were in hiding near the iron bridge, where McNulty had placed a package at midnight in answer to a second demand to place $2,000 at the spot. The first demand had been for $1,000 at another location.

The escape was followed by revolver shots. The inspector and his posse were able to make out the outlines of the men searching, but an exclamation by one of the party alarmed the strangers.

AFRAID TO GO HOME.

And Niagara Falls Girl's Body Is Found In River.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 15.—The body of Masie Lynch, the 16-year-old girl who disappeared on the night of July 4, was taken from the river at the Canadian Maid of the Mist landing yesterday. The girl lived with her aunt, Miss Mary Casey, on the American side. She attended a carnival of a fraternal organization on July 4 and started for her home at 11.30 p.m.

"I would rather go over the falls than home to be scolded by auntie for being out this late," she told girl friends she was with, according to a story they told the police.

At four o'clock on the morning of July 5 two tourists saw a young woman carried over the American Falls. The police believe that it was the Lynch girl.

OHIO VALLEY CLOUDBURST

Lives Are Believed to Have Been Lost in Flood

TRAIN IS STOPPED

Crew Cut Holes Through Roof to Save Passengers

MARIETTA, O., July 15.—Following a cloudburst near here yesterday the Muskingum river and Duck Creek are out of their banks. The entire valley is under water, and it is feared a number of lives have been lost. A Pennsylvania passenger train and two freights which left Marietta for Cleveland at six o'clock yesterday morning were caught at Stanleyville on Duck Creek, seven miles north of Marietta. The twenty-five passengers in the train were rescued yesterday afternoon when the crew cut holes through the car roofs and took them out.

The situation along the Muskingum and Duck Creew is desperate. Wires are down and there is no way to tell whether there has been serious loss of life. The property damage will be enormous.

Passengers from the flooded Pennsylvania trains reached Marietta yesterday afternoon, having walked across country. They told a thrilling story of their experiences.

The waters of Duck Creek came upon them like a mighty wall, rising five feet within a few minutes, then settling to a rise of five feet per hour. The fires in the locomotive were drenched before the engineer could reverse his engine and start to back away.

A farmer with a small row boat came to the rescue and Conductor Davis and Brakeman Sweeney managed the boat.

Two by two they rowed the passengers to high ground. When the party left the scene the train had completely disappeared in the waters. Valuable mail, baggage and expressage were lost.

The railroad bridge at Marietta was swept away at noon despite the fact that it had been ballasted with loaded gondolas. Traffic [illegible] here are now as bad [illegible] immediately following the flood.

The Daily Review.

TUESDAY, JULY 15, 1913.

A SIGNAL VICTORY

The battle is lost and won. After a most strenuous fight against prejudice, misrepresentation and calumny the Conservative party has gained a great victory in the election of Mr. C. S. Cameron to the riding of North Grey by the magnificent majority of over three hundred.

Mr. John MacQuaker, the defeated Liberal candidate, made prodigous efforts to hold the seat which Hon. A. G. MacKay held for the Liberals at the last election by the large majority of 741.

The constituency has been in the hands of the Liberals for the last eleven years, and while they were quaking in anticipation of defeat not even the most despairing Liberal thought this bye-election would result in a turn-over of a thousand votes and in favor of the Conservative candidate.

The Globe of yesterday said; "It is the testing time for North Grey." North Grey has emerged from the trial and declared against Mr. McQuaker and his party and has come out on the side of the party which represents a policy of sane progress and substantial and lasting reform.

Many will be the attempts by Liberal journals to explain away the defeat of Mr. MacQuader. It will be attributed by the Globe to the treachery of Methodists, especially to the action of the Christian Guardian which came out with a strong article last week dubbing the Globe "A liquor organ" and so using it of hypocracy for publishing temperance sermonettes in its editorials and advocating "glorious beer" in its advertising columns.

The truth is, North Grey has had enough of Liberalism with its quack remedies which Mr. Rowell has for the last two years been peddling around the constituencies. All this parrot cry of "Abolish the Bar" is nothing but a sop to the temperance party and a cheap way of buying votes.

But North Grey was not to be bought so cheaply. It is admitted that the riding is one of the most conspicuously anti-liquor electoral divisions in Ontario, the temptation to bite at the "Abolish the Bar" bait was therefore very strong.

The result of this election is a victory for the Conservative party and all that it stands for in Provincial and national affairs. It is an indication of the way the wind of political opinion is blowing throughout the Dominion.

It is a reply to Mr. Proudfoot and his attempt to besmirch the character off Mr. Hanna in order to win votes for the liberal candidate. A reply which the vast majority of the people would make if they were put to the same test.

A QUESTION OF RESPONSIBILITY

A boy was working in a butcher's shop in Montreal and while standing on the greasy counter his feet slipped and upon reaching out to save himself, had his wrist caught in a meat-hook. Blood poisoning set in and his arm was amputated.

His father claimed damages from the butcher and was awarded by the jury $2,000; their finding was that the butcher was to blame because he sent the boy to work in a dangerous place. The butcher is appealing against the verdict.

This case raises the question as to how far an employer is responsible for the safety of youths in his service. The boy in question was standing on the counter in order to put some tin cans on a shelf and had to stand on the counter to do so. The boy was certainly engaged in doing what his employer told him and in the only way possible. While it was an unfortunate accident for both parties, the case ought to be a warning to employers and make them realize that they are, to a large extent, responsible for the bodily welfare of the boys in their employ.

The law regards a boy as an irresponsible who should, when he is off the hands of his parents, be on the hands of someone else, as was remarked in these columns a few days ago in reference to boys bathing in deep water. The time will come when parents themselves will be held responsible and subject to punishment for neglecting to safeguard their boys against the possibility of accident of any kind. Accidents will always happen in this world but ninety per-cent of those that do happen might be avoided if responsible people assumed their responsibility.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Another evening paper, published in Peterborough is still awaiting the result of the election in North Grey so far as its editorial of yesterday is concerned. This was doubtless an attempt to put off the evil day.

The Rev. George Jackson, who recently returned to the old country after a sojourn of some seven years in Toronto has met with a warm reception at the hands of the heresy-hunters. He seems to be a kind of prophet who is without honor both at Home and abroad.

It is said that Kaiser William enjoys caricatures of himself which appear in the papers from time to time Perhaps the greatest of all the caricatures of the real Kaiser are the Kaiser's photographs and the telegrams by which he has become famous. He is only human after all.

Rev. J. D. Morrow of Toronto, has declared that he will not walk pis his new church till the roof is on. The days of the superstition about walking under ladders are not over, but the reverend gentleman ought to be above such things.

Mr. Will Crooks, the London labor man, is coming to Canada this month along with a party of distinguished members of the aristocracy. Mr. Crooks it need scarcely be remarked is not an aristocrat, he was born "dragged up" and still resides in Poplar which suburb of London he represents in the House of Commons.

The Finance department of Ottawa acknowledges the receipt of $20 conscience money mailed at Toronto on July 10th. If this was to become general they would be well off at Ottawa.

THE COW.

Mooly cow, come to the milking pail.
The sun is low in the west,
We'll have none of their old brown ale
Warm white milk is best.

Mooly cow, come, let your rich milk stream
Till the pail no more can hold;
To-night it will turn to yellow cream
And to-morrow to butter gold.

Mooly cow, come, we have filled the pail,
And the sun is sunk in the west.
We'll have none of their old brown ale
New white milk is best.

—A. P. Graves.

He Was In the "Six-Cent" Book

The inborn commercial spirit which is almost second nature with the average Hebrew was exemplified splendidly at the Forest School, Toronto, the other day.

The headmaster, Mr. Dent, was trying to sort the children into classes, and put to each one the query, "What book were you in."

The question was put to a diminutive Jewish boy, and he promptly replied "I'm in the book that costs six cents."

Investigation showed that the reader used in the second grade of the first book costs six cents and is marked with the price on the outside.

Lord Chancellor Barry Dead.

LONDON, July 12.—The Right Hon. Redmond Barry, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, died last night.

Redmond Barry was born in 1866. He was Solicitor-General of Ireland from 1909-9, and Attorney-General, 1909-11. He represented North Tyrone in the House of Commons from 1907 to 1911, enjoying the distinction of being the only Irish Liberal in the House.

Cost Big Sum.

The Swaffham Board of Guardians have received notice of the death of a female lunatic belonging to their Union who has been an inmate of the Norfolk Asylum since 1869. During her 44 years' residence in that institution her maintenance cost the ratepayers $5,500.

"I AM SATISFIED I COULD NOT LIVE

If It Were Not For "Fruit-a-tives", The Wonderful Fruit Medicine

PENAGHVALE, ONT., JAN. 29th, 1910

"For thirty five years (and I am now a man over seventy) I have been a terrible sufferer from Constipation. No matter what remedy or physicians I employed, the result was always the same—impossible to get a cure. About 2 years ago, I read the testimonial of Hon. John Costigan regarding "Fruit-a-tives" and I decided to give them a trial. I have used "Fruit-a-tives" ever since. They are the first and only medicine that suited my case. If it were not for "Fruit-a-tives", I am satisfied I could not live" JAMES PROUDFOOT.

Mr. Proudfoot is one of the prominent farmers of Prescott County and has been Treasurer of Caledonia Township for years. "Fruit-a-tives" is sold at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50—trial size, 25c. by dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, July 14.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending July 12 were 1400 cattle, 1600 sheep and lambs, 2100 hogs and 1100 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 900 cattle, 1800 sheep and lambs, 900 hogs and 650 calves.

Of the 900 head of cattle, 208 head arrived Saturday morning from the St Hyacinthe distillery, which were sold to the Montreal Abattoir Company at $7.35 per cwt., weighed off cars, consequently there were less than 700 head on the market today, which tended to strengthen the situation to some extent and prices scored an advance of 15c to 25c per cwt. The gathering of buyers was large and as the weather was cool for the season of the year, the demand for cattle was good from both packers and butchers and an active trade was done. Sales of full loads of choice steers were made at $7.25 to $7.35; good, at $7 to $7.15, and medium stock at $6 to $5.25 and $6.50, while picked lots of choice steers brought as high as $7.40 per cwt.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for sheep and lambs, prices being about steady. The supply was fair, for which the demand was good, and an active trade was done with sales of ewe sheep at $4.25 to $4.50 per cwt. There continues to be a good demand for calves at steady prices. The tone of the market for hogs is firm.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.15 to $7.40; medium, $6.25 to $6.75; common, $4 to $5; canners, $3 to $3.25; choice cows, $5.50 to $6; medium, $5 to $5.25; bulls, $3.50 to $6, milkers, choice, each $75 to $80; common and medium, each, $65 to $70; springers, $55 to $60.

Sheep—Ewes, $4.25 to $4.50; bucks and culls, $3 75 to $4; lambs, $7 25 to $7.50.

Hogs, f.o.b., $10.20 to $10.40.

New Art President.

A Canadian painter, reported to have got $20,000 for a single canvas in New York, is the new president of the Canadian Art Club, whose sixth annual exhibition was held in Toronto recently. Horatio Walker looks considerably like the late J. Pierpont Morgan when a middle-aged man. Had he not gone into painting he might have been a financier. He was born in Canada, but has spent a great deal of his life abroad; a good deal of it in New York, where he has a shrewd dealer in the person of Mr. N. E. Montross.

But the most of Horatio Walker's work is done in his big, quiet studio on the Isle of Orleans, just below Quebec. He is the only painter in Canada who does most of his work on an island. He is recognized as the most powerful painter ever born in Canada; and if he would interpret Canadian life more, and the New York millionaires less, he might be regarded as essentially and altogether a Canadian painter. He has the gift of investing a homely subject such as pigs or milking time, or a horse-trough with a prodigal glamor of color which becomes eloquent though exceedingly good drawing.

Shipping Beavers.

The first shipment of live beavers from Toronto's beaver warehouse, the Riverdale Park Zoo, was made the other day, when six of Canada's national emblems were despatched to Dublin. They had been brought to Toronto several days ago from the Algonquin Park, and half a dozen were ordered for the Zoo in the Irish capital. Toronto gets two lions in exchange.

The attendants had a lively time catching the animals. They were in a tank, and when the keepers approached to grasp them, the beavers dived. Finally, by means of salmon landing nets, the six were caught. They were then placed in a heavy wooden box through a trap door in its top, moved on wheel-barrows to an express wagon, and driven to the Union Station. Before being put on board the train their temperature was taken, and all due medical precautions taken to insure their health on the journey.

CY WHITTAKER'S PLACE

By JOSEPH C. LINCOLN

Copyright, 1908, by D. Appleton & Co.

CHAPTER XXV.

"YES, he has," went on Lawyer Peabody, speaking about Thomas. "That's the queer part of it. At the place where he boarded we learned that he got a letter from Arizona—trust the average landlady to look at postmarks—that he seemed greatly agitated all that day and left that night. No one has seen him since. Why he went is a puzzle, where we don't care. So long as he keeps out of our way that's enough."

Captain Cy did not care either. He surmised that Mr. Atkins might probably explain the disappearance. And yet, oddly enough, this explanation was not the true one. The Honorable Heman solemnly assured the captain that he had not communicated with Emily's father. He intended to do so as a part of the compact agreed upon at the hotel, but the man had fled. And the mystery is still unsolved. The supposition is that there really was a wife somewhere in the west. Who or where she was no Bayporter knows. Henry Thomas has never come back to explain.

"I told Miss Dawes of the photograph and what it proved," went on Peabody. "She was dreadfully disappointed. She could hardly speak when she left me. I urged her to come in and see you, but she wouldn't. Evidently she had set her heart on helping you and the child. It is too bad, because, practically speaking, we owe everything to her. There is little doubt that the inquiry set on foot by her scared the Thomas fellow into flight. And she has worked night and day to aid us. She is a very clever woman, Captain Whittaker, and a good one. You can't thank her enough. Here! What are you about?"

Captain Cy strode past him into the dining room. The hat rack hung on the wall by the side door. He snatched his cap from the peg and was struggling into his overcoat.

"Where are you going?" demanded the lawyer. "You mustn't attempt to walk now. You need rest."

"Rest! I'll rest by and by. Just now I've got business to attend to. Let go of that pea jacket."

"But"—

"No buts about it. I'll see you later. So long!"

He threw open the door and hurried down the walk. The lawyer watched him in amazement. Then a slow smile overspread his face.

"Captain!" he called. "Captain Whittaker!"

Captain Cy looked back over his shoulder. "What do you want?" he asked.

Mr. Peabody's face was now intensely solemn, but there was a twinkle in his eye.

"I think she's at the boarding house," he said demurely. "I'm pretty certain you'll find her there."

All the regulars at the perfect boarding house had, of course, attended the reception at the Cy Whittaker place. None of them, with the exception of the schoolmistress, had as yet returned. Dinner had been forgotten in the excitement of the great day, and Keturah and Angeline and Mrs. Tripp had stopped in at various dwellings along the main road to compare notes on the captain's appearance and the Atkins address. Asaph and Bailey and Alpheus Smalley were at Simmons'.

Captain Cy knew better than to attempt his hurried trip by way of the road. He had no desire to be held up and congratulated. He went across lots, in the rear of barns and orchards, wading through drifts and climbing fences as no sane convalescent should. But the captain at that moment was suffering from the form of insanity known as the fixed idea. She had done all this for him—for him. And his last message to her had been an insult.

He approached the Bangs property by the stable lane. No one locks doors in our village, and those of the perfect boarding house were unfastened. He entered by way of the side porch, just as he had done when Gabe Lumley's depot wagon first deposited him in that yard. But now he entered on tiptoe. The dining room was empty. He peeped into the sitting room. There by the center table sat Phoebe Dawes, her elbow on the arm of her chair and her head resting on her hand.

"Ahem! Phoebe!" said Captain Cy.

She started, turned and saw him standing there. Her eyes were wet, and there was a handkerchief in her lap.

"Phoebe," said the captain anxiously, "have you been cryin'?"

She rose on the instant. A great wave of red swept over her face. The handkerchief fell to the floor, and she stooped and picked it up.

"Crying!" she repeated confusedly. "Why, no, of course—of course not! I—how do you do, Captain Whittaker? I'm—we're all very glad to see you home again—and well."

She extended her hand. Captain Cy reached forward to take it. Then he hesitated.

"I don't think I'd ought to let you shake hands with me, Phoebe," he said—"not until I beg your pardon."

"Beg my pardon! Why?"

He absently took the hand and held it.

"For the word I sent to you when I went away. 'Twas an awful thing to say, but I meant it for your sake, you know. Honest, I did."

She laughed nervously.

"Oh, that!" she said. "Well, I did think you were rather particular as to your visitors. But Mr. Tiddit explained, and then— You needn't beg my pardon. I appreciate your thoughtfulness. I knew you meant to be kind to me."

"That's what I did. But you didn't obey orders. You kept comin'. Now, why"—

"Why? Did you suppose that I cared for the malicious gossip of—such people? I came because you were in trouble, and I hoped to help you. And—and I thought I had helped until a few minutes ago."

Her lip quivered. That quiver went to the captain's heart.

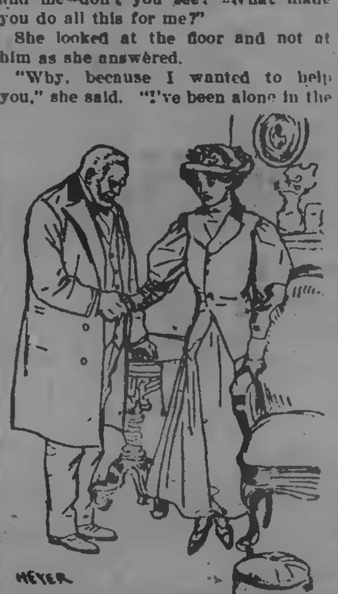
"Helped?" he faltered. "Helped? Why, you've done so much that I can't ever thank you. You've been the only real helper I've had in all this miserable business. You've stood by me all through."

"But it was all wrong. He isn't the man at all. Didn't Mr. Peabody tell you?"

"Yes, yes, he told me. What difference does that make? Peabody be hanged! He ain't in this. It's you and me—don't you see? What made you do all this for me?"

She looked at the floor and not at him as she answered.

"Why, because I wanted to help you," she said. "I've been alone in the world ever since mother died, years ago. I've had few real friends. Your friendship had come to mean a great deal to me. The splendid fight you were making for that little girl proved what a man you were. And you fought so bravely when almost every one was against you I couldn't help wanting to do something for you. How could I? And now it has come to nothing—my part of it. I'm so sorry."



HE ABSENTLY TOOK THE HAND AND HELD IT.

"It ain't, neither. It's come to everything. Phoebe, I didn't mean to say very much more than to beg your pardon when I headed for here. But I've got to—I've simply got to. This can't go on. I can't have you keep comin' to see me—and Bos'n. I can't keep meetin' you every day. I can't."

She looked up as if to speak, but something, possibly the expression in his face, caused her to look quickly down again. She did not answer.

"I can't do it," continued the captain desperately. "'Tain't for what folks might say. They wouldn't say much when I was around, I tell you. It ain't that. It's because I can't bear to have you just a friend. Either you must be more'n that, or—or I'll have to go somewheres else. I realized that when I was in Washin'ton and cruisin' to California and back. I've either got to take Bos'n and go away for good, or—or"—

She would not help him. She would not speak.

"You see," he groaned—"you see, Phoebe, what an old fool I am. I can't ask you to marry me—me, fifty-five and rough from knockin' round the world, and you, young and educated and a lady. I ain't fool enough to ask such a thing as that. And yet I couldn't stay here and meet you every day and by and by see you marry somebody else. By the big dipper, I couldn't do it! So that's why I can't shake hands with you today—nor any more, except when I say goodby for keeps."

Then she looked up. The color was still bright in her face, and her eyes were moist, but she was smiling.

"Can't shake hands with me?" she said. "Please, what have you been doing for the last five minutes?"

Captain Cy dropped her hand as if his own had been struck with paralysis.

"Good land!" he stammered. "I didn't know I had it—honest truth, I didn't."

Phoebe's smile was still there, faint, but very sweet.

"Why did you stop?" she queried. "I didn't ask you to."

"Why did I stop? Why, because I—I—I declare I'm ashamed"—

She took his hand and clasped it with both her own.

"I'm not," she said bravely, her eyes brightening as the wonder and incredulous joy grew in his. "I'm very proud and very, very happy."

* * * * * * *

There was to be a big supper at the Cy Whittaker place that night. It was an impromptu affair, arranged on the spur of the moment by Captain Cy, who, in spite of the lawyer's protests and anxiety concerning his health, went serenely up and down the main road, inviting everybody he met or could think of. The captain's face was as radiant as a spring sunrise. His smile, as Asaph said, "pretty nigh cut the upper half of his head off." People who had other engagements and would under ordinary circumstances have refused the invitation couldn't say no to his hearty "Can't come? Course you'll come! Man alive, I want you!"

"Invalid, is he?" observed Josiah Dimick after receiving and accepting his own invitation. "Well, I wish to thunder I could be took down with the same kind of disease. I'd be willin' to linger along with it quite a spell if it pumped me as full of joy as Whit seems to be. Don't give laughin' gas to keep off pneumonia, do they? No? Well, I'd like to know the name of his medicine, that's all."

Supper was to be ready at 6. Georgianna, assisted by Keturah Bangs, Mrs. Sylvanus Cahoon and other volunteers, was gloriously busy in the kitchen. The table in the dining room reached from one end of the big apartment to the other. Guests would begin to arrive shortly. Wily Mr. Peabody, guessing that Captain Cy might prefer to be alone, had taken the board of strategy out riding behind the span.

In the sitting room around the base-burner stove were three persons—Captain Cy, Bos'n and Phoebe. Miss Dawes had "come early" at the captain's urgent appeal. Now she was sitting in the rocker at one side of the stove, gazing dreamily at the ruddy light behind the isinglass panes. She looked quietly, blissfully contented and happy. At her feet on the braided mat sat Bos'n playing with Lonesome, who purred lazily. The little girl was happy, too, for was not her beloved Uncle Cyrus at home again with all danger of their separation ended forevermore?

As for Captain Cy himself, the radiant expression was still on his face, brighter than ever. He looked across at Phoebe, who smiled back at him. Then he glanced down at Bos'n. And all at once he realized that this was the fulfillment of his dream. Here was his "picture." The sitting room was now as he had always loved to think of it—as it used to be. He was in his father's chair, Phoebe in the one his mother used to occupy and between them—just where he had sat so often when a boy—the child. The Cy Whittaker place had again and at last come into its own.

He drew a long breath and looked about the room, at the stove, the lamp, the old, familiar furniture, at his grandfather's portrait over the mantel. Then in a flash of memory his father's words came back to him, and he said, laughing aloud from pure happiness:

"Bos'n, run down cellar and get me a pitcher of cider, won't you? There's a good feller."

THE END.

A Clear Case.

It was a murky day, and the old sea captains were talking of a schooner which had been struck by lightning a few days before and adding their contributions to nautical fiction, thinly disguised as fact. "How about the Emma S., Captain Eli?" asked the privileged listener at last. "Wasn't she struck once?"

"She was sir," and Captain Eli fixed his gaze on a crack in the ceiling of the old wharf office. "She was off the cape—home'ard bound, she was."

"I'd like to hear the particulars," said the young man, and all the captains moved in their seats and fixed their eyes on the crack which held the gaze of Captain Eli.

"'Tisn't much to tell, only what might happen to any vessel under similar circumstances," said Captain Eli. "A bolt struck the deck amidships and bore a hole right down through the bottom of the schooner big as a man's leg. The water come rushing in, and of course the Emma S. would have foundered if a second bolt hadn't come and struck my forto'galla'mast, cut it off near the top, turned it end for end and drove it right into the hole, plugging it up and making it water tight.

"'Twas a clear case of what folks call the ravages and repairs of nature," said Captain Eli as he removed his gaze from the crack and let it rest thoughtfully on the ingenuous face of the only landsman in the company.—Youth's Companion.

Sensitive Souls.

In one of the schools on the outskirts of a city, where a large percentage of the pupils are of Italian parentage, the teachers were startled one day by the descent of a delegation of infuriated mothers, all gesticulating wildly and pouring forth floods of excited Italian. One of the older pupils, having been sent for to act as interpreter, reported that their cause of complaint was that their children had been ridiculed and made fun of by teachers and pupils.

"In what possible way?" demanded the astounded teacher.

"Why, by a song that you are teaching the children, where you call them 'dagoes'."

Not until the teachers realized that the song was "My Old Kentucky Home" and that the offending words were "The day goes by like a shadow on the heart" was the whole affair made clear, and the mothers, assured that no offense was intended, departed in peace.—Exchange.

A Novel Hat Rack.

The girl with several hats to stow away in her bedroom finds the problem of where to dispose of them a difficult one to solve. Two or three hats put away in a box together are not improved by the contact of one with the other. Moreover, the ordinary hatbox is not beautiful to look at. Here is an idea for a nest of hat boxes that is really pretty:

Procure three large square bandboxes with lids and cover all as neatly as possible with flowered chintz, lining the insides with linen or holland. Next get your carpenter to run up a three tier stand of white wood (on the principle of the wicker cake stands that are used for afternoon tea) on which to place the boxes. The stand, which consists of four posts and three or four shelves each large enough to hold a hat box, should be enameled white, and the effect of the chintz covered boxes on it is a very pretty one.

Unionists Would Abolish Salaries.

LONDON, July 12.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—An influential movement has begun among the Unionist members of Parliament for the abolition of the payment of members, as instituted by the present Government, at the last meeting of the National Unionist Association. A discussion took place on the whole question. It was decided to recommend that party leaders officially declare against salaries for members. This expression of opinion will be communicated to Lord Lansdowne and Mr. Bonar Law.

JOHNSTON GREER IS THE HYDRO ELECTIC FOREMAN

Will Have Charge of Construction Work Under Mr. Jeffery

Ald Johnston gave the deciding vote last night, that appointed Mr. Johnston Greer foreman of the construction work of the Hydro Electric operations.

There were six applications as follows:

H. Carveth, Charlotte street, $3.5 per day.

G. H Mann, London street, $75 per month.

S. T Medd, Sherbrooke street, $100 per month.

F. L Luke, London; $120 per month.

Frank Lapp, Beaverton.

J. H Greer, Water street, $125 per month.

G. H Mann wrote that he had had 16 years experience in similar work. S. T. Medd had 8 years experience, and had been foreman for the Toronto Hydro Electric. Fred L. Luke stated he had 14 years experience, part of which was with the London Hydro Electric.

J. H Greer is well-known as an experienced electrician.

It was moved by Ald. Gordon and Buller that J. H. Greer be appointed.

An amendment by Ald. Duncan and Mayor Bradburn that the chairman and Mr. Jeffery interview the applicants before making the appointment, followed the motion.

"You advertised for applications" remarked Ald. Duncan, "and now you are throwing these men down."

Ald. Johnston decided for the original motion, appointing Mr. Greer.

Mr Wm. Lytle had been offered the position, but he declined to take less than $160 per month.

NOT PERMANENT

The appointment is only for the construction work, which will probably take about three months time. This was distinctly understood by all members of the committee.

SLIGHT CHANCE FOR SETTLEMENT

Messrs Green and Campbell Will Not Accept City's Offer

Despite the hope of a settlement by which the dispute over the property occupied by Messrs. Campbell and Green, of Water street, might be forever ended, the Legal Committee, last night did not meet with that success.

Messrs. Campbell and Greene occupy what was originally a Government reserve, and they claim the property by right of possession of sixty years.

They, however, have no title to the property.

On the other hand, Messrs. Green and Campbell offer $25 for a clear title.

Last night the Committee offered that for $200 from each man all rights would be given by the city. Also that in the event of a portion of the property being sold to the C.P.R the city would reserve half the purchase price.

Mr. Campbell said he would not give more than $50 for the title, while Mr. Dixon who represented Mr. Green, stated that consideration might be given to the offer by his client if the amount was made $100.

It was finally decided that the City Solicitor's advice would be secured again.

LELAND FRANKS WAS SUCCESSFUL

The name of Leland Franks was omitted from the list of names of successful candidates in the entrance examinations. He passed with 393 marks.

W. J. Sloan, a local man, on the prohibited list, was assessed $10.

Jos. McCarthy paid $2 and costs, amounting in all to $5.75, for causing a disturbance on main street.

BURNING OF ROME

Splendid Historical Spectacle at Canadian National Exhibition This Year

Nero and the Burning of Rome, the Pyro-Spectacle to be staged at the Canadian National Exhibition by John Henderson of London, Eng., promises to be the most elaborate scenic production ever produced on the Continent. With 800 performers, elaborate Roman costumes, music, singing and dancing, Nero's triumphal procession, the exercises of the Praetorian Guards, gladiators fights, masquerades, chariot races and the early Christian martyrs. Mr. Henderson has abundant material to work with and the final scene when the Imperial City is given to the flames is a pyrotechnic effort that cannot be excelled. 30

FARMER WAS HEAVY LOSER BY LIGHTNING

OMEMEE, July 15 — Wednesday afternoon's storm was of a vicious character, the rain descending in torrents, the electrical discharges extremely nerve-racking, and the hailstones dancing in the apparent glee of the wild elemental sweep.

The fine barn of Mr. Thos. Pogue near Reaboro, was a victim of the electric fluid; some of the animals were got out, but a fine mare and two—or three calves perished, besides hay, wagon, seeder, scales, fanning mill, pitchforks, harnesses and a great many other articles. Some of the other outbuildings caught fire but were saved through the efficient work of a bucket brigade. It is stated that there was no insurance on the contents, and a small amount on the building. The loss is a very serious one to Mr. Pogue as the season for housing crop is right upon him.

ALEX. FERGUSON CLAIMS $2000

He Lost One of His Legs in Railway Accident

Alex. Ferguson, Bethune street, who lost one of his legs through an accident near the corner of Bethune and Simcoe streets, when that limb was crushed by a freight car, asks damages of $2000 from the city.

The Legal Committee in session last night, did not take any action.

MEMBERS' INDEMNITY

In reply to a communication from the local Dominion member, for an opinion by council as to the proposed increase in the members' indemnity the committee decided to recommend that Council has not sufficient knolwedge of public opinion to pass a resolution in the matter.

PASSED AWAY AT GRIMSBY

Death of Miss Adelade Manson Formerly of This City

News was received in the city today, of the death of Miss Adelade Manson, daughter of Mr. Wm. Manson, of Grimsby, and formerly manager of the Bank of Commerce.

It is between fifteen and eighteen years ago since Mr. Manson was in Peterborough.

LONELY LAD FOUND FRIEND

He Came From Toronto to Meet Farmer

At the C.P.R. station yesterday afternoon, special officer Weller met a young lad who had reached the city on the 11.43 train. He had come from the Barnardo Home for Boys in Toronto and expected that the farmer in Cavan, with whom he had been placed, would meet him at the station. But the farmer came not. After his several hours of wandering about the station, Officer Weller was attracted to the boy, and on learning of his plight, took him to his home and gave the boy a meal.

Later, Immigration Officer Miller whom the officer communicated with learned of the farmer's whereabouts and placed the lad in his care.

AT SPRINGVILLE

Springville people had a visit last night from G. L. Johnston, who gave a demonstration at Mr. Archie Reynold's store with a Prof. Dodd's machine.

He illustrated how the electrical conditions of the earth co-operate with those of the clouds and explained how trees and buildings came to be struck by lightnoing. He also explained how loss by lightning could be prevented to a certain extent. The demonstration attracted quite a large gathering.

HE FORGOT DATE OF HIS MARRIAGE

Now He Must Repeat it Ten Times Daily for Sixty Days

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 15.—"June 14, 1887, June 14, 1887." Whenever neighbors of Phillip Leborski, town of Lake, hear him mumbling this date, as they undoubtedly will during the next two months, they need not be surprised. Leborski is simply obeying the orders of the judge of the district court.

June 14, 1887, is the date of his marriage to Mary Leborski and in district court Judge Richard Elsner sentenced him to repeat the date to himself ten times daily until he is sure that it is firmly scratched in his memory.

Leborski, who owns several pieces of property in the town of Lake, had an argument with his wife, and when he resorted to violence she fled to the roof of their home. When a patrolman came along Mrs. Leborski was perched upon the roof, while her husband stood in the yard shaking his fist.

TRIED TO FORGET DATE.

"How long have you been married?" Judge Elsner wnated to know of Leborski.

"Oh I don't know," he replied. "I have been trying to forget it."

"On what date were you married?" the judge persisted.

"I've managed to forget that too" he responded.

"That is something no married man must ever forget," the court declared. "Forgetting things of that sort causes more trouble than any other one cause."

"We were married on June 14, 1887, Judge," the wife spoke up. We had a nice wedding too, if I do say it myself, and there wasn't a better looking—"

REPEAT DATE 10 TIMES DAILY.

"Then June 14 goes" the court declared: "The defendant is ordered to repeat the date to himself ten times daily for the next sixty days. The case is continued until that time, when, if he has mastered the date, sentence will be suspended. If he cannot manage to remember it a term in the house of correction may aid him."

"June 14, 1887; June 14, 1887," Leborski mumbled, as he walked out of the courtroom, with his wife keeping count.

LONG RUN TO CHIMNEY FIRE

Trouble at Dufferin Street and not at Brewery

The fire brigade had a long run to 122 Dufferin street this morning to a chimney fire. The report on the streets was that the fire was at the Brewery.

Last night, about eight o'clock, the firemen responded to a blaze under the grating in front of the flour and feed store, across from St. Alphonsus Lyceum. The space underneath the grating was almost completely taken up by hay and the blaze was no doubt started by a match or the lighted stub of a cigar or cigarette.

Milady's Mirror

For Summer's Tan.

If your skin becomes sunburned you have no time to lose. You may laugh at the idea of special treatment because you have often been burned and brown without, as you believe, any really harmful results. Such results may not be fully apparent at once, but in a short time small faint lines appear, and the skin assumes a sort of dry and cracked appearance. These lines, although faint at first, if not properly treated, become deeper and soon develop into premature wrinkles.

As a soothing application and cure for sunburn buttermilk is most effective. Apply it freely with a soft cloth and rub it will into the face, neck and chest. The hands and arms should receive applications also if they have been burned. Then the parts must be thoroughly saturated with the milk and allowed to dry.

Now put a teaspoonful of borax into a basin of tepid water and carefully and gently wash off the buttermilk. Pat the skin with an old bit of soft linen and then with the finger tips massage or work into the skin very softly some of the lumpy pieces of the milk and allow it to dry thoroughly into the skin. Buttermilk not only bleaches and cleanses the skin, but it nourishes and feeds the dry and shriveled parts. After sunburn buttermilk should be applied as soon as possible and allowed to remain on the skin. Soap and water must not be applied while the skin stings or smarts.

To obtain a soft elastic skin the buttermilk treatment must be repeated daily. A disagreeable feature of the milk as a cosmetic is its odor. For this reason it is sometimes best to apply it at night and to use reliable skin food and powder during the day. However, if you are alone and you do not mind the odor then bathe in it all you wish. Because of its efficiency as a bleach and as a food both for the body and skin and because of its commendable cheapness, which is a point well worth considering, it occupies an important position in relation to health and beauty.

Fresh Air Always.

Seize upon every chance to keep out in the open air. If you can do no more, stick your head out of the window as many times a day as you can. Walk instead of ride whenever you can, whether you feel like it or not. Train yourself to it. Keep out of the cars as much as possible; the air in them is not of the purest. On all occasions walk, exercise, play, do anything in the open if it is only to sit in the sun and take a sun bath. Get this one point well fixed in your mind—that the greatest tonic given us is the fresh air, whether it be cold or warm, rainy or sunny, clear or murky. It is always healthful and the finest element that we can take into our systems.

Cause of Dandruff.

There are four main causes for the prevalence of dandruff—ill health, worry, pressure of close hats and the use of quantities of false hair. Ill health, especially nervous disorders, are instantly communicated to the scalp. When one feels full of life and energy the hair responds readily to the hurried or careless touch. When ill, hair is stubborn, stringy and generally unruly. Worry is really an affection of the nerves, so that those who indulge in this form of mental folly always pay the price in dull, oily looking coiffures and irritating dandruff.

Improving the Looks.

We owe it to our friends as well as ourselves to look our best at all times, and the girl who can improve her appearance without harming herself should do so. Nothing gives us quite the self confidence as to feel we look well.

Actresses are usually warm hearted, sensible and cheerful. That is because they make the best of themselves in face and form. An old saying is true, "The face is often a reflex of the mind," and in a measure it is no less true that the mind is a reflex of the face.

For the Outdoor Girl.

A hot bath and a vigorous rubbing after a day outdoors is a necessity both for cleanliness and to prevent fatigue. The feet and the face and hair naturally suffer most, and where much walking is done one should be careful not only to bathe the feet in lukewarm water and soda at night, but also to keep the soles powdered and take heed that the stockings are well fitting and without creases. Even though the shoe be well fitting much misery is caused by too long, too short or too heavy stockings.

For Headaches.

When the first symptoms of a headache appear take one teaspoonful of clear lemon juice fifteen minutes before each meal and at bedtime and continue until symptoms are past. For biliousness plain lemon juice and water is very good. It allays fever and promotes sleep and appetite.

Beauty of contour is the key of the successful "1913" costume.

Ruffles Are a Feature of Some of the Midsummer Models.

SIX months ago a returning fashion expert brought over from Paris a supple tricot corset on new lines. This corset had only half the usual number of supporting whalebones, thus allowing the figure to lose the stiff and trussed appearance it had had for several years and to relapse into a more natural pose. Even the graceful curves of the figure, so long sternly held into a "straight front," were allowed by this changed corset shape to resume their natural contours to some extent.

Now comes the news from overseas that the corset of six months ago has resolved itself into an even more extreme shape, straightening out the curves of the back and accentuating the curves in front.

Imagine a corset, apparently of traditional shape, lacing down the back and fastening down the front. Further examination reveals that this corset has been shaped and supported by whalebone to give a perfectly straight back while there is no such restriction in front. In other words, the lack of boning in front together with the bias placing of the material reveals the full contour of nature's curves. At the back the supports are placed little more than an inch apart, tending to repress the curves.

This is just the reverse of the famous "straight front" corset that appeared about fifteen years ago and with difficulty became the fashionable shape, gradually flattening out the feminine curves till the figure took on a youthful slenderness that made all womankind look the same age—from the back.

As for this revolution in corset lines, with the exception of the fashion extremists, it will probably not be taken up in a great hurry this side of the water. Like the "straight front" of other days, it demands time to get the average woman into that frame of mind where she is willing to commence all over again to acquire a new silhouette. In Paris, where one can more easily judge the effect of a new style on the manikins or the actresses, who often launch a fashion, an innovation becomes popular in a much shorter space of time.

A New York actress fresh from the seductive shops of Paris, has already acquired the new figure and admits that not only the corset is responsible, but that a queer little pad, sold in the shops for this purpose, is tucked under the corset to exaggerate the natural contours in front. With her arms primly folded over her waist she looks like a reincarnation of one of the mediaeval beauties and enjoys the sensation she creates.

The latest Paris gowns from the leading dressmaking houses, seen on the stage in the most recent plays or at the race meets, show that this new figure has gained a foothold in Paris. In one photograph of a tailored suit the curious width across the figure is accented by the pose. The costume is made of navy blue duvetyn material. The skirt has one seam, slot shape, down the centre front. The fitting is done by long dart like pleats taken at the sides, both front and back, that do not extend to the hem, but stop a little below knee depth. Buttoning up the neck, the short coat has its lapels placed curiously on the lower edge. Both lines of the suit and the pose of the figure show an utter disregard for the restricted feminine form of the last few years.

A small round hat with an extension brim of tulle has two long quills posed on the extreme brim edge.

Pleats, fulness and tucks accentuate the unfitted look of another model. The skirt material, a blue shadow moire, is laid in loose pleats in front, and its very ample appearance is exaggerated by the curious tuck placing at waist and knee. An apricot satin coatee, though of bloused fulness, is also pleated into the belt and held in by two bias fold straps of the material, embroidered at the ends with tailored arrows and fastening with small oval buttons. Heightening the unfitted look of the gown are the very long sleeves and the soft rolling collar.

Under the quaint lines of another suit the natural curves of the figure, untrammelled by corsets, are frankly discernible. The skirt is made of a wide breadth of cloth wrapped about the figure, crossing widely and drawn up in folds, disclosing the ankles. There are no closing buttons to the short cutaway coat. It is fitted by shoulder dart tucks caught at intervals by tailored arrows. A striped under-vest of yellow, blue and [illegible] has a narrow fluting of the stripe about its revers edge, and [illegible] bloused and belted into the waist by a sash. A demure straw bonnet shape has a soft satin [illegible]. A wide, airy frill of tulle about the crown is banded with velvet ribbon that also forms the strings. Hyacinths and [illegible] are posed at one side of the brim.

All new style lines conspire to give the figure a thrown forward look, and in a very lovely and extreme suit a black satin skirt is caught up in the centre front to conform to a deep yoke headed by a band of tiny pleatings outlined by corded piped edges. This trimming, which is seen on a number of the newest imported dresses, decorates also the short jacket and the kimono elbow sleeve that has a beautiful fall of lace from the cuff. While there is a lovely vest of white satin embroidered with black, there is but the slightest admission of a waist line. The centre of the figure, no longer composed of a slender waist and hips, is rather noticeable for its elaborateness and bulkiness—in this case by an added satin tunic of box pleated satin that is even fulled a little in front.

In a midsummer model of white crêpe de Chine printed with futurist flowers a short loop and a tasselled sash end are amusingly placed. In front the skirt is caught up by two deep tucks that let out at the back to form drapery folds. The crêpe mounts in points over the vaporous corsage of white crêpe chiffon and Alençon lace ruffles, which replace elbow sleeves. The sash, of green liberty satin, has no knot. A rose, one loop and one end tasselled at its corners, shows above and below the belt in front. A small crin sailor hat is wreathed with lilies of the valley and banded by white grosgrain ribbon.

The new curves are often accentuated by the dress trimmings. In a white crépon summer dress, the border of white ratine stripes, topped off by little flower pots of bright hued colors, is so placed between the deep tuck and the waist as to form a curved decoration. A little U shaped yoke on the bloused corsage and a sailor collar and sleeve edges are finished with bright waved lines of embroidery. The large crêpe hat has moire bows.

Odd dangling ornaments are one of the latest style details. A Paris model has a skirt of violet silk crêpon, gathered unevenly into the waist and is looped up on one side about knee depth, exposing the ankles, and caught with a heavy cord with ornamental ends. Straw colored taffeta makes a corsage that has something of the waist, something of the jacket to it. Lapping at the filmy lace top, it does not meet at the waist, but is connected by a broad strap of ribbon caught by odd dangling metal ornaments. The coat fronts are decorated by long bands of black embroidery, finishing in little metal arrows. These little ornaments, with and without the pendants, are placed oddly on waists and skirts, sometimes catching up a drapery, sometimes dangling from the belt.

At the race meets these new silhouettes have been launched by the models from the dressmaking houses and some of the more venturesome Parisians. A profile of a pretty woman caught by the camera is a good exponent of this idea, the dark blue charmeuse tight fitting skirt having an overpuffed tunic of blue tulle. The short bolero jacket covering any trace of a waist line is unfitted and short sleeved, the top covered with lingerie fichu collar. Another gown, one of the new ruffled skirt dresses, was of black net over flesh pink satin trimmed with Chantilly lace.

NOVEL MANTLE STYLES.

New combinations are being launched in Paris in afternoon costumes that show a great deal of originality and skill in their peculiar adaptations to modern social life. For, with the return of the dress to afternoon fashion, new styles of outside garments are required. In this model the result has been achieved in a natural and artistic manner. The skirt and mantle are of the same material, the fashionable shade of gray charmeuse. Though the wrap is on the so-called butterfly order, reaching to just below the waist only, because of the shaping of the skirt drapery it looks like a long wrap, as the lower edge of the short mantle folds under with a puff instead of a hem.

The waist is of gray chiffon, with a silver lace yoke and frills of the chiffon. The hat aigrettes are placed in the latest fashion.

START OF THE INTERNATIONAL CANOE RACE.

Leo Freide, of the Manhattan Canoe Club, American defender of the International Canoe Challenge Cup, was an easy winner in the first day's competition yesterday over Ralph Britton, the challenger, representing the Gananoque Canoe Club, of Canada, by one minute and fifty-four seconds.

Agility of mind and body are prime requisites of first class sailing canoeists, and a slight move in one direction or the other is liable to result in an upset, but Leo Friede, the American defender of the International Canoe Challenge Cup, and Ralph Briton, the Canadian challenger, both of whom are shown in the accompanying illustrations, are past masters in the art and thorough Corinthians. One of the illustrations shows them posing and the other starting in the first race for the cup.

PETES BIFFED GARLOW FOR ENOUGH TO WIN GAME

Scored Four Runs in the Third—Byrne Had Home Run

HAMILTON, July 15.—After allowing six batters to face him in the first three innings of yesterday's game, Chief Garlow blew up, and a walk, and three two-base hits sounded the death knell of the Kolts, Peterborough annexing four tallies in this session. Lee's men secured an early two run lead in the initial inning and looked to have the game on ice when Garlow went on the rampage. Dougherty, who was called on to finish the game held the visitors in check during the remaining six innings, but two hits being secured from his delivery. Byrne, the first man up in the fourth, fell on one for a flukey home run, which Barton should have captured easily. A rumor prevalent after the game was to the effect that Garlow and Barton were due to receive their walking tickets this week and that a new outfielder and a pitcher would be secured immediately. ## SKOOKUM JIM.

He Is a Wise Old Man and a Wealthy One Now.

Skookum Jim is a wise old red man. For more years than he can number he has lived on the Kitsilano Reserve, on the busy Vancouver waterfront. The passing years have transformed the scene he knew as a youth and as a man grown. They have mowed the forest from the hillside and planted in its stead tall smokestacks and piles of apartment blocks. They have brought lines of glistening steel and snarling, busy sawmills to his clam-sown beach. They have driven fussy tugs with endless, endless rafts of logs over the banks where the whiting used to teem. They have flung steel viaducts across his familiar creek. They have driven the head of Skookum Jim deep down between his shoulders, and have added phalanx on phalanx of wrinkles to his brow. And through it all Jim has waited, and been the gainer for his waiting. Wrinkles the years hold in store for all, wealth they bring to many, but wisdom is their gift to few. All three they brought to Skookum Jim.

Wisdom came to Jim a bit at a time. He has been accumulating it through many, many months. The wealth, however, came suddenly. Lo, the poor Indian is poor no longer. One day recently, for the first time in eight years, Jim went across to the city. His comrades of the reserve, some two dozen in number, went along, and they were led by "Hally" Alexander, whom all of them had known for years, into a downtown bank. There, in the vault, they were shown a pile of gold, as much as six men could carry. It would be theirs, they were told, the moment they quit the reserve for good. The pile of gold was worth well over a quarter of a million dollars—enough to pay $11,250 to the head of every family on the reserve. There was some demurring at first. The younger men thought the sum too small. The representative of an American railroad had offered them twice as much. Why should they take less than they could get? But the older men at length carried the day, and the agreement was signed. One day more on the old reserve and the Indians were to pack their belongings on a scow and be transferred, bag and baggage, up the coast to Squamish. Their seventy acres of reserve, with its half mile of waterfront, was to go to the Province of British Columbia.

It was all very curious and wonderful. Jim didn't pretend to understand it. Far, far away to the south, they had told him, men were digging a great ditch, as wide as the Fraser and twice as long as the Inlet. It would bring ships to Vancouver—more in a week than come now in many months. And back in the mountains other men were feverishly boring tunnels which would let a stream of grain down from the wheatfields to the ocean. The ships must be docked and loaded. The grain must be stored and cleaned. Skookum Jim's reserve was needed for docks and tracks and elevator sites. He, being only a red man, would have to move. His gold he could take or leave in the bank. Whatever he did with it, the white man expected to get it back soon. Then the white man would have both—the gold and the reserve. And Skookum Jim? Well, he was only Skookum Jim.

The day after the signing of the agreement with the Government a scow was beached close by the Kitsilano Reserve, and the Indians carried all their household goods and fishing gear down to it. When the tide came in the scow floated free. A tug hitched on and the Indians were off. The white man's march forward; the red man's retreat. A week later numbers of them were back in the city, and there were more drunken Indians in Vancouver than at any time in five years. But Skookum Jim was not among those who came to celebrate. The city has no charms for him. He is ending his days in peace and plenty on a little ranch which his business manager has provided at Squamish.

Unaccountable.

"Those people who lately moved in next door have every appearance of having moved in good society."

"Yes. That's why the language their parrot uses seems so peculiarly shocking."—Chicago Tribune.

Getting a Line on the Newcomer.

"Recently," says a Washington man, who had been spending a holiday at home in a suburb of the national capital, "I was afforded an amusing instance of the artlessness of childhood.

"Louise, one little girl on the next porch, was evidently engaged in cultivating the acquaintance of another little girl, a newcomer in the neighborhood. The second little girl was romping on the porch of the third house from me.

"'What's your name?' shouted Louise.

"'Elizabeth,' was the answer shouted back. 'What's yours?'

"'Louise. The name of the people that lived in that house before you was Berry.'

"'Our name is Parker.'

"'Ours is Taylor. You didn't know the Berrys, did you?'

"'No.'

"'They were something awful for borrowing. They used to be sending over to our house all the time for everything you could imagine. Your folks don't do that, do they?'

"'No.'

"Whereupon Louise turned and shouted up to her mother at the second story window:

"'She says they don't, mamma.'"—Judge.

India's Home Rule Party.

England has long since grown accustomed to the Swadeshi movement—a sort of Indian Sinn Fein—and the Hindus have likewise grown accustomed to it. It is no longer the correct thing for Bombay Babus to make bonfires of their English collars and waistcoats, but the newspapers continue to call on their readers to buy Swadeshi materials, the strongest, the beautifulest, the best.

Swadeshi is the herald of a vague nationalist movement.

It is hard to believe how few Britishers there are in India outside the garrisons. Including military officers in civil employ, about 1,200 Anglo-Saxons are employed in the civil government of 232,000,000 of people and in the partial control of 62,000,000 more. Four members of the ruling race for every million inhabitants. Afghans, Gurkhas, Dogras, Mohemmedans, Pathans, Afridis, and the rest make up a most wonderful mosaic of races, a bewildering babel of tongues. Hitherto the Moslems of India have kept aloof from the Swadeshi movement, yet Mohammedanism is the faith of one out of every five inhabitants of India. More than 62,000,000 British subjects in India are followers of the prophet, and watch with concern the fate of their brethren in the Turkish dominions.

The Indian Moslems cherish in their hearts some memory of the days when their fathers were the masters of India, and they believe that if ever English power were shaken they would regain their old predominance. In the meantime, they endure British rule, but protest it would be humiliating to yield obedience to the Babu and the Brahman.

NEW COAL ELEVATOR THE ONLY ONE OF ITS KIND

Unloading and Re-loading Made Easy—An Enterprise by Mr. R. Hicks

To facilitate the handling of coal Mr. R. Hicks has erected a large elevator on the property acquired by him on Bethune street, between Charlotte and Simcoe streets and the experiments held during the past few days have been very successful.

Some slight changes will be made and ultimate success is assured. It is now possible to unload a 48 ton car of coal and simultaneously store it in the elevator in about one hour and fifteen minutes. This means a big saving in labor as it would take two men ten hours to do the same work.

The loading in the delivery wagons is also accomplished in quick time. There are twelve openings placed at advantageous points, through which the coal leaves the elevator. Before it finds its way into the wagons or bags, screens have cleaned it and the purchaser receives the real goods.

UNLOADING THE COAL

The car is switched on to the siding and as the coal is released, it passes into a large concrete reservoir, constructed underneath the tracks, the flow being regulated by gates. The switch being turned, a 71-2 horse power motor drives the carrier, which leads from the reservoir and extends on an incline to a height of fifty or sixty feet. On this carrier is attached forty-two back-hinge buckets, each holding 30 pounds of coal, and these passing through the reservoir, load with coal and pass on up the carrier. At the point where it is desired to release the coal into a trough, there is no support for the back of the bucket and thus the coal escapes. The back of the carrier instantly flies back in position and proceeds down the carrier for another load.

The receiving trough at the top of the carrier, can be placed at any angle so that the several kinds of coal can be released into their respective bins, the elevator provides.

The coal as it leaves the trough passes into a wooden zig-zag shute, the construction of which permits a gradual descent and the coal is not broken or damaged in any way.

The elevator is constructed of lumber which contains over one thousand pounds of nails. Iron rods are used to add strength to the structure. It is built on six concrete walls, each about two feet in width and the space between will be used for storing siftings from the coal. This elevator is the only one of its kind. While the buckets are used elsewhere, the other mechanism was made to order.

The machinery was installed by Mr. Thos. Wilson, while the carpenter work was done by Angus McIntosh.

C.P.R. FREIGHT HELD UP BY HORSE ON RAILWAY BRIDGE

Last evening at 6 o'clock, the C.P.R. freight train going east was held up for some time by a runaway horse which found its way on to the track, east of George street and succeeding in crossing a section of the bridge.

The horse, which belonged to Judge Huycke, was secured after an exciting pursuit, in which a large crowd of people joined, and the freight train, after a little delay, proceeded on its journey.

It remains to be seen whether the special officer of the Company will summons the horse to court for trespassing.

Many Farmers at Immigration Office on Same Errand

Local Agent Finds Relatives of New Comers Who Waited in Vain

These are troublesome days for Immigration Agent Finch Miller. The farmers still continue to visit his office with a view to solving of the labor problem.

This morning a man and woman both new arrivals from the Motherland, walked into Mr. Miller's office enquiring for their friends. It seems that both parties have relatives near Peterborough and that they had sent for them. On their arrival here they were disappointed to find no relatives or friends to meet them at the station, so they repaired to the Immigration agent's office. On arrival at the above office this morning Mr. Miller started to look for their friends and finally succeeded.

But there is little marrow in the bone of contention.

FACES CHARGE OF FORGERY

John Campbell of Toronto Held by Police

John Campbell, who claims Toronto as his home, appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning on the charge of forging a cheque on the Canadian Bank of Commerce, on the 9th of July, for the sum of $750. He pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried by Magistrate Dumble.

W. H. Moore, K.C., appeared for the prosecution, Crown Attorney Wood being out of the city.

Mr. Moore asked for a remand until Friday. This was granted.

Campbell appeared before Magistrate Dumble last week on the charge of being drunk, and was fined $2, which he paid.

Campbell has been held in jail for some time as the Police Chief was suspicious of the man. He also suspected him of stealing a watch. Soon afterwards the forged cheque was detected and the charge is now against the prisoner.

He claimed to know Chief Thompson, and the Chief now remembers that Campbell appeared in Woodstock police court when he was chief at that place. Campbell received a sentence of five years.

Campbell's finger prints were taken.

HOME RULE BILL THROWN OUT BY HOUSE OF LORDS

Crisis in British Politics Occurs With Second Refusal of Measure and Premier Asquith Says Lords Will Again be "Reformed"—Is Believed to Mean Abolished=Unionists Demand Election.

LONDON, July 16.—A motion for the second reading of the home rule for Ireland bill, was defeated in the House of Lords last evening by a majority of 62. The vote was 302 to 364.

The motion of Lord Lansdowne, the leader of the Opposition in the Upper House, was declared, "that this House declines to proceed with the consideration of the bill until it has been submitted to the judgment of the country," was adopted without a division.

Premier Asquith, in the House of Commons, yesterday announced that the Government would present to its next session its scheme for the reform of the House of Lords.

The result of the vote on the home rule bill in the Lords was a foregone conclusion, but, says The London Daily News (Liberal) yesterday, has nevertheless inaugurated a serious crisis between the two Houses. On the one hand, Lord Curzon withdrew what he understood to be Lord Lansdowne's promise Monday to accept the home rule bill if a general election were won upon it. On the other hand, the announcement of the Prime Minister in the House of Commons means definitely that the Lords' abolition bill will be tabled at the next session. The challenge on both sides, says The London Daily News, is complete and uncompromising. The importance of Lord Curzon's speech lies in the fact that for a whole afternoon he was in close consultation with Lord Lansdowne, who drafted what appeared to be an ultimatum to the Government.

WELL POISONED AT INGERSOLL.

It's on Mayor's Farm—Detectives Are Investigating.

INGERSOLL, July 16.—A serious case of well poisoning has been discovered on the farm of Dr. J. B. Goleridge, mayor of Ingersoll, nine miles south of that town.

On taking a drink of water from the well, Mr. Furtney, the farm manager, became ill and his case was diagnosed as poisoning. On the well being examined it was found to contain bags of decayed turnips, old clothes, the body of a calf and other articles. Provincial Detective Mueller and others are working on the case.

PRINCE ARTHUR TO BE MARRIED

Duke of Connaught's Son Betrothed to Princess Alexandra Victoria

LONDON, July 16.—The betrothal is announced of Prince Arthur of Connaught and Princess Alexandra Victoria, the Duchess of Fife.

Prince Arthur Frederick Patrick Albert is the second son of the Duke of Connaught and Strathearn, Governor-General of Canada. He was born on Jan. 13, 1883, and has served as personal aide to King Edward VII. and King George V.

Princess Alexandra, Duchess of Fife, is the elder daughter of the late Duke of Fife and Princess Louise Victoria. Princess Royal, the daughter of King Edward VII. She was born May 17, 1891.

Princess Alexandra underwent a thrilling experience in December, 1911, when the Peninsular and Oriental liner Delhi stranded during a storm on the coast of Morocco, near Cape Spartel. The Duke of Fife, the Princess Royal and the Princesses Alexandra and Maud were rescued in lifeboats. A few weeks later the Duke of Fife died as a result of the hardships he had endured.

Trade Commission Needed.

QUEBEC, July 16.—During the business session of the Dominion Wholesale Grocers' Guild yesterday morning, Mr. Blain of Toronto read a paper recommending that the guild should suggest to the Government the formation of an independent trade and commerce commission that would contest trade combinations and govern rates of transportation, commissions, etc., with manufacturers on a fair and equitable basis to all concerned and to which the wholesale trade in general could apply to in matters relating to their business.

Heroic Trip To Doctor.

FORT WILLIAM, July 16.—After having his left arm destroyed by a premature blast of dynamite, J. C. Marihan walked a mile along a trail and then paddled two miles across Pass Lake to Roberts Bros.' construction camp on the Canadian Northern Railway, 26 miles east of here. He had gone out alone to blast some amethyst from the rock.

POLICE SURROUND BANDIT.

B. C. Bank Robber Is Hidden on Island and Must Capitulate.

VANCOUVER, July 16.—One of the bandits charged with robbing two Canadian bank messengers near Cumberland, B.C., July 5 and who since escaped to the San Juan Islands in the Gulf of Georgia and has engaged in a pistol fight with officers and posses, appears to be marooned on Shaw Island in the centre of the archipelago, and his capture or death is but a matter of hours.

Three Canadian police patrol boats and the U. S. revenue cutter Arcatraz are patrolling the island, while every small boat has been seized and put under guard. No boats are permitted to leave the island without examination. Posses are beating the brush for the fugitive and unable to secure food from the beach, while deputies are preventing him from securing food from the settlers.

Officers are of the opinion that hunger will force him into the open soon.

A SQUARE KNOCKER

And You Have the Best Booster in the World

While advertising and selling my remedies one Saturday in the town of Orillia, some years ago a gentleman interrupted me while addressing a crowd on the street corner. I was telling of the merits of my 3-day Corn Cure when this man called out, "You are a thief and a fraud and your Corn Cure is no good." I took it good naturedly and asked the gentleman if he had any evidence to prove his assertion, whereupon he put his fingers in his vest pocket, pulled out a box, which he had bought from me the week previous and said in a sarcastic manner "You bet I have, and I used it all, and the corn is there yet." I asked him if the toe was there, and he said, "Yes the toe's there," he said this very sarcastically. I said, "Well, if you have used that much Corn Cure in a week, I would like to see what it has done." I said "Come forward and take off your shoe and let me see." So he came forward, took off his shoe and sock, and I saw he had used the salve and found the corn between the little toes ready to lift out. So I put my fingers between his toes, lifted it out, and said, "There' is your corn." He was agreeably surprised, and begged my pardon for what he had said. The result was that I sold out all the Corn Cure I had that day. This Corn Cure takes a callous off as well as a corn, and is a painless cure. It is worth a dollar, but will be sent for 25c. to any address (post free) on receipt of price. Prof. R. L. Mulvetty, 384 Water street, Peterborough, Ont.

POSTOFFICE COMMISSION

New Australian Government Plans a Sweeping Reform

LONDON, July 16.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The new Australian Government is losing no time in effecting several changes in the various federal departments. According to the Sydney correspondent of The Morning Post, the postoffice is to be placed under the control of a business, non-political commission, a decision which is generally approved, particularly by the commercial community which has long complained of the serious inefficiency of the postal and telegraph departments.

Hon. Mr. Wynne announced yesterday that the hideous design of the postage stamp, representing the kangaroo must disappear. The new stamp will bear the King's head with marks symbolical of the six states

An exhaustive inquiry has been opened into the electoral procedure with the view to the avoidance of gross abuses practiced in the recent election.

The Ministry's decision to abolish the preference hitherto given to union workmen on commonwealth works, has aroused a storm of protests from union officials. Premier Cook, however, said that all the Government was doing was to lay down the principle of public control of the services of the commonwealth and to provide equality of opportunity for all citizens.

Churchill's Mother Divorced.

LONDON, July 16.—A decree of divorce was granted by the Divorce Court yesterday to Mrs. George Cornwallis-West, formerly Lady Randolph Spencer Churchill.

The grounds for the granting of the decree were statutory desertion and misconduct.

The hearing lasted only a few minutes.

No mention was made in court of the name of the woman alleged to have been co-respondent.

Attacked Invader of Home.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., July 16.—Wm. Anderson, a chauffeur, 38, surrendered himself to the police after telling of beating Stanley Hasseman, a former employe, whom he had attempted to mutilate. Anderson charges his victim, who is in a precarious condition, with ruining his home. The Andersons were married in Hamilton, Ont., seventeen years ago.

WAS STANLEY'S SON.

Dying Actor at Soo Admitted His Identity at the Last.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., July 16.—Death solved the mystery yesterday morning of the parentage of Jack Stanley, a member of the Cornell Price Stock Co., when a few minutes before he died in very humble lodgings here, he announced himself a son of Sir Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, and a graduate of Cambridge University and Heidleburg, qualifying in medicine and surgery at the latter institution.

He was aged 39 years and was married four years ago on the stage of the Odeon Theatre at Clarksburg, West Virginia, but though quizzed by his fellow players as to his identity he had remained silent, though he had impressed them with his evident learning and good breeding.

Two years ago while in a delirium he dropped remarks which partly informed his wife of his parentage, but he bound her when convalescent never to tell anyone. One year ago he journeyed to England but returned almost immediately. Death was due to consumption and came just as he was about to say something regarding "his little girl." He had traveled in Africa, India, Egypt and the Orient. There are no children.

LADY CLARK PASSES AWAY

Toronto, July 16.—Lady Clark, wife of Sir Mortimer Clark, a former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, died at the family residnece, Avenue Road, this morning after a prolonged illness, aged seventy-six. Before her marriage she was Helen Gordon, daughter of the late Robt. Gordon, of Peterborough.

PROBABILITIES

Fine and moderately warm. Thursday fresh south-east to south-west winds showery.

"I do so want to live. The world is so full of life and light and interest," wrote Doctor Dobbs in his [illegible] diary the other day.

BULGARIA NOT TO RESIST ROUMANIA.

QUEEN ELIZABETH OF ROUMANIA
KING CHARLES OF ROUMANIA

The Roumanian Minister to Bulgaria left his post after notifying the Bulgarian government that the Roumanian army had crossed the Bulgarian frontier. The declaration of war on Bulgaria is expected to assist in bringing an end to the carnage in the Balkans by forcing speedy action on the part of the Powers which have been invited to intervene. The object of King Charles of Roumania in assuming the part of a belligerent is to strengthen Roumania's claim to participate in the ultimate sharing out of territory in the Balkan Peninsula.

HEAVY SALE OF FRUIT AT TO-DAY'S MARKET

People, busy hunting up fruit for preserving made up the bulk of the marketers this morning. Of course there were lots of motherly looking women with the old fashioned baskets getting provisions for the family, but these usually wandered over to the baskets of cherries and crates of raspberries and in the end found themselves buying some.

Big red cherries, beauties too, were selling at a $1.35 a basket. Just picked, and they certainly looked it too, and one merely had to look and they bought. This being practically the last week, the sale of cherries this morning was very large. Some of the fruit dealers were selling at as low as $1.10 per basket

Raspberries were selling at 11 cents per box and were in demand at that. Next week there should be plenty of raspberries and the housekeepers may prepare for a busy week of preserving. Red currants sold for 10 cents a box.

Most of the buyers found spring lamb as hard to get as the proverbial hens teeth. One meat man reported that lamb was now costing nearly 6 cents more than it did in the spring.

New beets and carrots were fairly plentiful and were selling at five cents per bunch.

New potatoes are still selling at 40 cents a peck. Tomatoes were in evidence at 15 and 20 cents a pound.

BALKAN STATES REPORTED TO BE NEGOTIATING FOR PEACE

LONDON, July 16.—Reports through Berlin and Vienna say that the Bulgarian Premier, Dr. Daneff, has joined the meeting of the Servian and Greek Premiers at Nish for the purpose of discussing the conditions of peace. This important news has not yet been officially confirmed.

Official despatches from Athens confirm the announcement from Saloniki Monday that Greece is prepared to sign an armistice on condition that the frontier questions, the payment of indemnity by Bulgaria and guarantees for the welfare of the Greeks under Bulgarian rule, shall be settled on the battlefield.

Fighting continues, the Greek forces have occupied the town of Drama and according to Athens' advices the Bulgarians have abandoned the Kresna passes and are retreating towards Dubnitea, pursued by the Servians and Greeks.

Unconfirmed reports have reached the Armenian patriache at Constantinople of a massacre of Armenians at Rodosto, on the Sea of Marmora. Turkish forces, under Enver Bey, are supposed to have occupied Rodosto.

Turkey To Buy Ships.

ROME, July 16.—Reports have been in circulation that the Italian Government was about to turn over to Turkey several battleships in exchange for full possession of the Aegean Islands, which were provisionally occupied by Italy during the Libyan war. These reports, however, are denied in official quarters.

So far as can be learned the triple alliance is now in perfect accord on the suggestion of Italy that the islands be returned to Turkey in accordance with the provisions of the treaty of Lausanne. Germany at one time leaned towards their transference to Greece. Recent Balkan events, it is said, have influenced several of the powers unfavorably towards Greece and Servia.

Must Abandon Territory.

ATHENS, July 16.—An authoritative statement is made regarding the conditions of peace stipulated by Greece. These are that Bulgaria shall abandon all claims to the territory occupied by the allies, and that she shall pay an indemnity for the expenses of the new war and the damage done to the inhabitants of the towns and villages burned by the Bulgarians; that she shall guarantee the lives and property of Greek inhabitants and in Thrace especially, she shall permit them the free exercise of their religion.

Bulgarian Boats Disarmed.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 16.—A Bulgarian gunboat and several torpedo boats lying in the harbor of Sebastopol, where they had taken refuge from the Roumanian fleet, were disarmed yesterday by the Russian authorities, the 24 hours' grace allowed to belligerents having expired.

FISHER POLICY THE SAME.

Premier Cook of Australia Says Naval Scheme Will Go On.

LONDON, July 16.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In reply to a question in the House of Commons last week, Colonial Secretary Harcourt said he didn't know what the views of the present Australian Ministry were in matters of naval defence.

Premier Cook has therefore authorized a statement that there is no intention of changing the naval policy of their predecessors. The new Ministry approves in a general way of Sir Reginald Henderson's scheme and the Fisher policy.

He expressed the hope that the subject of defence would be treated on purely non-party lines.

Tribesmen Giving Trouble.

TETUAN, Morocco, July 16.—Fighting has been practically continuous in this vicinity for the past six days. On Friday a column of 12,000 Spanish troops marched into the surrounding region, where they met with a fierce reception from the Moors. After fighting all day and burning a few of the native huts, they returned to their original positions, having lost sixty killed and one hundred and fifty wounded.

The hostile tribes are increasing in strength and activity and are not giving any rest to the 15,000 Spanish troops stationed here.

Disinfect Every House.

NORTH BAY, July 16.—H. C. Parker, of Toronto's Health Department, who was loaned to the Provincial Board of Health for service in the townships east of North Bay, has completed the work of disinfecting every house in two townships were there were fifty-eight cases of smallpox without quarantine.

COL. HUGHES HAS NO APOLOGY FOR THE HALIFAX OFFICERS

Recent Dinner at Which Permanent Corps Men Smuggled in Liquor and Insulted Guests May Result in Resignations and Possibly Dismissals.

OTTAWA, July 16.—Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes stated very emphatically yesterday that in reference to stories that certain officers at Halifax will resign as a result of his remarks at the military banquet there, that anyone who did not like what he said were free to get out as soon as they pleased.

"I said nothing to offend any man who behaved himself at the dinner," stated the Minister of Militia, "and I have no apology to offer."

It is understood here that what the Minister thought was to be a dry banquet was turned into a wet one by the officers having whisky and wine brought in without the Minister's knowledge and that conditions became so bad that Sir Ian Hamilton was annoyed during his speech and Dr. A. H. MacKay, superintendent of education for Nova Scotia, could not be heard at all.

He briefly intimated, after reading the newspaper despatches yesterday, that if any officer wanted to resign because of offence at general criticisms as to the conduct and character of a small portion of the force, the Department would gladly have him resign at the "double-quick march." Col. Hughes says that strong drink and idleness will not be tolerated among any of his officers so long as he remains Minister of Militia. And if any officer does not like this doctrine he had better get out of the service.

According to the story as told here by those who were present at the banquet, Col. Hughes gave orders to the caterer that no liquor was to be brought into the room on the private orders of any guest. In spite of this, order the strategy of some officers enabled them to get around the orders. Waiters were subsidized to substitute whisky for ginger beer, and at one or two tables the effect became speedily apparent. Finally the attempts at concealment passed and both whisky and champagne were served openly.

When General Sir Ian Hamilton started to speak the interruptions were most disconcerting and their character thoroughly alcoholic.

The interruptions reached such a stage that Gen. Hamilton felt compelled to cut his remarks short, and finally sat down with his speech only half delivered.

Dr. MacKay stuck to it and finished his speech in spite of the hubbub.

Col. Hughes was indignant at the manner in which his distinguished guests were so rudely interrupted. He calmly told his hearers that there was no room in the Canadian militia or permanent force for men who were wastrels or barroom loafers.

It was observed that Col. Hughes was not interrupted during his remarks, which appeared to have a very sobering effect upon the convivial guests. Some of the officers, it is understood, will be saved the trouble of sending in resignations, as their cases, are being officially dealt with.

VILLIAN OF THE WORST TYPE

Magistrate's Censure on Man Who Forged Marriage Certificate

HAMILTON, Ont., July 16.—"McGinnis, you are one of the worst types of manhood I have met in my twenty-one years of experience on the bench. You're a dirty skunk, a villain of the worst type. You deliberately forged Mayor Allen's name to a marriage certificate, and then used it to betray this young girl, and you have ruined her for life. It is a lucky thing for you I am not sentencing you to-day. I shall take until to-morrow to cool off."

So said Magistrate Jelfs yesterday after convicting Archibald McGinnis of fraud and forgery.

McGinnis met Elizabeth Queen two years ago. She worked at service, and out of her paltry earnings gave him $90 to buy furniture, and also some money for clothes for himself. He caused her to live with him as his wife in a miserable shack for a week before she became suspicious and had him arrested.

Michigan Power Co. Fails.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., July 16.—The Michigan Lake Superior Power Co. has failed to pay $5,285,000 to the Real Estate Trust Co. of Philadelphia, as ordered last Friday by the U. S. court here, and a public sale of its property has been ordered by Master in Chancery Lawrence of Grand Rapids, Mich.

The trust company holds a first mortgage and claims that no payment has been made for ten years by the power company. The sale of the property will take place Aug. 26 in this city.

Cloudburst In Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 16.—A rainstorm has assumed the proportions of a cloudburst and swept over Minneapolis late yesterday, flooding basements and doing heavy damage. In some instances street cars were derailed by the water. According to the weather bureau 1.09 inches of rain fell in 35 minutes, eight-tenths of an inch came down in 18 minutes.

Much damage and inconvenience were caused by wind and rain in St. Paul and other nearby places during the day.

Two is company, but three is a multitude when father butts in.

ARRANGMENTS ALL COMPLETE FOR THE BIG PICNIC

The street railway management has donated their share to the big picnic by giving free transportation to the two bands and orchestra as well as to all of the committees wearing badges

The dancing pavillion will be under the management of E. V. Warne, Reg. Turner and Jos. Picard.

The Grand opera orchestra will be in attendance and the time for dancing will be extended to 10 p.m.

The committees visited the grounds and put up the tents and put on the finishing touches.

The executive officers have made it very plain that the picnic is the people's picnic and everybody is invited.

LABOR MARKET FLOODED.

Trades Congress Warns British Workmen To Keept Out.

OTTAWA, July 16.—That Great Britain is being flooded with a mass of misleading information by publicity bureaus, employers' associations, builders' exchanges and others in Canada, with the result that the labor market of this country is flooded to the extent that every important city has its quota of unemployed, and that the object of this special campaign to attract tradesmen and laborers is to lower wages and lengthen hours of work, are charges set forth in a strongly worded pamphlet just prepared by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

It is being sent broadcast to the unions of Britain and the continent as a warning to stem the tide of workmen being sent over here under what are alleged to be false pretences. The warning is signed by J. C. Watters, Ottawa, president of the congress; Fred. Bancroft, Toronto, vice-president, and C. M. Draper, Ottawa, secretary, and concludes by advising those in the old country who contemplate coming to Canada not to heed the "high wage bait" which is more than offset by the cost of living here.

Lighthouse Burned.

QUEBEC, July 16.—The Marine Department were notified that the Pillars lighthouse was burned down yesterday. The steamer Druid has gone down to put up a temporary light in its place.

LLOYD GEORGE AND EMERGENCY

When Mr. Lloyd George enters the ranks of the "alarmists" it ought to give some of our easy-going arcadian publicists some cause for reconsidering their attitude on the "emergency" proposal.

Lloyd George is anything but a jingo, and has always been regarded as a Little Englander. His testimony and concern in regard to the safety of Great Britain is, therefore, all the more striking and important.

"We cannot give in," he said, at a meeting in London the other day. "We cannot cease strengthening our forces, and we cannot weaken in the slightest degree the immunity we have against invasion."

The navy question in England has been kept out of party politics. When it comes to the safety of a nation or of an Empire, all party differences should be forgotten in a common endeavour to evolve the best means of defence.

Certain members of the Liberal party have been chuckling because nothing has happened between England and Germany to justify the Borden Government's "urgency" proposal. But these fail to see that two nations may come to a critical point in their relations with each other when peace and war depends on a very slender thread.

At such times the most friendly nations may be precipitated into a conflict which they would afterwards regret. The policy of Mr. Borden is a policy of a united Empire showing a solid front to the world. "Defence, not defiance," is the watch-word.

This is the note that is struck by Mr. Lloyd George, and one that ought to find an echo in every loyal British heart, whatever his local politics may be.

MISFITS

Professor Hugo Musterberg, of Harvard University, says that all industrial workers should be examined by systematic, psychological methods. These tests should be made in order to put the right man in the right place.

It is well known that certain persons are gifted by nature with the power of excelling their fellows in certain branches of human effort. Professor Musterberg says that the majority of "unskilled" workers would be "skilled" or even "expert" if they found occupations suited to them.

In every department of life there are a great many round pegs in square holes, misfits whose lives have been one continual falling down and getting up.

Most of the failures in life are due not to lack of ability but to the promiscuous way in which men find their employment. The vast majority do not choose their occupation at all, but are led or forced into certain uncongenial and unprofitable grooves by necessity, or by the perversity of circumstance.

There is no disgrace in being a misfit, a suit of clothes that has got on the wrong man may be an unsightly and uncomfortable thing, but but it is neither the fault of the suit nor the fault of the man, it is merely a misfit, or more correctly a misappropriation, a misfortune.

A ready-made suit is never a success, it saggs or pinches at some point. Men are not made to a standard as any tailor will tell you.

What we need then is a psychological tailor who will take the measurement of our boys and fit them with their proper occupation, and if Professor Musterberg can do this he will save many a life from perpetual hum-drum futility.

There is a work for every man to do and a place where he will just fit in if he can but find it. But like the "ugly duckling" a great many beautiful swans are doomed to spend their lives among a community of unappreciative and cackling ducks.

Dr. Gustave A. Eisengraeber, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I have used your Castoria repeatedly in my practice with good results, and can recommend it as an excellent, mild and harmless remedy for children."

Dr. E. J. Dennis, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used and prescribed your Castoria in my sanitarium and outside practice for a number of years, and find it to be an excellent remedy for children."

Dr. S. A. Buchanan, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria in the case of my own baby and find it pleasant to take, and have obtained excellent results from its use."

Dr. J. E. Simpson, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have used your Castoria in cases of colic in children and have found it the best medicine of its kind on the market."

Dr. L. R. Robinson, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria certainly has merit. Is not its age, its continued use by mothers through all these years, and the many attempts to imitate it, sufficient recommendation? What can a physician add? Leave it to the mothers."

Dr. Edwin F. Pardee, of New York City, says: "For several years I have recommended your Castoria and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

Dr. N. B. Sizer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what ingredients are put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use."

OMEMEE NEWS

Wednesday, July 16.

The morning of the glorious 12th of July, found the faithful and their followers, early in readiness for the trip to Port Hope. Two special trains carried large contingents to the lake shore town where the combined march was held. There was a beneficient rainfall which marred a little the pleasure of the outing.

During Wednesday's storm lightning struck the residence of Mr. Wm. Brown who lives just north of the town, setting fire to the roof. The blaze was extinguished before much damage was done.

Mr. Hart was the guest last week of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Elliott of Kingston.

Unfortunately the big rain storm on Wednesday afternoon reduced the attendance at the garden party held Christ church on the lawn adjoining the rectory, but there was a good crowd present to enjoy the toothsome viands of the supper and the enormous amount of fun provided by the Toronto entertainer with his coterie of blockheads.

Mr. Clifford Mulligan, accompanied by a gentleman friend of Toronto, is spending his holidays with his parents.

Mr. John Boyd is not in vigorous health. He is with his own at the old home on the boundary. His many friends hope for his recovery.

Rev. Fathres O'Brien of Peterborough and McGuire of Downeyville, were in town on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Connal of Emily South, are receiving many hearty congratulations because of the visit of the stork to their home last week. The present was a pretty nice daughter.

Mr. Stanley Lowes of Peterborough was in town on Monday on business.

Mr. J. Albert Wilson, of the Bond department of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago, with his wife, are on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Wilson. Bert is another Omemee boy that has made good. He was in the parade at Port Hope Saturday.

Prof. Laird, of Queen's, Kingston, was the preacher in the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening. His scripture readings were from Isaiah 43 and 52 chaps., and the 9th chap. of Matthew's gospel. The text was Mark 1-15. The subject was the "Kingdom of Heaven," which the speaker, in beautiful language pictured, from the time of the Israelities to the present followed in chronological sequence, introducing many parallel texts of scripture, the explanation of which showed the trend of events. The sermon which was a masterly effort of rhetoric and logic, was listened to with much appreciation and benefit. After the close the sermon, Prof. Laird conveyed to the congregation the result of an appeal to the assembly from the ruling of the Peterborough Presbytery.

Miss Hazel Brooks returned to Lindsay on Monday evening after spending the day at her home here.

Rev. D. H. Currie attended a a meeting of the Presbytery at Peterborough on Tuesday.

Mr. J. L. Best of Emily South was a visitor to Omemee on Saturday.

Long Married Couple.

James Forsythe and his wife, who reside on the Dundas road, near Hamilton have celebrated the 65th anniversary of their wedding.

Mr. Forsythe was born in the house where he and his wife reside, and in the same home 65 years ago they were married. The bride was born in Montreal 91 years ago, and was a daughter of the late Gen. Forbes. Her husband is 88 years old.

The Hymn He Didn't Want.

A young man who was to be married in church to a Miss Way, after a courtship of four years, privately requested the choir not to open the service by singing, "This is the Way I long have sought."

Hen Mothers Kittens.

A cat in Devon which gave birth to four kittens in a hen's nest has been driven away by the hen, which refuses to give up possession of the young.

Cookery Points

The Appetizing Cucumber.

For the housewife who is not familiar with the possibilities of cooking cucumbers a real culinary treat is in store. So different is the flavor of these much maligned vegetables when they are properly cooked from their flavor when raw that they really afford an answer to the oft expressed wish for something new under the sun in the line of vegetables. One of the most delicious ways of transforming the raw fruit to a digestible and flavorsome dish is in the form of timbales.

To make these timbales you will need cooked cucumber pulp, which may be procured by putting cucumbers which have been previously peeled and boiled through a meat chopper. Use a cupful of this pulp to one-half cupful of breadcrumbs and one-half cupful of thick cream sauce. Add a tablespoonful of lemon juice, the beaten yolks of two eggs and a little onion juice. When these ingredients have been well mixed fold in the beaten whites of the two eggs. Bake in timbale molds in hot water and serve hot.

The Art of Baking Cucumbers.

For an appetizing vegetable to serve with the meat course split good sized cucumbers lengthwise, leaving the skins on. Then scoop out the middle pulp, leaving a strong shell. Chop the pulp, add beaten eggs—one egg is enough for six cucumbers—a cupful of breadcrumbs and seasoning to taste. Fill the shells, rounding the filling off at the top, and bake in a moderate oven for three-quarters of an hour.

To make scalloped cucumbers peel and slice six cucumbers. Then arrange them in a buttered baking dish as if scalloping any other vegetable, first a layer of breadcrumbs and then a layer of cucumbers, and so on until the dish is filled. Between the layers flavor with grated onion and lemon, a little butter, paprika, celery salt, salt and pepper. Bake an hour.

For stuffed cucumbers peel and split as many good sized cucumbers as desired. Scrape out the pulp and fill with a mixture of chicken stock and crumbs flavored to taste. Bake in a baking dish in a half inch of chicken stock. They should be baked till tender and basted often with the stock on the bottom of the dish. The remaining stock when the cucumbers are done should be thickened with a teaspoonful of cornstarch and served as a gravy with the vegetables.

Two Tempting Hot Weather Entrees.

To make deviled cucumbers begin by peeling and slicing them as when preparing raw cucumbers. Place them in ice water for an hour and then drain them. Dip them in flour seasoned with salt, celery salt, pepper or any desired seasoning, and fry in butter and serve with the following sauce:

To a cup of stewed, strained tomatoes add one-half teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of sugar, grated lemon skin, the juice of half a lemon and a tablespoonful of olive oil. Cook this till well mixed and serve hot.

Cucumbers on toast are a delicious dish. The vegetables should be cut in half inch slices and stewed in water till tender, but not broken. Meanwhile boil a cupful of cream with a tablespoonful of butter, salt and pepper to taste. Drain the cucumbers, heat them in the cream sauce and serve on toast.

A Hot Sauce of Cucumbers.

To make cucumber ketchup take three large cucumbers, peel and grate them. Add a tablespoonful of salt and eleven teaspoonfuls of black pepper. Add a handful of horseradish, one large grated onion and a pint of strong vinegar. Bottle and cork loosely.

Orange Charlotte.

One-third box of gelatin, one-third cupful of cold water, one-third cupful of boiling water, a cup of sugar, juice of a lemon, a cup of orange juice and pulp, whites of three eggs. Soak the gelatin in cold water until soft, add the boiling water, sugar and lemon juice and a little of the grated rind. Cool in a pan of ice water and when it begins to harden beat in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Serve with a custard made with the yolks of the egg, a pint of milk, three heaping tablespoonfuls of sugar and a little salt. Flavor to taste or you can cut it up in pieces and serve with whipped cream.

Green Peas.

Put the desired quantity of young peas in a stewpan with butter, allowing eight ounces to every quart of peas; a bunch of parsley, a few small onions and a little salt. Moisten with broth and cook slowly until tender. Now stir in the beaten yolks of two eggs and a teaspoonful of sugar, not allowing to boil after the eggs are added. Serve on a hot dish.

ROWAN'S SLUGGERS BEAT HAMS AGAIN

Hamilton, Ont., July 16.—The Kolts gained still another lap in their dash towards the bottom of the Canadian League ladder yesterday afternoon, they dropped the second game of the series to Peterborough by a score of 6 to 3. It was a listless contest from the first to the final inning, the locals performing like a bunch of confectioners on dress parade. Two or three times they filled the bases, only to die there, when the succeeding batters fanned in rotation. Schuyler started on the mound for Hamilton, but he had nothing but a cream-puff lob, and in the third inning he was jumped on with such a vehemence that Manager Lee waved him back to the club house. Donohue, who took up the pitching burden, kept the hits scattered for the remainder of the game, but the damage had been done. Sterling pitched good ball for the visitors. Killilea's home run was the feature of the fray.

The following is the correct standing;—

SPORTING GOSSIP

Finally we have one sport writer in Brantford admitting that the "Lowly Petes" are not so lowly as some people thought.

Chubby Coose's latest stunt was to work behind the bat.

McNeal was due to join the Maple Leafs to-day.

Bob Sterling had three hits yesterday. One was a three-bagger. He also accepted five chances.

Davy Rowan has a greatly improved ball club to handle at the present time, one which can be counted upon to make a bid for a first division berth. Trout, Hilliard, Brant and Rowan are a hard hitting lot, while Thompson makes a great improvement to the infield. Rowan expects to do business with Hilliard this year, and should. The big outfielder is a real hard hitter and has plenty of speed.—Hamilton Spectator.

The 16th day of July finds the Hamilton club in sixth place in the Canaidan league race. This is the lowest the Kolts have been at this time of the year since the Canadian league was organized.

YOUNG GIRL IN HANDCUFFS ABUSED BY ATTENDANT

Sad Scene is Enacted on Eastbound Train as Told by an Eye-witness

A well known commercial traveller who is a guest at the Oriental Hotel to-day, is the authority for the following story which tells of cruel treatment toward a young girl, by a man whose conduct warrants an investigation.

The incident was first drawn to the notice of the Review's informant early this morning, at the Union Station, Toronto, when a young girl was brought into the coach he occupied.

She wore handcuffs.

Her attendants were a man and woman, who presumably were deportation officers.

The girl presented a pitiable appearance. She sobbed aloud and appeared to be heart-broken. She was poorly clad and instantly attracted the attention of passengers nearby.

It appears that the young girl came from Glasgow, Scotland last August. At Toronto she secured employment with the T. Eaton Co., and inquiries made subsequent to the recommendations she presented, fully justified the statements made. She obtained a boarding house and gave a good account of herself generally.

Some days ago, she took ill and was taken to Grace Hospital, suffering from rheumatic fever.

Yesterday, the woman called at the hospital and the girl was given to understand that she was to be taken away. This morning the girl was taken from the hospital, handcuffs were placed on her wrists and it is said, she was dragged through the station and placed in one of the coaches of an east bound G. T. R. train.

Her male attendant was a big, burly fellow, who said he was a brain specialist. He was without hose and was partly intoxicated. In his grip—which the commercial traveller opened, as the owner could not—was found a bottle of whiskey. He had two drinks.

As the journey proceeded, he tantalized and aggravated the heart-broken girl, being seemingly well pleased that he could add to her misery. She bemoaned the fact that she had left her home in Scotland with plenty of money to satisfy her needs and was now returning in handcuffs.

Several of the passengers were mystified as to why such services as his were necessary. The girl appeared quite rational and gave evidence of having been well educated.

However, the fact remains that the man was intoxicated; the girl wore handcuffs and she was subjected to abuse and her condition was such that passengers found it difficult to restrain tears.

Such is the story as told to the Review by the commercial traveller, who left the train at Port Hope and came to the city this morning

FIRST AID FOR POLICE

At the next meeting of the Police Commissioners, Police Chief Thompson will recommend that officers of the force be required to pass an examination in first aid before they can qualify for first class pay.

Chief Thompson is firmly of the opinion that a police officer should have intimate knowledge of giving first aid treatment in case of accident and illness and he believes that the police force would grow largely in usefulness with every member having this knowledge.

It might be stated that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company have under appointment a high salaried instructor whose duty it is to teach the employees of the company the methods of giving first aid to the injured.

BIG ATTENDANCE PROMISED FOR PEOPLE'S PICNIC

Interest in the People's Picnic has increased during the past few days and the indications are that T.A.S. Park will be the scene of a very large gathering.

Two steamers will give a half hour service from the Street Car Wharf commencing at 9 a.m.

The Entertainment Committee has accomplished good work and there will be fun for young and old as the program is carried out. Arrangements have been made to supply hot and cold water for those who will take their meals on the grounds. There will also be a supply of refreshments.

Two bands and an orchestra will furnish plenty of music for dancing and entertainment and when it is all over, it is expected that this first annual picnic will have attained the success which it well merits.

Concert Was Enjoyed

The vocal and band selections given by the Temple Band last night in Victoria Park, were enjoyed by a large gathering.

From the Provincial nursery in Norfolk 350,000 plants were sent out for experimental purposes in 1912, and the nursery now includes 980,000 plants and about 500,000 seedlings.

Horticultural Societies, which are aided by grants from the Ontario Department of Agriculture, now total 78, with a membership of over 12,000.

are not matters of every-day purchase, and therefore even the independently wealthy like to take the greatest care of them. Yet sometimes the functions of a single evening will ruin their appearance temporarily. We can remedy this, however, by our system of careful cleaning, and in any case we can dye the garment and make it like a new one.

CAUTION!

If people would realize the value of their Eyes they would hesitate before entrusting their care to amateurs, and inexperienced so called Opticians.

The fact that some people have been careless in this regard has been brought to our attention time and again by patients who have come to us wearing glasses that were doing their Eyes more harm than good.

There is no reason why people should suffer with ill-fitted glasses when there is one of the most up-to-date Optical Parlors in Ontario right in this city, conducted by Mr. A. A. Fowler, Eyesight Specialist, whose ten years of successful Optical Work in this city is a sufficient guarantee of honest service.

Remember all our Lenses are ground from "PEBLO" glass, the finest quality manufactured, for which we have obtained the exclusive right on account of the large quantity we use each year.

Labor and Capital "Wars" To Be Solved.

Mr. Samuel Gompers

J. PHILIP BIRD.

All the "wars" that have been fought between labor and capital, all the efforts to secure by lobbying legislation which would profit either labor or capital, are to be investigated by Congress. Samuel Gompers and John Mitchell, and George Pope, president, and J. P. Bird, general manager, of the National Manufacturers, have been subpoenaed. One Senator said the quest might reach the McNamara dynamiting case and many of the great strikes.

FAVORS LOCAL GOVERNMENT BOARD TO CURB DEBENTURES

Ex-Mayor of Winnipeg at Gathering of City Fathers at Saskatoon Thinks Body is Needed to Authorize Municipal Financing Schemes—Edmonton Delegate Strong for Real Estate Increment Act

Canadian Press Despatch.

SASKATOON, SASK., July 17.—The convention of Canadian municipalities concluded business on Wednesday with the election of Fred P. Blight Mayor of Halifax, as President. Mayor Graham of London, Vice-President and W. D. Lighthall of Montreal, secretary-treasurer. The convention meet next year at Sherbrooke.

SASKATOON, July 17.—The feature of the municipalities convention yesterday was an address by ex-Mayor W. Sanford Evans of Winnipeg on municipal financing, in which he advocated the establishment of a local government board to have the same powers as the local government boards of Great Britain, so that when municipal debentures were to be floated on the world's money market the official approval of the board would be given for proposed expeditures under such loan. A general discussion followed.

Ald. May of Edmonton presented a radical resolution which, after reciting how the increase of urban land values directly followed heavy expenditures in municipal improvements went on to advocate a real estate increment tax for the benefit of the municipality. This provoked considerable discussion and eventually the debate was adjourned until to-day.

An important resolution was adopted, on motion of Commissioner McNeill of North Battleford, calling on the Federal and Provincial Governments to pass legislation protecting the credit of municipalities from misleading or slanderous attacks in the press or otherwise, and providing that where attacks are made on the credit of a municipality these must be specific and over the signature of their authors.

Controller Church of Toronto, in offering a resolution in favor of interprovincial highways, said that what was wanted was to get the Federal Government to spend twenty-five million dollars on highways throughout the Dominion, building an interprovincial road, and also improving provincial highways. Some western delegates thought that railways were of more use to the farmer than an interprovincial highway which catered mainly to the touring automobile. The discussion was proceeding at adjournment.

DEPUTY GRAND MASTER ELECTED; FREE MASONS

Canadian Press Despatch.

OTTAWA, July 17.—S. A. Luke, of Ottawa, has been elected Deputy Grand Master of Masons on first ballot.

OTTAWA, July 17.—What the delegates to the 58th annual convention of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario, which opened in session here yesterday, regard as one of the best reports on the condition of Masonry, was given at yesterday afternoon's session by Col. W. N. Ponton of Belleville, chairman of the committee on the condition of Masonry.

The report set forth the fundamental principles of true Masonry, stating that it is "as a handmaid to religion and an incentive to manly and virile virtues, a great school of character and a great laboratory wherein is molded and developed the triple alliance of head, heart and will."

Col. Ponton reminded the delegates that no good Mason should give way to profanity, and they should refrain absolutely from taking the name of God in vain. He informed the convention that reports from the various districts in Ontario and all over Canada, too, show that the craft is progressing everywhere and that the principles of the order are being carried out by the members.

The convention will meet again today, when the election of officers will be held.

W. D. Macpherson, M.P.P., of Toronto, succeeds Aubrey White of Toronto as grand master, and R. L. Gunn of Hamilton is re-elected secretary.

Jumped To Escape Police.

OTTAWA, July 17—James Baldwin and Edward Wendel, who stated that they came from New York to get jobs on the Ottawa ball team, and who were about to be charged with flimflamming in police court, jumped out of an upper window of the city police station, a distance of 20 feet, and made a dash for liberty. They were recaptured within five minutes.

Another Professor as Diplomat.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Dr. Paul S. Meinsch, professor of political economy in the University of Wisconsin, has been selected for U. S. Minister to China. His name will be sent to the Senate probably to-morrow.

Boy Hit By Auto.

TORONTO, July 17.—Failing to notice the approach of an automobile, driven by John Lowden, 130 Balsam avenue, William McEwen of Winnifred avenue, ten years old, was knocked down at the corner of Queen and Jones avenue yesterday afternoon and severely injured about the head.

The boy was taken in the auto to Dr. East's office at 1,011 East Queen street, and attended by Dr. Ray, after which he was taken to his home.

Chinese Revolt Spreads.

SHANGHAI, July 17.—The revolt along the Yangtse-Kiang is spreading and there is fighting along the Tien Tsin-Pukow Railway.

Proclamations are being circulated here setting forth that a punitive expedition has been undertaken for the purpose of bringing President Yuan Shi Kai to justice for the murder of Gen. Sung Chiao-Jen, the former Minister of Education, who was killed at Shanghai last March for violating the constitution.

GUILTY BUT IS ACQUITTED

Jury Gives Prisoner, Who Shot Man in Drunken Row Good Advice

KANSAS CITY, July 17.—A jury in the Criminal Court here yesterday acquitted Wm. F. McNeil, charged with second degree murder although the 12 men, according to the foreman, were satisfied of the prisoner's guilt. McNeil was charged with shooting Lee Self to death in a quarrel at a "can party."

When the jury came in Foreman Arthur Brown asked permission to speak to the prisoner.

"McNeil," Brown said, "we are all satisfied you are guilty, but we are going to give you another chance. We want you to go home and make a man of yourself. Your mother is getting old and needs you. You are to cut out 'can parties.' Don't you think you can make a man of yourself?"

"Yes, sir," McNeil said weakly.

McNeil's gray-haired mother wept aloud.

Fisheries of B. C. Valuable.

WINNIPEG, July 17.—The fisheries of British Columbia last year were even more valuable than those of Nova Scotia. Great developments of the fishing industry in western Canada are expected, said Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who arrived in the city yesterday morning on his way to Vancouver, to greet the New Zealand on her arrival here.

Divorce Secured By Fraud.

CHICAGO, July 17.—Declaring that the divorce of William Guggenheim, millionaire mining man, from Grace Brown Guggenheim-Wahl, in 1901, was obtained by fraud, collusion and criminal conspiracy, Circuit Court judges yesterday instructed the states attorney to proceed in criminal action against the alleged parties to the fraud.

IS ALLOWED TO RETIRE

One Officer Resigns as Result of Halifax Affair

OTTAWA, July 17.—One officer has been promptly "allowed to retire" from connection with the defence forces of Canada as a result of Hon. Col. Hughes' investigation in regard to the bibulous tendencies of a few of the Minister's guests at the now famous Halifax Garrison banquet of Friday last. It is understood that several other officers have expressed regrets for indulging in liquor at the Minister's "dry canteen" banquet.

The incident will probably be now quietly closed. Col. Hughes believes there is little further necessity for rubbing in the moral of his strictures in regard to intemperance and idleness on the part of a small percentage of the officers who draw pay from the Militia Department.

Halifax, July 17.—None of the men who ordered liquor during the dinner at Halifax probably remembered that they were really at a private dinner. It is the usual custom at all public dinners in Halifax for anyone who desides to pay for it to order any extra wines desired, and the officers who ordered wine probably never thought that they were not at a public function, but were really guests of an individual. It is understood that an investigation is under way to determine exactly who these men are, and it is thought that probably the officers concerned will apologize to Col. Sam Hughes.

BIGGER FORCE NEEDED.

Churchill Hopes To Enlarge Navy on Foreign Stations.

LONDON, July 17.—(C.A.P. Cable.) An important statement regarding the ships which have been completed since Jan. 1, 1911, for the British and German navies was made in the House of Commons last night by the First Lord of the Admiralty, Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill. The statement shows the growth of the two fleets to be as follows:

Great Britain—Battleships, 9; battle cruisers, 4; light-cruisers, 10; destroyers, 51.

Germany — Battleships, 7; battle cruisers, 4; light cruisers, 7; destroyers, 40.

Mr. Churchill explained that the British cruisers do not include the vessels belonging to the royal Australian navy.

In reply to a question, put by Mr. Middlemore, who asked whether the First Lord was aware of the fact that in 1904 the number of such vessels on foreign stations was 53, Mr. Churchill replied: "I am very much aware of it, and I hope to be able to somewhat increase the number of ships that we maintain on foreign stations." Next year, he said, he would have some proposals to make in that connection.

SHE SOLD HER GIRL FOR $30

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 17.—Accused of buying pretty Anna Gorzo, 16 years old, from her mother for $30 and then shipping her to Phillipsburg, N.J., Henry Herzog, 34, and Paul Boy, 28, were arrested yesterday. Mrs. Margaret Gorzo asserts that the men, who boarded at her home, so poisoned her mind against her daughter that she was willing to sell the girl. Later she was sorry and went to the police.

PLOT DEATH OF PRINCE.

Little Olaf of Norway Is In Danger of Assassination.

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, July 17.—Mysterious stories of an attempt to kill ten-year-old Crown Prince Olaf have caused a great commotion. An armed man was found hiding a week ago in the gardens where little Olaf plays. The man was arrested, but the fact was hushed up.

It is reported that when the Queen heard of it she was prostrated with anxiety and sobbed for hours, repeatedly saying that the royal family must leave the country, and that a bill now before the Storthing virtually puts a premium on Olaf's head. That bill provides that if the King and Queen die without a male heir Norway shall become a republic.

The anti-monarchy agitation is making great headway here, and the outlook for the royal family is anything but hopeful.

BULGARIAN TROOPS SACKED AND BURNED TOWN OF SERES; ATROCITIES ARE CONFIRMED

Sofia is Objective Point of Servian, Greek and Roumanian Armies, and Statement is Made That Peace Will be Signed There—Another Story of a Massacree Comes From Doiran

SALONIKI, July 17.—In connection with the arrival of a high Roumanian officer at the Greek headquarters yesterday, it is reported that the Greek, Servian and Roumanian armies will all march to Sofia, where peace will be signed.

Full confirmation of the reported sacking and burning of the Macedonian town of Seres by the fleeing Bulgarian troops, and of the crucifixion, hacking to death or burning alive by them of many of the inhabitants, has been sent to the Austro-Hungarian Government by Consul-General August Kral of Salonika.

Three-fourths of the formerly flourishing town of about 30,000 inhabitants is a mass of smoking ruins, says Consul-General Kral, who has just returned here from Seres, where he thoroughly investigated the situation. He had been ordered to inquire into the plundering and burning of the Austrian Vice-Consulate there, and the carrying off of Vice-Consul George C. Zlako by the marauding Bulgarians.

Another horrifying story of massacre reaches here yesterday from Doiran, a town 40 miles to the northwest of Salenika.

Mussulmans there have made a written declaration, countersigned by three local Bulgarian priests, stating that the Bulgarians slaughtered 30,000 Musselmans who had sought refuge in Doiran from the surrounding districts.

Surrounded by Enemies.

LONDON, July 17.—"The situation is desperate," wires a correspondent in Sofia. "This young state, which during the 35 years of its independent existence has made such astonishing progress, is now threatened with complete ruin. Bulgaria's success, both in peace and war, has been the cause of her disaster. Surrounded by enemies on all sides who watched her progress with increasing jealousy, Bulgaria's position has always been more critical than her statesmen have been willing to allow.

"Whatever may be done, those who know the sterling qualities of the Bulgarian nation will refuse to believe that its sun has already set. This virile, laborious, persevering race will eventually attain unity even if Europe once more consents to its dismemberment. Should this historical crime again be committed Macedonia will once more become the scene of a prolonged racial struggle and will remain a danger to the peace of Europe."

U.S. MANUFACTURERS MOVING TO CANADA UNDER NEW TARIFF

Enormous Amount of American Capital Now Invested in the Dominion

THERE ARE AT PRESENT 209 Companies Here

High Rates of Canadian Tariff Factor Influencing Manufactures in States

Washington, July 16.—Representative Oscar W. Underwood, of Alabama, chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means, and principal author of the Democratic Tariff Bill, declined to-day to comment on the declaration of Governor Foss, of Massachusetts, that the terms of the Underwood measure were such that American manufacturers would be driven to establish plants in Canada order to keep alive.

"I do not care to be interviewed," he said.

Government reports bear out the statement of Governor Foss, that all over the United States the tendency among the principal manufacturing interests is toward the establishment of plants in Canada, and that the movement has been going on for many years. It is estimated at the Buruau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce that American capital invested in Canada now aggregates $500,000,000.

BIG INCREASE IN INVESTMENTS
